A new device is on the market to beautify the elbows. It consists of a strap of silk gauze which holds a pad in place so that it covers the darkened and rough place one is apt to get on the elbow. The pad is saturated with bleaching cream and worn at night until the original softness and smoothness of the flesh has

GOOD ADVICE ABOUT CULTURE OF GLADIOLI

Deep, Rich Loamy Soil is Preferred—Get Good Varieties.

Soil.—They prefer a deep, well drained, fairly rich, loamy soil, but will do well in almost any good garden soil. Do not dig in fresh strawy manure at planting time. If any manure is used, it should be well rotted, and should be dug in so as not to come in direct contact with the corms or bulbs. Manure is best dug in the fall previous to planting. The ground should be dug over again just before planting the corms.

Planting.—The corms (bulbs) may be planted any time in May or early June. Flowering corms should not be less than one and a half inches in diameter. Plant the corms from three to four inches deep and about six inches apart. They may be set either in rows about two feet or three feet apart, or in groups convenient for staking and cultivating. The small cormels (small bulbs) should be planted about two inches deep with the old corms, or separately.

Cutting Blooms.—Cut those with fairly long stems when two or three of the bottom flowers have opened and put in water as soon as cut. It about half an inch of the stem is cut off every day or two, the spikes will continue in flower for a long time after being cut. The old spikes of flowers not cut off should be cut when they are through flowering before the seed forms on them.

Storing for winter. — Gladioli corms should be dug, and stored over winter. Dig the corms before severe frosts, about the middle of October. Cut off the tops a few ins. above the ground, dig the corms, and put them in a shed or room away from the frost for about two weeks to dry, then put them in cool fairly dry room or cellar, where they will not freeze, temperature about 40 deg. F. In very damp cellars they may be hung up in baskets, or tied in bunches and hung up to the joists. Before planting the large corms for the next season's bloom, remove the remains of tops and the old corms at the bottom.

The small corms (or cormels) should also be removed. The small plants from the cormels should be dug and stored during winter much in the same way as for the large flowering corms. Save cormels (small bulbs) from the best varieties. It will take three or four years to grow flowering corms from the small cormels to flower well.

The following are a few of the many varieties grown that will make a good collection for an amateur's garden:

Afterglow, America, Augusta, Blue Jay, Cardinal, Contrast, Dawn, Rochester White, Kunderdi Glory, Princeps, Pesco, Panama, La Luna Mrs. Frank Pendleton, Niagara, Sulphur King, Schreben, Scribo, Wm. Falconer.

Collections of hybrid Gladioli will often give good results and are cheaper than named varieties if a large number is required. This list does not include many of the quite new varities. Fairly good collections can be bought for from one to two dollars per dozen, and even cheaper. It pays to buy good varieties for a start, as they can be increased rapidly from the small cormels.

Note.—When cutting flower spikes for decorative purposes do not cut the stem too low down. Leave two or three leaves below where they are cut to assist the corm to grow and develop. Cutting off all the foliage prevents the corm from developing. —The late Wm. Hunt, O. A. College, Guelph.

RUB RHEUMATISM OR SORE ACHING JOINTS

St. Jacobs Oil stops any pain, and rheumatism is pain only.

Not one case in fifty requires internal treatment. Stop drugging! Rub soothing, penetrating St. Jacob's Oil right, into your sore, stiff, aching joints, and relief comes instantly. St. Jacob's Oil is a harmless rheumatism liniment which never disappoints and cannot burn the skin.

FOR SPORTS WEAR

MARRIAGE A LA MODE

The custom of throwing shoes at weddings goes back to an old Egyptian and Hebrew custom, when the sandal was the symbol of an exchange of property. In ancient times it was customary for the bride's father to deliver her shoes to the bridegroom to indicate that ownership had passed into his hands.

The custom of throwing rice came from China. It was supposed to indicate prosperity.

IN TANGO COLOR

SOFTER COLORS

The use of softer colors has been started in Paris. Particularly the figured materials show less contrast and much more blending of colors.

EVENING FROCK

A sapphire blue velvet evening gown with a drapery of silver cloth is decorated with sapphire and pale green beads. The sleeves are elbow length.

SKIRTS FOR SPRING

It is rumored that skirts for spring will be from two and one-half to five yards about the hem. Basque and princess effects are said to be in store for us.

SUEDE CAPE

A smart cape which reaches to the hem of very long skirt is made of suede, trimmed about the collar with monkey fur.

VELVET BLOUSES

Velvet blouses, decorated with cut steel beads, with short sleeves and round necks, are most effective when worn with a suit to give the appearance of a costume.

MIDDY BLOUSES

New variations of the middy blouse show decorations of Czecho-slovakian embroidery and gay cross-stitch patterns. Another style is banded about the hips and has a collar and cuffs of checked material.

VELVET TEA GOWNS.

Velvet is a popular material for tea gowns this season, particularly in the autumn tints such as leaf reds, dull purples and the yellow-bronze shades. The fabric is so decorative that a jeweled girdle or unusual sash arrangement is the only trimming necessary.

MATERIALS FOR SPRING.

Crepes and ratines are said to be the leaders in cotton goods for spring. The present outlook is that prices in all cotton materials will be higher this coming spring than last.

FASHION VEILS.

Heavily embroidered borders are noticed on some of the newest veils. Browns and tans are the most popular shades and are frequently seen in combination.

FASHIONABLE FROCK.

Many narrow bands of metallic ribbons in many colors make a band about 18 inches deep on a bouffante party frock of white taffeta. The round neckline and the armholes are bound with bias bands of the material. No sleeves.

VEILED METAL CLOTH.

Black silk lace mounted on silver cloth gives the effect of an elaborate silver brocade in a very smart dinner gown designed for a matron. Metallic cloth is frequently veiled with lace to produce a softer effect.

TRIMMED WITH SEAL.

An attractive suit of mustard-colored duvetyn is made with a very narrow skirt and a flaring coat. The coat is trimmed with many inch bands of seal fur and seal buttons.

IN RED VELVET.

A red velvet gown is given a festive appearance by the addition of clusters of grapes made of silver cloth. The drapery is caught up on one side and a one-sided train offsets it one the other.

MONOGRAMS

The wearer's monogram is the distinctive touch to many of the winter frocks and blouses. In the ready-to-wear shops the monogram is frequently unintelligible, taking the form of a Chinese design or a tantalizing hieroglyphic.

A Thought

Wherefore, comfort yourselves together ,and edify one another, even aslo as ye do.I Thessalonians 5:11.

I' but a cog in life's vast wheel
That daily makes the same old trip
Yet what joy it is to feel
That but for me the wheel might slip!
'Tis something, after all, to jog
Along, and be a fist-class cog!
—Anonymous.

MOIRE POPULAR

Moire grows in favor as the long skirts and bouffant effects continue in favor. White moire frocks trimmed with silver or gold lace are seen at many of the smartest social gatherings.

DON'T YOU EAT IF THE THOUGHT BURDENSOME

"Our hospitals, physicians and dentists would lose a lot of business if people at only sensible quantities of food."

This does not mean "counting every calorie" although if we used the calorie calculations as they were intended, to measure merely the quantity of energy in a food, instead of taking them as the final word in diet, paying no attention to the selection and variety, we should be adding another real help to planning good diets.

After establishing the reasonable quantities of food needed by each individual, let that individual stick to his ration, stopping before the feeling of "fullness" is reached, allowing sufficient time to elapse between meals. If more food is hurled down upon a stomach that is laboring busily to take care of half digested meal there is bound to be trouble. The poor stomach may not rebel openly at first, for a healthy stomach is what is popularly known as a "good sport" and willing to work hard. But wait until the day when you wake up with a headache, when everything is out of sorts. Do you connect these things with that Chinese dinner you attended on Tuesday or the Italian supper that was such a frolic on Wednesday, not to mention Mrs. Wellington's tea where you ate those heavenly cakes and ices just before an early dinner? Ten chances to one, no!

That condition is a sign that you need a five mile tramp, perhaps, or maybe a long sleep, according to your age and occupation. But no matter what your age and occupation it is a sign your stomach needs rest!

ORCHID AND SILVER

A charming simple frock, appropriate for a young girl, is of orchid taffeta, finished about the hem and shaped armholes with silver ribbon. A corsage of flowers, made of silver ribbon, is worn directly in front.

Natural Bran Keeps You Fit

Because it keeps you regular

Tillson's Health Bran is the most efficient because it is just the natural Bran from the cleanest and plumpest wheat—simply sterilized.

BRAN is a fine daily food for young and old alike, not merely because it is invaluable as a harmless but effective laxative but because the dishes it makes are most delicious and appetizing.

Try home-baked gems, muffins, cookies, biscuits, raisin bread, nut bread, plain bread. They are easy to make, and your family will like them.

Try a spoonful or two of Tillson's Health Bran in your dish of cereals, in your soup, or with fruit or preserves. Get the habit of taking Tillson's in some form every day. You will like it immensely and you will notice the difference it makes to your bodily fitness.

THIS TIME NEXT YEAR

You're facing a problem so difficult
That it almost turns your brain;
From every angle you've studied it
Over and over again.
It's getting your nerve, it's taking your sleep,
There seems no solution near—
It is likely you won't remember it
This time next year.

There's a crisis impending, so threatening.
You shrink from it in dismay;
To avert it—that is your only thought—
To turn it the other way.
Before its might you tremble and quake.
Your soul is sickened with fear;
But remember; 'twill be a thing long past
This time next year.

You're bearing a load too great for your strength,
So heavy your weight of woe,
That your tearful eyes can behold no light,
As stumbling onward you go.
There's a word of solace I'd whisper to you,
A wee little word of cheer;
You may find it hard your grief to recall
This time next year.

BETTER SERVICE FOR PUBLIC IS POLICY OF NATIONAL EXPRESS MEN.

Canadian National Out to Provide Better Service to People of Canada.

BELLEVILLE, Nov. 30.—"Better service to the public" was the theme of the address and the round-table conference at the meeting of the Canadian National Express Company's agents at the Belleville Chamber of Commerce here. Thirty representatives of the company were present, most of them agents in the Belleville sub-division which extends from Toronto to Montreal, Toronto to Ottawa, Toronto north to Orillia, including all branch lines and the Trenton to Maynouth and Trenton to Picton lines.

This was the first meeting of the agents since the amalgamation of the Canadian National and the Canadian Express Companies was affected and so history was made.

Ways and means were discussed as to how to improve the service which the Canadian National can give the public.

General Superintendent W. E. Norman of Toronto, Supt. A. J. Seaton, Montreal and A. F. Stillman, assistant superintendent, Belleville, addressed the gathering, their speeches being followed by discussion.

Prior to the conference the visiting agents of the company dined at the Chamber of Commerce, the use of headquarters having been put at their service by the directors of the Chamber. At the luncheon Manager J. O. Herity, represented the Chamber. Mr. John McGie of this city presided at the piano and Mr. W. F. Skitch, Peterborough, agent sang a solo.

Mr. Norman expressed the feeling of the visitors when he told that nowhere had he ever had a more hearty reception than at Belleville, and that they would carry away the best impressions of this city.

PREPARATIONS FOR WINTER USE OF AUTO

The Engine Should Not be Raced to Heat It Up.

Preparations for use of the automobile during cold weather should include the following precautions:

A mixture of denatured alcohol and water should go into the cooling system. About one quart of alcohol to a gallon of water will stand up well down to zero temperature.

The carburetor should be cleaned out and adjusted for winter driving.

Keep the storage battery fully charged.

Change oil every 500 miles of driving.

Keep radiator front covered.

Disconnecting the fan belt is dangerous, as it may lead to overheating, especially on long trips.

Frozen radiator should not be thawed out by the engine. Instead, hot water or warming by some other means should be resorted to until the water flows.

Engine should not be raced to heat it up. That puts too great a strain on it.

To keep the engine warm over night, apply an electric heater to the intake manifold, or wrap asbestos around it.

AVOID AUTO "RIDE BEGGARS"

WASHINGTON, Nov. 29.- When you see a stranger asking for a lift keep on going. Take no chances.

This warning is issued to motorists of the country by Walter D. Meals, president of the National Motorists' Association. It refers in no way to acquaintances, says Meals, but to that class which he terms "ride beggars."

"The atitude of those seeking rides," he says, is not usually one of gratitude. Frequently they seem to get the notion that the driver is under some sort of obligation to them."

Many motorists who have turned down "ride beggars" have heard indecent and abusive language flung after them. Complaints have come to the automobile clubs of the N. M. A. and investigations have been made into the conditions. The opinions that have been reached are summed up by Meals.

"It is often dangerous to give rides to strangers, particularly at night," he concludes. "There is the danger of robbery. There is the danger of becoming liable in case of accident or injury to the person given a ride.

"The practice is bad. It encourages children to solicit rides. The danger of accidents is not negligible.

"Two classes particularly have made themselevs obnoxious. They are the boys who want rides just for the excitement and fun of the thing. Then there are the strangers who have acquired the ride begging habit.

"The driver of an automobile is under no obligation to give anyone a ride. In emergencies, like street car tie-ups, motorists have shown themselves generous and public spirited. They need not defend themselves for exercising care and scruple in a matter so personally concerning them in times when ordinary circumstances exist."

Raybestos Company Athletic Club will be a starter in the City Hockey League of the coming season. Representatives of the club made this announcement at a meeting of the League held last night at the Chamber of Commerce. The C.G.E. team will be back again, and the Lakefield Hockey Club wish to enter the series. This leaves a berth to be filled, and applications will be received from hockey clubs who may wish to enter the League.

The meeting last night was largely attended, and several important problems were considered. One of these has to do with Intermediate and Junior O.H.A. players taking part in the City League games. This question is one that has been discussed from various angles for the past two hockey seasons, by players and fans alike.

Frank Convery, secretary of the local hockey executive, gave the meeting the views of the committee, and it was suggested that co-operation by the two hockey bodies might benefit hockey generally. The new executive of the City League will consider the question.

Another matter to be dealt with is that of a junior or juvenile division of the League. There are a number of clubs ready to enter teams in a series for junior players.

A committee will interview the Rink owners in regard to terms for the season, and re-organization of the League will take place at an early date.

TRAPPER BROKE THROUGH THE ICE.

PARRY SOUND, Nov. 30.—(Canadian Press).—The first victim from breaking through the ice this winter was Robert Lyons, former manager of Wood Products of this town. Mr. Lyons had been working with Ryder Brothers near Inholmes about twenty five miles from here and hada few traps set on thhe North Sequin River. Returnng from visiting his traps he had attempted to cross the river on the ice which broke and let him through being heavily clothed and wearing rubber knee boots rendered his efforts to regain a footing and that he had made a prolonged fight to save his life was evident yesterday morning when friends went to the spot to recover his body. He had broken the ice about four rods before succumbing to the cold and exhaustion. He was of Scotch origin and leaves a widow and one daughter.

NO LIQUOR AT GAME.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 30. — (Canadian Press.)—John T. Davis, prohibition director for Pennsylvania, yesterday characterized the reports that liquor had been freely indulged in at the Army-Navy football game last Saturday as "pure bunk."

Director Davis declared his men who were at the game reported that they had seen no liquor and had not even observed a single person taking a drink from a pocket flask. Concerning the Navy ball after the game Director Davis said he had received no official information.

AT THE GRAND.

MUTT AND JEFF.

Those inimitable and superfine jesters and comics, Mutt and Jeff, have a new stage vehicle this season which they will exhibit to their million of friends and admirers at the Grand theatre Saturday next, December 2nd with the usual matiness. It is entitled, "Mutt and Jeff's Honeymoon" and tells the story of two dillusioned husbands who seek solace and peace far from the maddening taunts and nagging of their better halves. In this instance Little Jeff acts as chief advisor and counsel with side-splitting and riotous results. The play is in two acts and six scenes and employs a competent cast.

PANTAGES VAUDEVILLE AND SUPER PICTURES

On Monday next will start a short season of refined vaudeville and super special pictures at the popular Grand Opera House. A complete change of program will be offered every Monday and Thursday, with daily matinees at bargain prices.

The opening program will bring undoubtedly the greatest dramatic actor on the stage today in John Barrymore in the super-special production, "Sherlock Holmes" adapted from William Gillett's masterpiece, by Sir Conan Doyle.

This super-special production which is in 9 reels has just finished a phenominal showing at Pantages Theatre, Toronto, after a run of over 4 months in New York City, at the largest Theatre in the moving picture world, The Capitol. For excitement, thrills, mystery and action, this wonderful fiction story, known all over the world, has never been equalled in the motion picture industry, and in the famous character of Sherlock Holmes, Mr. John Barrymore does by far the finest bit of acting ever given to the silver sheet.

The several high-class vaudeville acts to be offered with each photo-drama, are the best acts procurable from Pantages Theatre, Toronto. Two and three acts will be given with each change of program.

Several short subjects in moving pictures will round out, the greatest evening entertainment ever offered to the theatre goers of Peterboro' and at prices far below London, Toronto, Hamilton, or an city in Ontario today.

LOU SKUCE CARTOONIST— ALSO VIOLA DANA IN CAVEMAN PICTURE.

Lou Skuce, opens three days engagement at the Capitol Theatre in a novelty act which will prove more interesting to persons who like the cartoonist's work in the Toronto Sunday World and in numerous other periodicals, as well as those who have been fortunate enough to have seen him before in vaudeville or motion picture houses.

This act is a different sort of thing altogether from anything else Mr. Skuce has done, in Toronto some years ago, he presented a sketch of rapid cartoon making, but now there are new phases altogether to his work, several hundred feet of film showing the process of drawing, finishing and reproducing the likeness which are published as "Impressions" will be used, and before the finish of the act, you wil be more familiar with "Lou" than ever, and more convinced of his ability.

As told in some short sketches of his life, Lou Skuce is a veteran newspaper man, a sport, an athlete an artist and a Canadian his country may well be proud of. Seats will be in extraordinary demand for Mr. Skuce's engagement, and you should get them early so as not to miss the whole show.

Viola Dana in "They Like 'Em Rough," her newest vehicle, opened to-day at the Capitol Theatre, where an appreciative audience gave every sign of complete satisfaction with both the star and her picture.

The story is a most amusing one, with a touch of adventure and well flavored with thrills. It concerns one Katherine Trowbridge, a wilful little minx who only needed to be told to do a thing to be consumed with a determination not to do it. Authority in any guise she could not tolerate. So when her uncle and aunt with whom she lives, conceive a plot to marry her off to a certain young man and Katherine discovers the scheme, she immediately decides that that anybody in the world is preferable to that particular young man. "I'll go out and marry the first man I meet," she says. And she does. Whereupon complications pile up thick and fast and the result is a swift moving picture which cannot fail to please the most fastidious picture fan.

AT THE ROYAL.

"SMILIN' THROUGH" GIVES NORMA BIG OPPORTUNITY

Norma Talmadge's latest First National starring vehicle, "Smilin' Through", the Royal Theatre to-day for an engagement of three days.

Advance reports state that this is the most ambitious production yet made by Norma Talmadge. It is an adaption of Allen Langdon Martin's stage hit of the same name, in which Jane Cowl appeared on the speaking stage.

Appearing opposite Miss Talmadge are two leading men, Wyndham Standing and Harrison Ford, and a splendid supporting cast, including Alec B. Francis, Glenn Hunter, Grace Griswold, Mariam Battista and Eugene Lockhart.

The production deals with the romance of beautiful young Kathleen, who is left in the charge of John Carteret following the death of her Aunt Monyeen. Monyeen was fatally wounded by a jealous suitor on the day of her wedding to Carteret. When Carteret learns that Kathleen is in love with the son of the man who killed the bride he interrupts the romance of the young people and the absorbing plot gathers dramatic momentum.

Norma, ever a great emotional actress, is said to have taken advantage of the great dramatic opportunity presented her.

Some scientists maintain that the equator is not an exact circle, but they have not proved their case, and in any event, it is agreed that the deviation, if there is one, is small.

CONACHER GIVES UP WINTER SPORT FOR BUSINESS VENTURE

Has Definitely Decided Not to Play Hockey at All This Winter

MANY PRO. OFFERS.

Lionel Conacher, ranked as the greatest Rugby player who ever graced a Canadian gridiron, and who has been sought by a number of professional hockey teams to make the jump to the monied ranks to play the winter pastime, is through with hockey, even of the amateur kind. "Conny" said yesterday that he is determined to make his new business project go and will give up entire participation in hockey this winter to give all his attention to business. Connacher realizes that all the praise he gets for his great athletic prowress, will never get him anywhere, and that he must buckle down to hard work. He cannot do it and take part in sport, because he is not the kind to play on a team on his reputation. He is a faithful attendant at practices, and it is these that take most of his time.

Conacher was being counted on to play hockey with the Arognauts in the O.H.A. senior race this winter. Some time ago he wanted to announce his retirement, but felt that as the Argos counted on him he could hardly drop out. But he has considered the matter thoroughly and he said yesterday he will not play this winter. Another thing, "Conny" resented the remarks made last winter around the Arena and decided that he would not play on the Arena ice this winter. He had felt like perhaps playing for the North Toronto intermediates, but now has given up the idea of playing hockey of any kind. The big fellow will be missed, but the public will give him credit for paying first attention to business, and wish him as much success there as he has had in athletics. Yesterday he turned down a rich offer from Leo Dandurand of Canadiens, to play pro hockey.

OTTAWA CLUB HAS SIGNED 3 PLAYERS

Cyril Denenny, Third in List of Goal-Getters, Will Play With the Ottawas Again.

OTTAWA, Nov. 30.—(Canadian Press)—The Ottawa Hockey Club announced Tuesday the signing of three more members of last year's team. They are: Harry Broadbent, right wing, who led the N.H.L. in scoring; Cyril Denenny, left wing, who was third highest goal getter and Frank Clancy, who was regarded last winter as the most promising youngster in the circuit. All three returned their signed contracts and announced they would be out to practice with the Senators when the first workout is called. Broadbent replaced Darragh when the latter retired last season and played sensational hockey. He led the league with 32 goals and 14 assists to his credit.

The Ottawas have now signed all of last year's players, except Frank Boucher, who was recalled by the St. Patricks; Billy Bell, who reverted to Canadiens and Morley Bruce, whom they passed up. They have Benedict, Gerard, Boucher and Clancy for the defence, and Nighbor, Broadbent and Denenny for th line with the prospects that they will also induce Jack Darragh to get back into uniform. In this event they will have one of the strongest teams that has ever wore the red, white and black. They have made offers to Ed. Gorman, the pick of last year's amateur talent in the Ottawa and district amateur hockey association and will land the big fellow if they need him. They expect to get down to practice about the latter part of this week, but if the weather continues mild will go to Grimsby or Hamilton to train.

NINE FATALITIES.

AUGUSTA, Maine. November 30.—In the big game hunting season in Maine, which closes to-night, nine lives have been lost, seven less than last year. Four persons were mistaken for deer, four were accidentally shot, and one was drowned.

ESKIMOS ON WAY TO MEET QUEEN'S.

EDMONTON, Nov. 30.—Canadian Press)—Bound for Kingston, Ont., the stamping ground of the eastern Canada Rugby champions, Queens University, the Edmonton Eskimos left here over the Canadian National Tuesday morning in search of the Dominion gridiron title.

The party, twenty five strong, in charge of Manager Lieberman and Coach "Deacon" White embarked on their journey in fine fettle. Nineteen players are making the trip with the team and all are looking forward to next Saturday afternoon when they tangle with the Queens machine.

CROWD EXPECTED AT QUEEN'S GAME

Tickets Were Placed on Sale Yesterday and Were Practically Sold Out By Noon.

KINGSTON, Nov. 30. Canadian Press. — The present indications are that despite the lateness of the season there will be a very large crowd at the Queens-Eskimos game here on Saturday. The sale of tickets opened yesterday morning and at noon there were only three rows left of the 2000 grand stand seats. The extra seating put in for the Queens-Varsity game has not been disturbed and an attendance of over 7,00 can be seated.

In respect to the sale of the tickets a number of Kingstonians complained that after standing in line for a full hour yesterday morning they had been able to get seats only away back in the back of the grand stand. It was pointed out to them that the sale of tickets is in the hands of the Canadian Rugby Football Union and that Queen's are in no way responsible or to be blamed for the disposition of the seats.

One of the biggest contingents from any outside city will come from Ottawa, 300 arriving by excursion from the capital at noon on Saturday.

Absolute secrecy prevails at the Harty arena where Queen's players are quartered, but it is understood that the team is rapidly developing into fine form and will be at the top notch on Saturday. They had a heavy practice yesterday and will have another to-day with a light workout on Friday.

POPULAR GOLF PRO TO LEAVE ROSEDALE CLUB

TORONTO, Nov. 30.—(Canadian Press)—A familiar face will be missing from the Rosedale Golf Club next season. Frank P. Freeman, who has been the club's professional for the past twelve years, has resigned to take a position elsewhere. His successor has not yet been appointed and there is much speculation in golfing circles about the appointment.

The name of Eric Bannister, professional of the Winnipeg Golf Club, has been mentioned. He is an English player who has been in Canada about a couple of year. His style was favorably commented upon in the open championship at the Toronto Golf Club last year. The favorable impression he then made was justified by his performance in the open championship over the St. Bruno course near Montreal last July, when he tied with Albert Murray of the Country Club for third place.

E. C. Bowyer, manager and secretary of the Rosedale Golf Club, is now in England on personal business but it is reported that he will take the opportunity to look around for a suitable successor to Frank Freeman.

CONSPIRACY AGAINST SENEGALESE BOXER.

PARIS, Nov. 30. — (Canadian Press)—A champion for Battling Siki has appeared in the person of M. Diagne, a Senegalese member of the Chamber of Deputies. In a long statement of L'Auto, Deputy Diagne charges that there has long been a movment afoot to get rid of Siki and that his defeat of Carpntier brought matters to a head.

The deputy said that when the budget was discussed in the Chamber he would expose the successive hostile acts of the French Boxing Federation and that he would ask the deputies to suppress any steps by the Government in subvention thereto.

Why Do Elevens Rarely Use Forward Pass Until Defeat is Staring Them in the Face

Billy Evans Tells How the Forward Pass of the U. S. Game Can Be Used to the Best Advantage — It is a Dangerous Play if it is Used at the Wrong Time—Should Be Used From Various Formations.

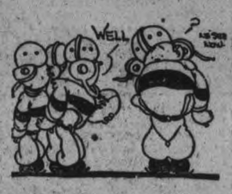
By BILLY EVANS

Why does practically every football team wait until defeat stares it in the face before opening up? With a majority of elevens the forward pass is merely a weapon to use as a last resort. If defeat seems certain thry to stave it off with the forward pass.

Notre Dame is one of the few teams that uses the pass more than merely a weapon. With Coach Rockne's teams the forward pass is one of his very best bets on the offense.

Sitting next to me in the press box at the Harvard-Princeton game was Earl Sprackling one of the greatest quarterbacks the country has ever known. During his days at Brown, it was the exception for any one to pick an All-American team that failed to include Sprackling.

During the progress of the Harvard-Princeton game certain situations arose that called upon the quarterback for snap judgment. Often two or three possibilities presented themselves as a solution. Before the play would be pulled I would invariably say to Sprackling.



"Well, Earl, what play would you call if you were out there directing the team?"

Sprackling seldom made a mistake of football judgment when he was a star." After Buell left the game, the Harvard quarters who succeeded him didn't always do what Sprackling figured was the best play. I might add that the Harvard quarters were wrong, not Sprackling.

Several times the Princeton quarter didn't do just as Earl figured he would. On one occasion, after Snively had thrown a long forward pass that was grounded, Sprackling remarked:

"That is a dangerous play. I am bit surprised Princeton is using it.

Seems to me the half must be nearly over. It would be much wiser to get off a few line plays or end runs in slow fashion and use up as much time as possible, since they are out in the lead.

"There is always a chance that one of those long forward passes will be intercepted and someone run for a touchdown."

Sprackling had scarcely finished when Snively cut loose another long forward pass that was intercepted by a Harvard man, who for a time seemed on his way to a touchdown. A few seconds later the whistle blew ending the half.

"Why doesn't Harvard open up?" Late in the second period Sprackling kept saying that time. It seemed that Harvard must do so if it was to win. Yet Harvard refrained from opening up until the game was practically over and almost certain defeat was staring the Crimson in the face.

"That is the big trouble with the open game," said Sprackling "Coaches spend hours drilling the men in various formations and seldom use them. Instead of making the pass the big threat of their system, most coaches use it merely as the pinch play."

"I believe if some coach would develop the pass from various formations to a high degree, and then constantly use such plays throughout the game that his team would run roughshod over its opponents.

"Open play, featuring the forward pass and other bits of strategy, have made football popular, yet the coaches are not getting the possibilities out of the play or giving the spectators the kind of a game they like."

I certainly agreed with everything Sprackling said. Often I have wondered why different teams with a well developed open game insisted on playing straight football. The risky features of the play seem to hold most coaches in check. They don't want to gamble with the possibilities pro and con.

BIG ODDS FAVOR QUEENS TO WIN

EDMONTON, Nov. 30.—Here is what Deacon White has to say about the Eskimos' chances, as summarized in a signed statement he issued just before the team left for Kingston.

"What are the Eskimos' chances against Queen's? is the question that is constantly fired at me, as though I was in a position to know. To express a candid opinion in the vernacular of the betting fraternity the odds are about five to one against the Eskimos. We are at the most but a shade better team than the one that represented Edmonton last year in the Dominion finals, and every one knows the outcome of that game—23 to 0 in favor of the Argos.

"Last year, the Edmonton public insisted on sending us after Dominion honors, when I was opposed to it, knowing that we would be likely to be outclassed because of our inexperience and the well-known fact that the athletes that come to the top in a community of over 500,000 people are apt to be better in quality and greater in quantity than those that rise to the surface in a city of 60,000. It was a considerable feat to win the championship of Western Canada, and honor enough for one season for a city that does not encourage the Canadian game of rugby I am told that there are 27 rugby teams in the city of Calgary—there are only two here

"This year, having once again won the championship of western Canada, the Eskimos are in favor of trying conclusions with the east, on the theory that they should not do worse than last year, and may redeem themselves. One thing is certain, and that is that they will do their best.

"In Queen's University they will meet a lightning fast team, high trained, with a back-field of experienced players, a pair of high-class outside wings, a middle wing of stellar calibre and the whole twelve educated in the game by the expert brains of the east.

"To overcome this team is a big contract, and the Eskimos know it, but they do not feel like passing up the opportunity of trying it this year. You never can tell till you try."

DINSMORE GREATEST FIND OF THE SEASON.

It is generally agreed that the find of the 1922 rugby season is young Charlie Dinsmore of the Argonauts. This lad did not turn out with the Scullers at the early practices but was with Toronto Canoe Club. The Argo management were told that no mistake would be made in giving Dinsmore a trail. They were reluctant at first because they figured he could hardly make a regular place in his first season in senior and did not desire to keep him on the bench when he could be playing Junior with T.T.C. However, one look at him in a game was enough to Jack O'Connor and the quarter-back worries for the season were over. Dinsmore played with Oakwood Collegiate last year.

ROSENBERG-O'DOWD BOUT.

NEW YORK, November 30. Canadian Press. — Dave Rosenberg, of Brooklyn, designated by the New York State Athletic Commission as the world's middle weight champion, will box Mike O'Dowd of St. Paul this Thanksgiving afternoon in a 15-round contest in Brooklyn. O'Dowd formerly held the world's middleweight title.

O.H.A. MAY CLAMP LID ON PRO. COACH

Will Not Be Allowed to Sit in Players' Box or Near Players Nor to Direct Play.

The amendments for discussion at the O.H.A. annual meeting at the Temple Building, Saturday morning are summed up as follows:

1.—No member of the Executive will be eligible to play on any O.H.A. team.

2.—To allow Juniors to play in as many senior and intermediate games as they wish without prejudicing their Junior standing.

3.—That the Sub-Committee need not necessarily be all three from Toronto.

4.—To bar professional coaches and trainers from players' boxes or near them and to prohibit them from directing or interfering with the play or players under penalty of the loss of one player for five minutes for every infraction. The home team must provide an officer to see to the inforcement. Under no circumstances will trainers or team followers be allowed on the ice during a match even to assist an injured player.

5.—To allow the executive to appoint a Judge of Play to assist the referee in all matches instead of in finals and semi-finals only.

6.—To permit the goal-keeper to stop the puck in any position or manner he wishes in his own territory.

O.H.A. TO DISCUSS SWEEPING CHANGES

Important Amendments to Be Dealt With in Toronto on Saturday.

Following are the more important amendments which will be discussed at the annual meeting of the Ontario Hockey Association in Toronto on Saturday next:

Present Clause—No member of the Executive shall be eligible to serve on the Executive or on any committee in connection with any protest or question involving, directly or indirectly, the club he represents; nor shall any member of the Executive be eligible to vote on any question raised by or affecting the club he repreesnts.

Proposed Amendment—Add the following to the clause: "Nor shall any member of the Executive be eligible to play on any O.H.A. team."

Present Clause—No man shall be eligible to play in the intermediate series who has played in more than one O.H.A. senior or Intercollegiate scheduled match in the same season; and no man shall be eligible to play in the junior series who has played in more than on intermediate or senior scheduled match in that season. A junior certificate used in intermediate or senior matches, or an intermediate certificate used in senior matches, shall have the date and occasion of such use written across the face by the Referee, and two such uses shall cancel such certificate for the series for which is was issued. Each senior club shall register six bona fide players, none of whom can play in the intermediate series in the current season.

Proposed Amendment—Strike out the clause: "And no man shall be eligible to play in the junior series who has played in more than one intermediate or senior schedule match in that season. A junior certificate used in intermediate or senior matches, or."

Present Clause—To at any time appoint three of its members resident in Toronto and representatives of different clubs, to be a sub-committee to take control of all matches; to fix dates, and generally to act in the name of the Executive in all matters appertaining to said matches and that the word "Executive", "Secretary", or 'Secretary of the Association" be interpreted to mean "Sub-committee appointed by the Executive for the control of the matches," or "Secretary of sub-committee", as the context may require.

To the Rules of Competition

Present Clause—All matches shall be played on covered ice of not less than 60 feet in width and 160 feet long, well lighted, free from obstructions, having sides and ends properly boarded. The association strongly urges that the ice surface be not less than 70 to 75 feet wide and 170 t 175 feet long as a minimum size. The ideal hockey rink is 185 by 85 ice surface. Each rink must be provided with a timekeeper's and penalty box centrally located and furnished with a bell or gong, and suitable for accommodation for 18 persons, including timekeepers, penalized players, spare players and the managers and coaches of each team, and under no circumstances will the referee permit unauthorized persons to remain in such box. The home team will be held responsible for the proper carrying out of this rule.

Proposed Amendment—After the word "box" in the second to last line strike out the clause and substitute the following: "professional coaches and trainers are included in the list of authorized persons and are not permitted to sit in or near the penalty box, or to direct or interfere with the play or players in any manner during a match, under penalty of the loss of one player for five minutes to the side so offending for every infraction of this rule, and the home team shall provide an officer to enable the referee to enforce the rule. In case a player is injured he is to be assisted off the ice by the other players and under no circumstances shall trainers or any other team followers be allowed on the ice during a match."

To the Rules of the Game.

Present Clause (Goal)— goal is placed in the middle of each goal line, composed of official goal nets supported by two upright posts, four feet in height, placed six feet apart and at least five feet from the end of the ice. The goal posts shall be firmly fixed. In the event of a goal post or net being displaced or broken, the referee shall blow his whistle and the game shall not proceed until the post or net is repaired. It shall be the duty of the referee before each match to measure the goals. A dark, distinguishing line shall be drawn on the ice between the centre of each goal post. The home team shall be held responsible for the strict observance of this rule, and the referee shall not permit any game to be started until this rule is strictly complied with.

Proposed Amendment—After the word "post" in the thirteenth line, add the following: "and extending one foot on each side. From the centre of this line and fronting the goal a half-circle shall be drawn in the ice with a radius of four feet. This arc shall be the goaltender's territory. No player shall come in bodily contact with the goaltender while the latter is within his own territory, and any goal scored by any player while the goaltender is being charged shall not be counted."

Present Clause (Referee)—There shall be only one referee for a match except in the finals and semi-finals, when the Executive may appoint an assistant in addition to the regular referee, and in no case shall he belong to either of the connecting clubs, and he may be an amateur or a professional. He is to enforce the rules, adjudicate upon disputes or cases unprovided for by rules, appoint or remove goal umpires; control the timekeepers, keep the score, announcing each goal as scored, and at the conclusion of the match declare the result. The puck shall be considered in play until the referee stops the game, which he may do at any time, by sounding a whistle or ringing a bell. His decision shall be final, and there shall be no appeal.

Proposed Amendment — There shall be only one referee for a match, but the Executive may appoint an assistant, to be known as the Judge of Play in addition to the regular referee, and in no case shall he belong to either of the competing clubs, and he may be an amateur of professional. They are to enforce the rules, adjudicate upon disputes or cases unprovided for by rules, appoint or remove goal umpires; control the timekeepers, keep the score announcing each goal as scored, and at the conclusion of the match declare the result. The puck shall be considered in play until the referee stops the game, which he may do at any time, by sounding a whistle or ringing a bell. The referee's decision shall be no appeal.

Present Clause (Goalkeeper)—The goalkeeper must not during play, lie, sit or kneel upon the ice; he may stop the puck with his hand, but shall not throw or hold it. He may wear pads, but must not wear a garment such as would give him undue assistance in keeping goal. The referee must rule off the ice, for any time in his discretion, a player who, in the opinion of the referee, has offended against this rule.

Proposed Amendment—The goalkeeper may stop the puck in any position or manner he wishes, in his own territory, but shall not throw or hold it, and no other player of the defending side, other than the goalkeeper, shall during the play, lie, sit kneel or slide along the ice in the goalkeeper's territory. The goalkeeper may wear pads and a face protector, but must not wear a garment such as would give him undue assistance in keeping goal. The referee must rule off the ice for at least one minute a goalkeeper who infringes this rule, and must rule off the ice, for at least two minutes, any other player on his side who has offended against this rule.

Sir Henry Thornton Says His First Duty is to Assure That End.

NEW YORK, Nov. 30.— (Canadian Press.)— The headquarters of the Canadian National Railways will be in the place from which the national lines can be most economicallyand most efficiently operated."

Sir Henry Thornton, recently appointed head of Canadan National Railways, in an interview with a representative of the Canadian Press last night, declared this was the only statemenet it was possible for him to make at the present time regarding the much discussed question of the probable location of the head office of the Dominion's big transportation system.

"My first duty will be to get a thorough knowledge of the lines I am to administer," said Sir Henry. "During the next six months I shall probably have to spend 75 per cent of my time on the road. I shall have to familiarize myself with the various parts of the system and problems which are to be faced in each. I am going to operate these lines in the interests of people of Canada."

PETERBOROUGH RAIL LOSS IS $85,490.00.

TORONTO, November 30. — Estimating a total operating deficit to the end of 1922 of $207,168 on the Central Ontario Hydro-Electric System, purchased from the Seymour interests in 1916 by the Hearst Government, W. D. Bonthrom of the firm of Price, Waterhouse & Co, auditors, went into minute statistical details concerning the system's operation before the Gregory Hydro Commission at the Parliament Buildings.

Mr. Bonthrom placed to the loss acount of the Hydro a net loss of $85,490 by the Peterborough Street Railway.

An important detail in the mass of figures which were gone through at the afternoon session was the evidence concerning apportionment of the eight million-odd dollars cost between the apparent assets and the intangible assets. The cost was apportioned on the Hydro books, Mr. Bonthrom said, with $5,487,659 charged as replacement value of the system, and $2,677,342 charged to intangible assets, which he understood constituted undeveloped power locations and potential earnings.

Had Option on Purchase.

In numerous cases, Mr. Bonthrom said, the eastern Ontario municipalities had the option of purchasing their local systems from the government should they desire to do so, and in eight cases the municipalitie would not have been obligated to pay for the "intangibles." He liste them as Belleville, Bowmanville, Deseronto, Lindsay, Millbrook, Newcastle, Orono and Port Hope. Asked how the government was to recover for its expenditure on the "intangibles," Mr. Bonthrom said that he did not see any way.

Conditions in North Bay.

When the commission resumed, Mayor John Ferguson of North Bay again pressed his municipality's complaint of power shortage, and said Northerners were anxious that the Chaudiere Falls system should be developed, giving capacity of 12,000 horse power. R. T. Jeffrey, for the Hydro, said that the Bingham Chute was being developed at North Bay, which would provide 4,000 horse power, all that North Bay could use. Chairman Gregory observed and Mayor Ferguson rather agreed, that the Government could not reasonably be asked to develop now the North country's possible ultimate power requirements.

For $8,350,000, said Mr. Bonthrom in his evidence, the government really got two systems: First, the Nipissing system, which supplies North Bay and there other small towns; and the Central Ontario system, which supplies 15 municipalities and included gas works at Cobourg, Oshawa, Peterboro, Napanee, and waterworks at Cobourg and Trenton; the Peterboro Electric Railway and the Campbellford Pulp Mill.

Mr. Bonthrom detailed the municipalities, showing their valuation of assets, tangible and intangible. Belleville, one of the largest, with a replacement cost of $118,000, had $35,000 of intangible assets. The Peterboro Railway paid interest charges on $51,726 of "intangibles."

Loss on Special Contracts.

Delving into the list of special contracts entered into with various concerns, Mr. Bonthrom said they showed a total loss up to October 31 1921, of $169,000. These contracts were made by the Hydro commission with the exception of one with the Canada Cement on which he loss had been $72,000. Most the contracts showed losses while some showed that fair profits had been made. The operating deficit of the system, he said, was apparently met by advances from the government.

Pulp Mill Profitable.

In evidence concerning the various properties acquired, Mr. Bonthrom said that on the pulp mill there had been a profit of $42,000 up to 1922; on the gas works a loss of $104,674. These concerns he admitted were getting into a more favorable condition. On water plants there had been a net loss of $27,783, and the Peterboro Railway had lost $85,490.

Whereas the original cost of the Central Ontario system had been $8,350,000, that cost had been subsequently increased by capital expenditure of $3,394,602 up to the end of 1921, and (estimated) $610,000 for 1922. In addition, he said, there has been some sums diverted by the Hydro, which, although there had been no authority for it so far as he knew, had all been returned to the Province, and properly acounted in the Hydro books.

A FIRE ORIGINATED FROM PEAT ASHES.

At 6.30 this morning the local fire brigade were summoned to the home of John H. Renwick, 567 Aylmer street, to a fire which originated from hot ashes in the cellar. It is said that hot peat and peat ashes were put in wooden boxes, which eventually ignited, the flames leaping high and setting fire to one rafter of the ceiling. Fortunately dense smoke issuing from the basement awoke the occupants, who sent in the alarm before the fire had gained any great headway.

The Fire Chief warns citizens again that wooden boxes should never be used for hot ashes. Metal containers are obtainable and are cheaper in the long run.

BIG CONVENTION ENDS WITH GREAT ENTHUSIASM.

Entire Gathering Pledged to Unremittingly Fight Against the Liquor Traffic.

TORONTO, Nov. 30—(Canadian Press.)— Amid scenes of enthusiasm wherein the entire gathering solemnly pledged themselves to unremitting efforts in fight against the liquor traffic, international convention of world league against alcohol came a dramatic close in Massey Hall here last night. One by one representatives of lands from overseas came and in earnest and some time halting words said their adieux. It was a fitting climax to the conference which has brought together men and women from all parts of the world, and from which they leave with better understanding of and sympathy in each other's problems.

Rev. Dr. Robert B. Hammond, Sydney, Australia, assigned as the greatest hindrance to the progress of prohibition "dwarf men" within the movement. Small persons, servile politicans and religious bigots were doing incalcuable damage. They had no interest beyond the narrow confines of their own town, state or country another enemy, he said was the anarchistc, law violating minority, which he termed the "stomach's brigade.

Wants Action Not Words When the Reparations Commission Meets.

PARIS, Nov. 30. — (Canadian Press.)— If Premier Poincare has his way, allied statesmen will go direct from London to Brussels and the conference will open there by December 15. The view in French official circles is that public opinion in France will not stand for further postponement of the Brussels meeting and that every day's delay makes the situation worse. The provisional moratorium granted to Germany ends on December 31, and another reparations payment is due in January on old schedule. French government is unwilling to accept any temporary makeshift.

FUNERAL OF THE LATE J. HOLMES YESTERDAY.

Laid at Rest in Little Lake Cemetery With Masonic Honours.

The funeral of the late John Holmes of Buffalo, N.Y., took place yesterday from the residence of Chief Newhall, under the auspices of the Masonic fraternity. The religious service was taken by Rev. Dr. Blagrave at the house and at the grave.

There was a large attendance of friends and of Masons. The Masonic service at the house was conducted by Rt. Wor. Bro. H. Rush, and at the grave by Wor. Bro. W. R. Morris, Wor. Bro. Haley and Wor. Bro. Blagrave. The bearers were Rt. Wor. Bro. H. Rush, Wor. Bro. W. Stocker, Bro. H. W. Christie, Bro. Geo. Green, and Bro. Chief of Police Kidd of Beleville, and Wor. Bro. Henry.

SEVERAL MORE GREEKS HAVE BEEN ARRESTED.

Venizelos Threatens to Leave Conference If Reference Is Made to Interior Policy.

LONDON, Nov. 30. — (Canadian Press).—A Reuter's despatch from Athens says that Generals Papoulas, Dousmanis and Valettas have been arrested. General Dousmanis is one of the most prominent military figures in Greece. He served as Chief of the General Staff and with the Greek military mission at Constantinople, and last September was appointed Commander-in-Chief of the Army in the last unsuccessful attempt to still the tide of the Turkish advance. General Papoulas, also a former Commander of the Greek Army, was a witness at the trial of the Cabinet Ministers executed Tuesday.

"I deplore the tragic end that have taken place in Athens. They are a matter of interior policy. Should Lord Curzon publicly stigmatize in my presence the acts of Athens I should be under the obligation to leave Lausanne.

Mr. Hector J. Neil has returned home after spending the last ten days in New York and Brooklyn.

WEDDING BELLS

HEFERNAN—MICHAEL

A quiet, but pretty wedding was solemnized yesterday at one o'clock in St. Andrew's Presbyterian church, when Eleanor Margaret, youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. Michael, Park street, was united in the holy bonds of matrimony to James M. Heffernan, youngest son of Mr. P. Heffernan, Reid street, Rev. Jas. Rollins performing the ceremony. The bride entered the church on the arm of her father, to the strains of the wedding march played by Mr. Alex. Segar, who also rendered approprate music during the ceremony.

The bride was charmingly attired in a suit of navy tricotine with hat to match, Isabella Fox fur and cor sage bouquet of Ophelia roses. She was attended by her sister, Mrs. Jas. R. Pearson, while Mr. J. R. Pearson supported the groom. During the signing of the register Miss Trucie Pearson sang very sweetly "Until".

After the ceremony luncheon was served to immediate relatives at the home of the bride's parents, after which Mr. and Mrs. Heffernan, took the 3.50 train enroute to Toron to Buffalo, and Utica, the bride travelling in black panne velvet dress silver cloth hat and muskrat coat, (the gift of the bridegroom.)

On their return Mr. and Mrs. Heffernan will reside at 640 Reid St.

NURSE--McBRIDE.

The Rectory of Christ Church, Omemee, was the scene of a quiet wedding on on Thursday, November 16th, at 8 p.m. when Elva May, the youngest daughter of Mr. Thomas McBride, and the late Mrs. McBride, Emily, were united in the holy bonds of matrimony to Mr. Robert Wilbert Nurse, Fowler's Corners. The Rev. E. R. James officiated.

The bride was becomingly attired in wood brown canton crepe dress, and hat to match. Miss Arnott Boate sister of the bride, attended the bride while Mr. Arnott Boate supported the groom. After the ceremony the happy couple motored to their home at Fowler's Corners.

DE VALERA MAY MAKE FLIGHT TO AMERICA.

Said to Be in Hiding in the Mountains—Ready to Leave.

LONDON, Nov. 30. — (Canadian Press).—De Valera is reported to be attempting to leave Ireland for America, says a despatch to the Evening News from Belfast. He is said to be in hiding in the Carlingford Mountains overlooking Greenore, County Louth.

There is a daily boat service to Holyhead. It is understood that the irregulars plan an attack in Louth to divert the attention of the authorities and allow De Valera to slip out of Greenore.

IN MEMORIAM.

BALL.—In loving memory of our beloved son, James Ball, who was called to rest November 30th, 1916:
Sleep on, dear one, your cares are ended,
Rest in peace, your work is done;
You have gone where those who loved you
Soon will meet you, one by one.

Sunshine passes, shadows fall,
Love's remembrance outlasts all,
From memory's page time cannot blot
Three little words, "Forget me not."
—Mother and Father.

IN MEMORIAM.

BALL.—In loving memory of our dear brother, James Ball, who passed away November 30th, 1916:
No one heard the footsteps
Of the angels drawing nigh,
When they took from ls our brother
To dwell in heaven on high.

Thank God, he was prepared to go,
Now freed from suffering here below
He's gone to those bright mansions fair
Which Jesus said He would prepare.

THIRST-CRAZED PEASANTS ARE SHOT TO DEATH

SEVENTEEN DEAD

By Frederick G. Nieumeier, United Press Staff Correspondent
(Copyrighted, 1922)

MEXICO CITY., Dec. 1.—(8 a.m.).—Not since the "tragic ten days", of 1913, has Mexico City, presented such a bloody aspect as dawn revealed this morning, after a night of sanguinary rioting.

The rising sun gleamed upon a shambles on the historical Zocalo before the portals of the smoke-grimed, flame-scorched Municipal Palace.

Estimates of the dead ranged as low as twelve, and as high as thirty. There was no way of telling accurately at the hour of filing this despatch, as many of the dead had been brnea away by their frienos, and many of the scores of wounded will die.

Thirst- Crazed

In 1913, during the tragic ten days the fighting was between two groups of men striving for power. Last night's battle was between a horde of thirst-crazed peasants, gaoded to frenzy because the city water supply had failed, and the soldiers who stood between the mob and the Municipal Palace. But the results were the same—buzzing bullets, groans, wails, flames and blood.

Early in the evening the throng formed. The people were agitated. Agitators mounted soap boxes and denounced municipal officials for permitting the water plant to be flooded, which resulted in putting the city on rations—water for one hour daily.

"Take over the government and run it yourself", the speakers told the crowd. "Demand the resignation of the city officials. Seize the city Hall."

Cried for Water

The people grew more excited and finally began surging in the direction of the municipal palace. As they moved along stones crashed through shop windows. Some groups sang, others hooted it's war cry, "Agua, Agua," (water, water.) Women shrieked it at the top of their voices. Men roared it in chorus. They gathered up sticks, stones and other missiles as they went along. The column seemed to gain momentum as it advanced. Lights in windows winked out as the muttering of the mob swelled even louder in the distance, heralding its approach.

Jazz bands in cabarets cut off their dance tunes in the middle and the merrymakers — some scared and some hysterically gleeful— flocked into the street. Men with tins of gasoline appeared at the head of the grim procession.

The municiipal palace was dark and ominously silent when the rioters marched into the enclosure before it. They milled about, yelling for "Agua')' demanding the resignaton of Dr. Alonzo Romero, the Municipal President. Soldiers and Police began trying to disperse them "Rush the building", cried one of the agitators "capture the Municipal Palace".

Packed in Square

The people, closely packed in the square, and forced forward by the pressure of those behind them, hesitated a moment but then one man started running toward the building. With a yell, the mob charged, fists and clubs upraised, men and women racing side by side.

A ripple of rifle came from the palace, then yellow fingers stabbed at the crowd from half a dozen

TRAFFIC TOLL IS INCREASING

Much of it is Preventable Traffic Experts Declare,

Traffic experts throughout the country agree on this. And yet this year 33,000 persons will be killed or injured in auto accidents and more than a billion dollars in property will be destroyed.

Furthermore, the automobile fatality ratio is mounting steadily in proportion to growth in the number of automobiles operated. As the nation is only 60 per cent supplied with the automobiles that will eventually be in operation, the appalling death and accident rate of today threatens to be doubled unless strict regulations, education of drivers and public, newer traffic control devices and similar measures now in effect bring relief.

In 1906, there were fewer than 400 deaths from automobile accidents. Last year, 11,024 were killed, an increase of 2750 per cent. Two-thirds of all traffic accidents occur in cities of 10,000 Or more.

American traffic regulations have not kept up with the phenomenal increase in the number of autos. The streets were laid out in the days of horse-drawn vehicles. Persons driving around then were familiar with their surroundings, knew every rut in the road and what to avoid.

Now, however, America's traffic has increased enormously. It is traveling at several times the former rate of speed. And the militations placed on distance traversed has been wiped out, until intercity and interstate trips are the rule.

Confusing Regulations

The result is confusion, due to conflicting traffic regulations in different states and cities, which lead to accidents. Unfamiliarity with danger points in strange towns is another cause, while the careless motorist, roaring through small communities on his way to larger cities, has become one of the big killers.

To successfully combat the growing menace of automobile accidents, the causes must be studied and removed. There are not many unavoidable accidents. A check on automobile accidents shows practically all of them due to some of the following causes:

Careless
Careless drivers
Intoxication
Incompetent drivers
Disregard or ignorance of traffic laws
Poorly lighted streets
Speeding
Playing in streets
Careless pedestrians
Defective brakes
Attempts to pass two vehicles going in the same direction which are nearly abreast.

Intoxicated drivers are one of the worst menaces to life and limb that authorities have to deal with, they say. Such drivers are not only imbued with the speed mania but they take the most hazardous chances, while frequently their condition causes them to drive through safety zones, on sidewalks and even into buildings.

Pedestrians' Faults

The pedestrian is in many cases to blame, through carelessly stepping from the curb into moving traffic, running across the street behind a street car and otherwise failing to use proper caution. Children especially present a serious problem. One-third of those killed by automobiles are children, and in a majority of cases, they were struck down when they suddenly rushed into the path of an auto, or were playing in the street.

Educational work in the schools and homes is now looked to for a lessening of this danger. At the same time, drivers are being schooled to slow down and have their cars under absolute control when they pass playing children.

Varying in different cities, from 17.6 to 50 per cent of all auto accidents are attributable to bad lighting, according to Hearl A. Anderson, illuminating engineer for the General Electric Company, who made a survey in 32 cities. He finds that the majority occur during the dim evening rush hour, before the lights are on.

Vanderbilt, Worth $5,000,000, Goes Back to His Job

NEW YORK, Dec. 1.—William H. Vanderbilt went back to the grind Monday, and suffered but one regret—he reached his desk seven minutes late, reporting at 9.07 a.m.

Young Vanderbilt, who came into an inheritance of $5,000,000 from his father, the late Alfred Gwynne Vanderbilt, on his twenty-first birthday, last Friday, and who gave a dinner party at his Rhode Island estate in celebration of the event, ate a meager 43 cent meal at noon with hundreds of other clerks. Between bites he told a reporter that he will continue "indefinntely" in his job as clerk for the United States Trust company, 45 Wall street.

"I may be here a month or a year," he said. "I crave knowledge—not from books, but by experience. My ambition is to accomplish something worth while in this world. I despise idleness and parasites. I have set my heart on becoming a banker. I intend to learn from start to finish."

THE WEATHER

December 1st, mild, and with what little snow we had a few days ago vanished from sight through the influence of a warm shower last evening. Such is the way December has made its debut. Mr. A. B. Ross, the Rural Route mail carrier is authority for the statement that he occasionally sees chipmunks and squirrels frisking along the country fences, apparently oblivious of the fact that this is one of our winter months. The highest temperature during November was 65 degrees; and the lowest 13. The rainfall was lighter than usual, being but 1.40. The hours of sunshine were few. There seems to be an almost unanimous opinion that we are going to have a mild winter. Even some of the coal men have confided to me in a tone of relief (which had all the appearances of being genuine) that the winter would not be severe. However, time alone will tell.—W.P.

ARMOUR'S HILL FOR CITY PARK RECOMMENDED

Chamber of Commerce Resolves That Its Purchase by City for $3,000 is Desirable.

NORTHERN RELIEF

At the meeting of the Executive Council of the Chamber of Commerce with Mr. Jos. J. Duffus, president, in the chair, the following resolution was unanimously adopted, and forwarded to the City Council.

WHEREAS, we understand an offer of sale to the City of Peterborough has been made of that piece of property Parcel C, Lot No. 36, Concession XII, Otonabee, comprising approximately 37½ acres, commonly known as Armour's Hill, for approximately $3,000;

AND WHEREAS, it is our opinion that the amount necessary to purchase this property is reasonable,

AND WHEREAS, we believe that it is most desirable that this property be purchased by the City of Peterborough so as to include it in the city's park system, in which event we have been informed it will be laid out and planted with trees and shrubbery by the Forestry Department of the Provincial Government,

AND WHEREAS, a natural system of toboggan and sleigh slides could be included in the plan of development, for the benefit and encouragement of outdoor recreation.

THEREFORE RESOLVED, that we, the Executive Council of the Peterborough Chamber of Commerce, strongly recommend unanimously that the City Council take the necessary action to secure this property.

Rochester-Cobourg Ferry

The President reported that the Rochester Chamber of Commerce and Automobile Association were endeavoring to secure a more convenient automobile ferry service to Cobourg, which would permit of a more convenient connection to the Kawartha Lake district. It was decided to communicate with the Chambers of Commerce and Motor Clubs of Rochester and Cobourg, with the object of having a joint meeting in Coborg, to endeavor to secure this improved service for next season.

Northern Relief

The President in reporting to the meeting of his visit with the delegation to Northern Ontario, spoke of the devastating effect the recent fire had on the towns, villages, and farms, included in the districts of Haileybury, Englehart, New Liskeard, Charlton, and North Cobalt. He referred to the fire insurance rates existing thruout the district as being almost prohibitive, which obviously meant that very little of the loss was covered by insurance. One specific example of this was given in the case of a hardware merchant having buildings, stock, etc., valued at $60,000, was burnt out completely, and he now has only $4,500, which is the extent to which he was insured.

Mr. Duffus stated that considerable relief work had been carried out by the Northern Ontario Fire Relief Committee, but was absolutely inadequate to meet the situation. Clothing, food, and household goods had been supplied as far as possible, and materials had been supplied so as to permit the construction of temporary standard shelter shacks of 16 by 20 feet for the families, also small shacks sufficient to accommodate five head of cattle. The speaker also stated that the people in that district demonstrated to the full that they were 'survival of the fittest' and fully capable of forming a valuable nucleus in the re-development of the district, which is considered to be an exceptionally rich agricultural district, the development of which would mean a great deal to the whole Province.

In referring to the financial assistance required to re-establish on reasonable footing the areas devastated, it was considered by the Northern Relief Committee that a further $600,000 was necessary in addition to the $400,000 already subscribed, and Premier Drury stated to the delegation that this amount should not be covered in the form of taxation by the Provincial Government, but that all urban and rural municipalities should contribute their fair share. To this end, the Northern Relief Committee was requested to notify all concerned of the amount that each should contribute.

After hearing the report of the President, the Executive decided that the method that should be employed to raise the amount necessary should be left in the hands of the City Council, and a resolution was adopted assuring that body of the support of the Chamber in any reasonable action which might be taken.

Shot Herself, Body Lies in Morgue at Paris Unclaimed

PARIS, Dec. 1.—The body of Miss Rose Shannessy, of Minneapolis, aged 37, who shot herself on Nov. 20, is still ying unclaimed in the Paris morgue. Her only known friend is reported to be a prominent business man. He has been notified by the police of her death. His name is withheld.

Miss Shannessy lived alone in a small apartment near the Arc de Triomphe. She arrived from America two months ago and spent most of her time with an unnamed friend. The police accept the version of suicide, but they do not know the reason.

The American consulate cabled her parents in Minneapolis last week, but no reply has been received.

STEAMER WRECK LAKE SUPERIOR

Seven Lives Believed Lost —Some of the Crew Rescued by Coastguards.

CALUMET, Mich., Dec. 1 Canadian Press. — Capt. Nelson Menard and six members of the crew of the Canadian steamer Maplehurst, are believed to have lost their lives early to-day when the vessel struck the west breakwater at the Portage Lake ship canal. Nine others of the crew were rescued by the coast guards, it being possible to remove them one at a time. They jumped from the bridge into the lifeboats. The accident occured while a heavy gale was sweeping Lake Superior.

Besides Captain Menard the dead included Chief Engineer Dunn, of Kingston, Ont., and first mate Frank Smith of Brewer Mills, Ont. The names of the others were not obtainable.

The rescued were second engineer W. Fauve, Jean Duval and Henry Duval, of St. Votique, Ont.; Frank Robrique, Caiteau Duluc, Ont.; F. Marshall, R. Marshall and Thomas Brown, Montreal, and Harry Burch and Harry Murray, of Kinngston, Ont.

Canada Steamship Lines this afternoon announced the names of the following men members of the crew of the collier Maplehurst, reported as missing, after the sinking of the steamer in Lake Superior: Joseph Lalone, Valleyfield, Que.; George

HON. MEIGHEN TO MEET ASSAILANT

Resents Statements Attributed to Him Chiefly in Headline Language.

OTTAWA, Dec. 1. — (Canadian Press.)—Right Hon. Arthur Meighen, leader of the Opposition, has issued a statement on the by-election campaign, in which he states that newspapers have attribtued to him, chiefly by headlines language, words which he never used. He says the government has distributed literature throughout Lanark, claiming as one of its "oustanding achievements the throwing out of Mr. Hanna and the Canadian National Board and the appointment of Sir Henry Thornton and this new Board." Those who think the old Board made a failure of its task, he says, will be inclined to agree with the government's claim. But those who think differently will agree that gross wrong has been done a faithful directorate.

"For myself I disagree with both propositions. When the facts which I have adduced are ascertained, I will meet my assailants.

When Not in Use Grandma Kept Her Pipe in Stocking

NEW YORK, Dec. 1.— Mrs. Emily S. Voorhees, Montclair, N. J., is one of the few persons who can testify that the first hundred years are the hardest. Mrs. Voorhees, while celebrating her 100th birthday, expressed concern over the amount of smoking young girls do these days, but said she remembered when her grandmother used to smoke a pipe, which she kept in her stocking while not in use.

Power Shortage Is Poor Advertising For Peterborough

From Time to Time During the Past Five Years News That Power Was Scarce in This City Has Been Broadcasted Over the Continent.

PLENTY AVAILABLE AT BURLEIGH

What can this city do to encourage manufacturers to locate in Peterborough?

One of the chief difficulties to overcome is the unfavorable advertising that this city has received during this last four or five years since the Hydro-Electric Power Commission has been exclusively supplying our local Commission with electric power. From time to time, there has been a shortage of power, and Peterborough has been broadcasted throughout this continent as being short of power. This is particularly noticeable, so far as Peterborough is concerned, on account of the great deal of boasting and advertising that has been done in the past regarding our inexhaustible supply of available water power.

SHORTAGE POWER IN PETERBOROUGH.

In the ordinary course of business, when the American manufacturer with real money to invest in an industry crosses the international line, the other competing cities and towns in Canada are the first to draw his attention to the fact, that Peterborough is from time to time short of electric power, and that her factories are compelled to close down through the lack of power. If any doubt is expressed, a Toronto daily paper may be produced to show that on a certain date there was a shortage of power, and that Peterborough industries were suffering therefrom.

There are to my knowledge several very important influential and far-reaching agencies at work in foreign countries, and more particularly in the United States, to furnish information as to the resources of Canada and the splendid opportunity that is offered by Canada to locate a branch factory in Canada. These agencies must speak the truth, if they are to command confidence, and the truth that they must speak is, that for this last four or five years Peterborough has suffered from a shortage of power.

These are facts that must appeal to any citizen who has any regard whatever for the future growth and development of this city.

AVAILABLE WATER POWERS HERE.

I have time and again drawn attention to the available water powers lying to the north of Peterborough that can be developed and which would furnish sufficient electrical energy to supply a city with a population of 50,000. The remarkable thing is that neither the City Council nor the Peterborough Utility Commission have seen fit to give any expression whatever of their willingness to investigate the use that could be made of these water powers, the cost of developing them or the advantage that this city would derive from their development.

While I was connected with the Otonabee Power Company, we engaged the services of Mr. Henry Holgate, of Montreal, who made a careful examination of the cost of developing dams numbers four and five. He has all the necessary field information in his possession to furnish this information and bring it down to date, and I believe he would furnish it at a moderate and reasonable fee. Mr. Holgate is one of the leading hydraulic engineers in Canada, and I suggest his name only because I know he has very valuable information in his office regarding this particular development.

To assist in this water power development I believe this city would have the hearty co-operation of the Dominion Government, which, I am sure, if proper representations were made to them, would build a canal and new lock connecting these dams numbers four and five and leave available a 26-foot head for water power purposes, and that they would raise the dam at Burleigh four feet or more and drown out Lovesick Dam, thereby furnishing a valuable head of 30 feet at Burleigh for water power purposes.

NOT A MATTER OF GUESSWORK.

There is no necessity for guessing at the cost of developing water power from these two sources, because a gentleman like Mr. Holgate could tell within a few dollars what such development would cost, before the city is committed to any contract. From my knowledge of this situation, I believe that the cost of development of these two water powers would be in the neighborhood of $500,000, or slightly over, but every additional $50,000 that this power would cost beyond $500,000 would only mean an additional annual cost per horse-power of 55c. The city is in the market to buy $100,000 worth of electric power per annum. From these sources I believe power could be developed by the city on its own account at about one-half the present cost, to the great advantage of every power and light user, and still leave a surplus to attract new industries to locate here, with still more surpluses to follow.

To those who are looking for selfish motives on my part in the course I am taking, I beg to assure them that I have no axe to grind, nor power property to sell, nor office to seek.

SAY THAT HYDRO HELD BIG STICK OVER CORNWALL

SIR ADAM PROTESTS

CORNWALL, Dec. 1—(Canadian Press).—At the opening of to-day's session of the Gregory Commission in connection with the St. Lawrence system, Hydro Engineer Jeffrey replied to the charges of Messrs. McLeod and Casselman, members of the legislature that Hydro had used a "Big Stick" on Cornwall.

It has been claimed by Cornwall representatives that Hydro had used its influence to get the Eugene Phillips Electric Supply Company, Montreal, to locate at Brockville instead of at Cornwall for the alleged reason that Hydro purchased large supplies from the Phillips Company.

Witness admitted the company was told power cost for Brockville would be reduced with an increased load. No reduction had yet been made. He insisted that Brockville had the geographical advantages over Cornwall for power distribution

Sir Adam Protests

One more, yesterday, Sir Adam voiced vigorous protest at the manner of conducting the investigation, and demanded the Provincial Commission's right to be represented by counsel. It was most unfair, he declared that an organization that was on trial should be used as witnesses. "You are a lawyer," he said to the chairman. 'You are acting as counsel, and you have questions ready to suit your case."

Sir Adam asked to be furnished within a reasonable time with official copies of all reports made to the Inquiry Commission by Price Waterhouse & Co., which firm, he said the Hydro understood had submitted reports other than those brought to the Commission hearings.

The Chairman—You must be specific we are having reports all the time.

Sir Adam—We have mighty little opportunity of bringing out things here that we think are of public interest.

Mr. Gregory again denied that he was acting as counsel for the Commission, and told the Provincial Hydro Commission Chairman he would have every opportunity of MAD MONK ARRIVES.

NEW YORK, Dec. 1.—(Canadian Press.) — Sergt. I. Michaelowitch Turianoff, better known as "Illioder, the Mad Monk of Russia," arrived in New York with his wife and three children yesterday on the steamship Lithuania. Illioder declared to the Department of Justice agents and Immigration officials that he desired to become a United States' citizens, a Baptist minister, and to work among Russians in America. Illioder was once a confident of Rasputin, the monk whose influence over the Czarina led to his murder by Russian nobles.

WIFE CRIES "LIAR!" IN FRISCHKORN SUIT.

Lawyer's Testimony Angers the Plaintiff in the Case.

DETROIT, Dec. 1.— While George B. Yerkes, attorney, called to the stand by E. S. Frischkorn, defendant in a suit brought by Marie E. Frischkorn to have his divorce decree vacated, was testifying in Circuit Court here, Mrs. Frischkorn repeatedly cried "Liar!"

Mr. Yerkes, counsel for Mrs. Frischkorn during the settlement preceding the divorce granted to Mr. Frischkorn April 22, 1920, testified that in seeking a settlement with Frischkorn pending the divorce hearing, he had told him he "could not afford to throw his wife out without a penny."

He said: "Mr. Frischkorn at first refused to make any settlement at all. He became violently angry, but we finally came to a settlement. Later I went back and asked for the coupe, and he called the whole deal off. We then made further efforts for a settlement."

The final settlement, he said, was the $20,000 which Frischkorn paid to his wife, and they surrendered to him certain papers, and "the matter was closed."

Testimony of Mr. Yerkes, Seward L. Merriam and DeWitt H. Merriam, former counsel for Mrs. Frischkorn, was admitted by Judge Harry J. Dingeman touching upon matters that had previously been gone into by Mrs. Frischkorn upon the stand, the court thereupon holding them not privileged.

All three testified that Mrs. Frischkorn's clothes were not torn on the day of the divorce when she had hysterics in their law office, until after the decree was granted, and Mr. Frischkorn had joined them, granting Mrs. Frischkorn a private interview at this time.

There is no fundamental law upon which the constitution of the British empire rests, though there are three main principles underlying its administration—self-government, self-support and self-defense.

Russia Protests Against Decision of the Conference

Will Take Part Only in Discussions Regarding the Dardanelles—Greek Situation Embarrassing.

CANNOT PAY DEBT.

LAUSANNE, December 1. Canadian Press. — After verbally protesting yesterday to the representatives of the Entente countries against the decision to keep Russia out of the near East conference, except with respect to the Dardanelles, M. Rakovsky asked the conference not to begin the discussion on the Straits to-day as arranged.

M. Tchitcherin, Russia's chief delegate will not arrive here until to-night, and M. Rakovsky requested postponement until Monday of the Straits discussion, mainly because he wants the chief minister present. He informed Lord Cuurzon, M. Barrere, and Marquis Di Girroni, that Russia was not content with the Allies' decision to keep her from participation in all the deliberations of the conference.

The official reply to the Russian petition contended that the invitation originaly extended to Russia clearly explained that Russia was bidden to Lausanna only for the Straits negtiations and that therefore there was no possible basis for a misunderstanding.

On the different aspects of this question the Russian delegates would be given every opportunity to make known their views.

The former Grecian Premier, Venizelos, who is continuing his official conference activities, without his position being affected by the Grecian executions, attended the meeting of the sub-commission on the Ottoman debts yesterday afternoon. Without mincing words he told the delegates that Greece was ruined and could not pay a farthing of the Turkish liabilities.

The conference had been planning to apportion the debt between Turkey and her former possessions, and M. Venizelos was endeavoring to make it clear that Greece could not shoulder any debt for Western Thrace.

"We might have taken our share of this debt after the Treaty of Sevres was signed," he said, "but the Asia Minor campaign has made us bankrupt.

The entire question of the Grecian executions, the withdrawal of the British minister from Athens and the resultant effect of this on the relations between England and Greece at the conference, was gone over last night in the course of a long conversation between M. Venizelos and Lord Cuurzon; the former took the initiative and motored to Lord Curson's hotel at Ouuchy.

M. Venizelos declined to make any comment, but the indications are that he is feeling greatly embarrassed in his relations toward the conference. Nevertheless, all the delegations, including even the English, are trying to prevent the Grecian tragedy from endangering the conference, which is regarded as too important to the general peace of Europe to be affected by a Grecian internal question, however much public opinion may be aroused in condemnation of the extreme measures adopted by the Revolutionary Committee.

F. O. Lindley, the British Minister to Greece, who has withdrawn from Athens, is due here to-day to confer with Lord Curzon.

TO LIFT EMBARGO.

LONDON, Dec. 1.— (Canadian Press)—In the House of Commons yesterday Premier Bonar Law announced that the bill to remove the Canadian cattle embargo would be introduced in the House and advanced to the point where it could be put down for second reading by next Wednesday.

STOMACH TROUBLE? INDIGESTION?

Here's Good News for You

Lindsay, Ont.—"Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery is the best medicine I have ever taken for stomach trouble. For many years I suffered with gastric stomach trouble and nervous indigestion. Would be so bad at times that it was necessary for me to be in bed two or three days at a time. I have doctored and taken many different medicines with little relief. Just recently I began taking Golden Medical Discovery and it has given more relief than all the other medicines I have ever taken. My stomach does not bother me and I have not had any indigestion since taking this medicine. I can highly recommend the 'Discovery' to others who suffer with stomach trouble."—Mrs. Geo. Wellington, 6 John St.

STUDENT KILLED.

PROVIDENCE, R.I., Dec. 1. — (Canadian Press.)—E. John Decker, 23, of La Grange, Maine, was instantly killed and Miss Nadine De Witt, 22, of Millinocket, Maine, was probably fatally injured, when the automobile they were riding in with two other student couples was demolished early yesterday morning in East Providence. The other occupants escaped with minor injuries. The car is said to have skidded and crashed into trees and poles at the side of the road.

GERMANY HAS ANOTHER WAR UP HER SLEEVE

Daily Mail Has Details of Plan For War of Revenge Against France—Treaty With Russia.

LONDON, December 1 (Canadian Press), — That the Germans are actively planning a war of revenge, chiefly against France, for which purpose they have concluded a secret military agreement with Russia, is the main point of "A memorandum by a person in close touch with the best informed German circles in Berlin and Munich," communicated to the Daily Mail, which displays it under big headlines.

The paper claims to have made exhaustive inquiries into the memorandum's accuracy in Germany, London, and Paris, with the result, the Mail says, that it has been very largely supported thereby.

Except for precise details, the Mail's story does not differ materially from similar statements printed from time to time in anti-German papers.

NAMES MENTIONED IN GARNEAU CASE

Special Agent Named Two Prominent Young Men in Quebec But Admitted Grounds Were Baseless.

QUEBEC, December 1. Canadian Press. — The storm cloud which has been hanging over the Garneau Royal Commission and which everybody expected to burst at any moment, broke this afternoon when one of the witnesses, pressed to give certain names, mentioned those of two prominent local men's sons, after he had been granted the protection of the commission against any civil or criminal action which might be taken against him.

Joseph Valade, a "special agent," who had followed the very first clue in the sensational murder, and who had been on the stand since Wednesday afternoon, stated to Aime Geoffrion, K.C., one of the two lawyers who was acting for the Attorney-General's Department that from what he had heard through public rumors and from the description he had obtained from Henri Duval, alias Casauboff, he was inclined to conect the names of two young men with the crime.

He had no other foundation for his opinion but those rumors and the description referred to, he said, and admitted that if it were proved that Duval was locked up in a cell in the military prison at the time of the murder he would not pay the least attention to Duval's story.

Counsel for the Attorney General's Department produced evidence to show that Duval, alias Casaubon, was actually in the military jail at the time of the murder.

At the morning session there was a scene which resulted in strong comment by Mr. Justice Archibald when the commission sat again in the afternoon.

L. B. Belley, K.C., of Quebec, and Aime Geoffrion, K.C., of Montreal, got into a rather hot argument, and many of the remarks made by counsel were the signal for applause by the large attendance.

TWO NEW ELEVATORS.

WINNIPEG, Dec. 1.— (Canadian Press.)— With the construction of two new elevators during the coming year, storage capacity at the head of the lakes will be brought to 61,000,000 bushels for the 1923 season.

W. R. Bawlf, President of the N. Bawlf Grain Company, announced here yesterday that his company will erect a terminal elevator with a storage capacity of 1,500,000 bushels at Port Arthur. The James Stewart Grain Company also announced recently that they would build a large elevator within the next year.

LONDON, Dec. 1.—(Associated Press)—The famous royal stables at Buckingham palace, known as The Mews, are to be demolished. In the stead will be built a modern garage large enough to care for numerous automobiles of the royal family.

BIG INCREASE IN CUSTOMS DUTIES DURING MONTH

Over Six Million More Received in Customs and Excise Revenues Than in November, 1921.

THE FIGURES.

OTTAWA, Ont., Dec. 1.—(Canadaian Press.)— Customs and excise revenue received by the Federal Government during November this year increased by $6,741,733.03, over the amount received from this source during November, 1921. During the eight month period ending November 30, 1922, Customs and Excise revenue increased by $28,796,877.35, over the corresponding period of 1921. In November this year total collections amounted to $26,021,307.15 as compared with $19,279,574.12 during November, 1921. During the eight month period ending November 30 1922, total collections were $183,059,179.40 as against $154,253,302.05 during the corresponding period of 1921.

Excise taxes were responsible for the greater part of the November 1922 increase. During the month a total of $10,864,156.17 was collected as compared with $6,719,619.07 in November 1921, an increase of $4,144,537.10. Customs import duties showed an increase of $1,912,325.29 during November 1922, when a total of $11,464,039.04 was collected as against $9,551,714.35 during November 1921. Excise duties brought in $3,598,554.83 in November this year as compared with $2,910,706.97 for November 1921, an increase of $687,847.86. The lone decrease was in sundry collections which during November 1922 brought in $2,077.99 less than in November 1921. A total of $94,556.51 was collected under this heading during November this year as compared with $97,533.73 during November 1921.

Excise taxes registered the largest increase during the eight month period ending November 30, 1922. During this period excise taxes brought in a total of $68,030,167.10 as compared with $49,588,526.23 during the same period of 1921. This represents a gain of $18,441,640.87. Customs import duties showed a gain of $10,376,550.12 during the eight months this year as compared with the same period last year. The collections totalled $89,008,101.26 during the 1922 period and $78,631,641.14 during the 1921 period. A decrease of $101,970.60 was registered in the collection of excise duties in the 1922 period. During the eight month period of 1922 a total of $25,267,287.46 was collected under this heading as compared with $25,369,258.06 during the corresponding period of 1921. Sundry collections showed an increase for the eight months period of $80,656.06. Total sundry collections during the 1922 period amounted to $744,533.58 as compared with $663,876.62 for the same period of 1921.

Unemployment Big Problem Before the New Government

Clynes Takes Strong Stand Regarding the Situation of the Working Man in England To-Day--Second Reading of Irish Bill.

GOVT. INSURANCE.

LONDON, December 1 (Canadian Press). — Having disposed of the Irish legislation, the House of Commons yesterday addessed itself to the routine business of debate on the reply to the Speech from the Throne.

John Robert Clynes, former Parliamentary Labour leader, in moving an amendment to the Address, raised the question of unemployment, which, outside the foreign policy, is the biggest problem facing the new Government.

Mr. Clynes' criticism of the Government followed the familiar lines of a general attack on the foreign policy as being largely responsible for the poor commercial and industrial situation. He declared that what the unemployed wanted was work, not doles, and that the greatest opportunity would be found in an adequate housing scheme.

On the question of unemployment insurance, he warned the Government against being tempted into the direction of ingurance by the separate industries, contending that insurance of the workingman was a national obligation. This warning was prompted by rumours that the Government was contemplating some scheme.

The debate showed that the Government had no new remedies to put forward and that it relies mainly on the proposals of the previous Government, which include the building and improving of roads and similar public services, as well as inducing the railway companies to hasten work upon contemplated extensions as the best means of absorbing a large amount of unskilled labour.

No Government Aid.

In none of these projects, however, was any Government assistance foreshadowed. The only effort in the latter direction mentioned by the Minister of Labour, Sir Montague Barlow, was a proposal to renew the existing Trade Facilities Act for twelve months, and to increase the maximum guarantees under that measure to £50,000,000, which is about double the existing amount of guarantees. He also mentioned a similar extesion of facilities under the existing export credit system.

The Labour Minister dilated upon the success already attained by guaranteeing the capital issues of about 200 schemes under the Trade Facilities Act, and said he hoped for much from its extension. The Government had re-appointed the Cabinet Committee on Unemployment, and would keep the question under close attention, bringing up fresh proposals as they became necessary.

He admitted that the question of unemployment insurance by industries was a complex one, and said the Government had taken steps for a full examination of the matter.

Passes Second Reading.

The same comparative apathy attended the discussion of the Irish Constitution in the House of Lords as was exhibited in the House of Commons. The Bill passed the second reading without revision by the slenderly attended House.

The Duke of Devonshire, on moving the second reading, said he might almost regard it as his hereditary duty to propose the rejection of the Home Rule Bills. He now, however, found himself in the strange position of being the Minister responsible for moving the second reading of a Bill to confer a constitution on the Irish Free State. But in the circumstances of to-day it would be impossible for any Government, however it might be composed, to take any other course than that he now was recommending to the Lords. Moreover, it not only would be useless, but dangerous, to go into the past history and revive old memories. Under these circumstances the only question was whether the constitution accorded with the treaty, and on this question the law officers of the Crown agreed it did.

Lord Middleton and other peers opposing the Irish settlement, declared they could not support the Bill, but said they would not ask the Lords to reject it.

After a brief debate most Bills passed the second reading without revision.

The Lords immediately adjourned, and the expectation was that the third reading of the measure would take place to-day.

OBITUARY

MISS E. HOLLAND

CENTRETON, Dec. 1.—(Special).—The funeral of Miss Emma Holland, a member of one of the well-known families of Haldimand township took place here yesterday afternoon. Miss Holland's death came after about a week's illness with pneumonia. She was a daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Holland of this place and is survived by a brother, Joseph and a sister, Miss Mary Holland, both residing here. A sad circumstance is that the latter has been laid up for about a year past with a broken limb, and is only just able to walk with some assistance.

"WE DEMAND" TO BE SLOGAN FOR RUSSIANS

Soviet Delegates at Lausanne Are Likely to Prove Troublesome Before Things Are Settled.

STRAITS QUESTION.

BERLIN, Dec. 1. — (Canadian Press)—The Russian Soviets program at Lausanne, as outlined last night by M. Tchitcherin, the Russian Foreign Minister, will be liberally interlarded with "We demand"

After a day spent in getting acquainted with Chancellor Cuno and the other members of the new German Government, M. Tchitcherin called in the foreign correspondents with whom he freely discussed his Government's attitude at Lausanne, repeating in large measure what he had already said in similar interviews in Russia.

He maintained that neither the League of Nations nor any international combination of powers should exercise any control whatever over the Turkish Straits, which could be completely closed to warships, and restricted to commercial navigation. Russia, he declared, would be prompt to support Turkey in her attempt to overthrow any agreement violating Turkish sovereign rights or leaving the Straits open, and Russia's programme would remain unchanged whatever conclusions were arrived at by the Powers at Luasanne.

STORM CRIPPLES GRAIN HANDLING

Lake Boats Driven to Shelter and Trains Proceeding With Difficulty.

FORT WILLIAM, Dec. 1.—(Canadian Press)—Grain handling is entirely crippled by heavy snow driven before a half gale of wind preventing vessels from clearing port and sending other on Lake Superior into shelter. Wireless stations report a complete halt in vessel movements. No ships left Port yesterday, upsetting plans of Captains to clear before midnight in order to take advantage of low insurance rates. Twenty-five steamships are held up. No loading is being carried on in the harbor.

Trains carrying grains are proceeding with difficulty.

Tracks Can Compete With the Railroads

MONTREAL, Dec. 1.—(Canadian Press)—That the time was at hand when by the advance of motor trucks traffic on roads, it would be forever impossible for two millions of railway employees to hold up the business of the continent in any endeavor to enforce wage or other demands was one of the chief points made in an address on transportation by Guy Tombs here yesterday.

He pointed out that over a million such trucks were in use between Canada and the United States today and that even with the present road it was cheaper and safer to use this means of transport in preference to railways for distance of one hundred miles or under.

FREIGHT EXCHANGE RATES.

OVERLOADING THE MACHINE.

One objectionable feature involved in the Town Planning Act, which the local Council has decided to oppose, is that it would entail the employment of more officials to carry out its provisions, an objection that is to be found in other legislation of the same kind.

A small army of officials is being mobilized in this Province, and the overhead cost to the municipalities is a heavy factor in increasing the tax rate.

A commission composed of members who are to receive no remuneration does not sound like an expensive proposition, it is true, but secretaries and clerical help add to the cost, and the trouble is that public service oganizations of that kind seem to be a breeding ground for officialdom.

There is not a municipality in Ontario whose civic machinery is not top-heavy with officials.

Our municipal service is overmanned and their seems no end to the list.

In the large cities people are accustomed to smile at the Poobah of the village, who is constable and tax collector and fire chief and sanitary inspector and half a dozen other officials rolled into one, but, after all, the village method is closer to the right track than that in vogue in the bigger cities, where the cost of municipal administration is climbing to dizzy heights by reason of the horde of office holders who seem to be falling over each other in the various departments.

Municipalities are beginning to gow suspicious of every movement that seems to offer an opportunity for the loading up of the civic machine with more employees when it is already so clogged that a private business so managed would have to go to the wall.

THE PREMIER'S POSITION.

Whether he agrees or not with Premier Drury's stand on the temperance question, the average citizen finds no trouble in at least admiring Mr. Dury's courage in coming out frankly and leaving no doubt in the public mind as to his position in this important matter.

There is no equivocation, no begging the question; just a straightforward confession of faith and a frank declaration of policy.

In that respect Mr. Drury stands out as a more convincing figure than other political leaders whose views on prohibition are being kept in cold storage ready to be used whichever way seems to offer the most political advantage when the time is opportune.

The people of Ontario may not all see eye to eye with the Farmer Premier in this matter. Some of them may condemn his Government for incompetency and extravagance, but the majority, at least, appreciate frankness and courage in public men, and their opinion of Hon. E. C. Drury is likely to be heightened by the fact that he has not only made no attempt to hedge over a question of prime importance, but that he has announced his position in language that admits of no misunderstanding.

The Premier is for a dry Ontario—and he does not care who knows it. The banner under which he will fight the next election has already been unfurled.

If the opposition armies would as frankly display their standards the nature of the campaign would be revealed.

CANADA CALLS HER OWN.

Sir Auckland Geddes, British Ambassador to the United States, put his finger upon a vital problem the other day at St. Catherines, when he said that one of Canada's greatest tasks was to hold within her own borders her native sons, says the Veteran. Just how serious this problem is may be gleaned from an article in the last issue of The Veteran, which showed that the increase in population during the past ten years was approximately one-quarter of a million less than the number of emigrants who came to our shores during that period. More than one million people, many of the native born, must have left Canada between 1911 and 1921 to bring about the situation portrayed by the last census.

Speaking to young students, the value of Sir Auckland Geddes' address could not be over-estimated. He impressed upon them their duty in the rehabilitation of Canada and the Empire, called to their minds the great traditions established by the citizens of the Dominion during the Great War, and pointed to the unequalled opportunities which Canada as a nation offered to them if they remained constant and loyal.

Several million dollars are devoted yearly towards bringing in new citizens, but we can find little or no record of money being spent to retain those already within our borders. Young men are attracted to the United States principally because of the constantly recurring stories of fortune and fame to be found there. They forget that 110,000,000 people are striving towards the same object, in a country whose surface area is considerably smaller than that of Canada. They forget that the development of Canada in the years to come, opening new opportunities to those who seek advancement, cannot be paralleled in the United States, for the simple reason that that country is now in a condition which might be described as consolidation, rather than expansion.

A new function might well be added to the work of the Department of Immigration and Colonization—that of keeping Canadians, natural born and naturalized, advised as to the reasons why Canada is as well worth living as it was fighting for.

OCCUPYING THE RUHR.

The news that France has laid all her plans for the advance of her army into the Ruhr district and occupation of the Rhine in case the next German payment is not forthcoming must be considered in the light of two influencing factors. The discussion of the French budget in Parliament has disclosed the appalling condition of the national finances, while the fixing of the Brussels Economic Conference for December 4th has in all liklihood induced France to look over the cards she will have to play at that meeting.

The general reporter of the Finance Commission of the Senate, in a statement just issued, has placed the National debt of France at 337 milliards of frames with unpaid interest on the external debt at 5 milliards and reparations debt at 132 milliards. Against this may be set the credit claim against Germany of 123 milliards and other claims against foreign Governments at 15 milliards which gives a deficit of 336 milliards of francs.

Thus, even if Germany fulfills all her undertakings and the other Governments pay all their debts to France, she will still be faced with the tremendous debt of 336 milliards of frances. This tragic situation cannot continue for long, France cannot right herself automatically. Her democracy can only be saved by severe organization.

If France seriously intends to march into the Ruhr Valley with a militaty force and to demand by physical seizure the payment of reparations, she will do it alone. Britain, whose leading statesmen plead long and earnestly for a reconstitution of the Entente, will give no countenance for such an adventure. Britain believes that France can obtain a settlement of the reparations debt with Germany only by a policy or delivery and labor in kind along the lines of the agreement already reached between France and the German financial group, headed by Herr Stinnes. The cost of this labor and material should be provided by German Treasury bonds, countersigned jointly by nations with a sound currency.

This appears to be the only policy which will ensure to France material payment of reparations, to Germany, industrial stability, and to the whole world, peace. It has been adopted by the Left wing of the French Senate and it is close enough to the British scheme of Sir John Bradbury to ensure a basis of agreement.

The alternative is isloation and the possibility of another world war.—Montreal Star.

CO-OPERATION NEEDED.

Rather a sorry spectacle is being presented by the municipalities of old Ontario in their attitude towards the Northern Ontario fire relief question.

There is not much evidence of any desire to play the "Good Samaritan" on the part of some of them.

Hamilton has without hesitation accepted the request for a donation equal to half a mill on the assessment and has already authorized a $46,000 grant, but some Ontario municipalities have refused to take any steps and others, like Peterborough, are dilly-dallying with the question.

The present condition of affairs would have been impossible if the Province had a genuine union of municipalities that would act as a clearing house in matters of this kind and decide upon a common policy to which all associated municipalities would adhere.

Some centres hesitate to do anything for Northern Ontario because other cities may not contribute their share. Others declare that the Provincial Government should raise the money.

If they had an association with a capable executive a problem of this kind could be dealt with intelligently and the municipalities could make a common stand.

If the decision was that the relief fund should be levied by the Government it would be the unanimous decision of the municipalities and would have the effect of an ultimatum upon Queen's Park.

On the other hand, if the association accepted the responsibility on behalf of their members, every municipality would know that the raising of its quota of half a mill on the total assessment was an obligation that was being assumed by all other municipalities.

The need of an active organization of this kind is to be seen almost daily.

Municipalities, for example, should be represented directly on the Hydro-electric Power Commission by a member chosen by themselves, and with a municipal association functioning properly it is difficult to see how the Government could refuse a request for such representation.

Again, the municipalities should have during the sessions of the Legislature a capable and qualified representative to look after their interests. In these days of unlimited interference with municipal rights there is such a large amount of legislation directly affecting the municipalities that it is impossible for them individually to protect themselves against bills that are wrong in principle and annoying in operation.

A greater measure of co-operation among the municipalities of Ontario would seem to be imperative, if these abuses are to be corrected and if splendid movements like the Northern Ontario fire relief are not to be made a fiasco.

EDITORIAL NOTES AND COMMENT.

OUR HONOR IN KEEPING.

O noble youth that held our honor in keeping,
And bore it sacred through the battle flame,
How shall we give full measure of acclaim
To thy sharp labor, they immortal reaping?
For though we sowed with doubtful hands, half sleeping
Thou in thy vivid pride hast reaped a nation,
And brought it in with shouts and exultation,
With drums and trumpets, with flags flashing and leaping.

Let us bring pungent wreaths of balsam, and tender
Tendrils of wild-flowers, lovelier for thy daring
And deck of sylvan shrine, where the maple parts
The moonlight, with lilac bloom, and the splendour
Of suns unwearied; all unwithered, wearing
Thy valour stainless in our heart of hearts.

—Duncan Campbell Scott, "To a Canadian Lad killed in the War."

AT ROSENEATH AND DISTRICT

Pleasant Evening at Base Ball Club's Banquet—Funeral of Victim of Sad Accident—

ROSENEATH, Dec. 1.—The funeral of the late James Ivatt took place on Wednesday to Merril's Cemetery.

Deceased was in his 53rd year and was highly respected in the community and will be greatly missed by a large circle of friends.

He leaves to mourn his loss his sorrowing widow and two daughters, one residing in the West and one in Mimico.

In religion he was an ardent Methodist, and in politics a staunch Conservative.

Further details of the accident which caused the death of this esteemed citizen when driving a load of hogs to Hastings on Monday morning, disclose that when his spirited team bolted, Mr. Ivatt was thrown to the ground with such force that he was killed instantly. He was just turning out of his lane at the time.

Base Ball Banquet.

The Roseneath Base Ball Club held their annual banquet at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Barton Thackberry's on Friday evening.

The evening was very pleaasntly spent, a full report of the season's work given, and by the reports the boys have had a very successful year.

LAKEFIELD HAD CHRISTMAS FAIR

Those in Charge of the Booths—Lakefield News of Interest.

LAKEFIELD, Dec. 1. — The Christmas Fair given in the Presbyterian School-room on Wednesday afternoon, under the auspices of the Ladies' Aid, was a success, both in point of numbers and in financial returns. The weather was pleasant and a constant stream of people, nearly all ladies, wended their way up to the Presbyterian Hill to the Fair during the hours between 3 and 6 o'clock.

Mrs. James Walton and Mrs. Braden were hostesses and were assisted by a corps of able assistants. The home-made candy booth was presided over by Mrs. C. Lake, Misses M. Adams and Edna Blewett. Mrs. Chas. Thomson and Miss Blewett were in charge of the notion counter, which had many attractions for the children. The country store was presided over by Misses FitzGerald, Adams and Preston.

Mrs. W. J. Charlton and Miss M. Sanderson, with their fancy table, did a good business with their dainty wares.

Mrs. B. Hunter, Mrs. M. Dever and Miss McKibbin had the home cooking table in charge, and their pies, cakes, biscuits and other "goodies" drew plenty of custom. Every one was busy and happy, judging by the cheery faces.

The tea hostesses were Mesdames Bailey, Johnson and Sutton, and they were assisted by a bevy of pretty girls, who served tea, Misses Mary Tanner, Helen Burgess, C. Kidd, Jean Ridpath, Isabel Sutton and Ivah Hendren.

Missionary Pageant.

The missionary pageant given by the children of the Baptist Church on Monday night was a great success and repaid the efforts of those who had taken a good deal of trouble to train the young people. The pageant is a modern method of teaching missions to children, the appeal made to the eye, proving over and over again, its worth. The opening hymn, 'All Hail the Power,' was sung by all present.

The introductory speech by Mrs. W. Northey was as follows: "The object of to-night's programme is to bring before you in a new light the call of the world.

The singer and the song shows how the Gospel is within the hearing of all of us, but as each country is represented to us, let our hearts go out and respond to their call.

Then, again, "The Call of the Boy," let us realize that some of our best mission work can be done by leading our own boys and girls to be missionaries for the Master."

The programme was as follows:

Recitation—"The Call of the Boy," Wallace Hendren.

Chorus—"Hark to the Music."

Recitation—'Unsolved Problems,' Harold Wall.

Chorus—"India, Dark India."

Recitation—"N., S., E. and W.," Elwood Northey, Wallace Hendren, E. Robinson and Hector Robinson.

Pageant.

Recitation—"Go," Etta Bolton.

Tableaux and chorus—"Coming, Coming."

Recitation—"The Peace," Miss Galvin.

Hymn — "Jesus Shall Reign Where'er the Sun."

The pageant presented a group of young girls, representing lands needing the message of the Gospel of Christ.

Mexico, Gladys Bolton. India, Inzie Johnston. Hindoo Widow, Dora Darling. Japan, Beulah Northey. China, Zelda Northey. Africa, Alice Nicholls. Conscience, Mildred Darling. Dreamer, Beatrice Campbell.

The various countries were presented in the tableaux with the addition of Emma Roseborough as Russia and Mildred Darling as Greenland.

Rev. T. L. White, pastor of the church, deserves a great deal of credit for his successful production, which, no doubt, will have far-reaching results.

Personals.

Miss E. Sanderson was the guest of Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Northey over the week-end, instead of the Misses Rav, as reported.

Mrs. Everett was in Peterborough on Wednesday.

Isaac Jenkinson spent Wednesday in Peterborough.

YOUNG MOTHER NOW STRONG

Her Mother's Faithin Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound led Her to Try it

Kenosha, Wisconsin.—"I cannot say enough in praise of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. My mother had great faith in it as she had taken so much of it and when I had trouble after my baby was born she gave it to me. It helped me so much more than anything else had done that I advise all women with female trouble to give it a fair trial and I am sure they will feel as I do about it.—MRS. FRED. P. HANSEN, 562 Symmonds St., Kenosha, Wisconsin.

A medicine that has been in use nearly fifty years and that receives the praise and commendation of mothers and grandmothers is worth your consideration.

If you are suffering from troubles that sometimes follow child-birth bear in mind that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is a woman's medicine. It is especially adapted to correct such troubles.

The letters we publish ought to convince you; ask some of your women friends or neighbors—they know its worth. You will, too, if you give it a fair trial.

BANQUET TO THE WINNERS IN LACROSSE

Hastings Citizens Do Honor to their Team, Champions of District.

HASTINGS, Dec. 1—On Wednesday evening a very enjoyable time was spent in the Town Hall, where a banquet was given in honor of the Hastings Junior O.A.L.A. Lacrosse team the winners of this district. The guests numbered about 150. The hall was beautifully decorated with colors of the team and the tables looked quite charming embellished with flowers and the colors blue and white of the winnings boys.

After doing justice to a sumptuous repast Dr. J. H. Hess made a very acceptable toast master.

The first called on to respond to the toast, "Our Guests", was Alex. Wilson, the town clerk, who in a neat and happy speech reviewed the days of lacrosse in this village for the last thirty-five years, when an a similar occasion to this being honored the old Ironclads had carried off the laurels of the district. The memories of the old days when Jack Cummings, now of Campbellford, the Stonewall defence was presented with a silver trophy was by the victory of Hastngs boys the past season brought fresh to the speaker's memory.

Rev. D. A. Thompson also replied to the toast. He was glad to be present at such a gathering and was pleased to do his part in honoring the boys who had played Canada's national game in true sportmanship style; and hoped they would continue to do so, as all the teams as far back as the old Ironclads had always done.

Rev. Father Bretherton was next called on for a response and he congratulated the boys on the honor they had brought to the town by winning the district championship and by playing the game on its and by its merits. He also said he was enjoying himself immensely and thought everybody present was doing the same. He pointed out that ti would be a move in the right direction to have a rink for the keeping of the boys in shape for another season.

Rev. Mr. Pippin congratulated the boys on their fine spirit, but as he was only here a short time he hoped that the Hastings A.A.A. would be able to get a suitable place for these sports as the present grounds have no shade for the supporters, and no place for the ladies to sit and enjoy a game.

Major Belford said he motored from Brighton to be present at this banquet and was very pleased to do honor to the guests. He had followed the team all season and thought that they had given Hastings a great deal of advertising by the way they played the game and in their conduct on and off the field. But he was sorry that they did not go farther in the finals but if they continued their efforts victory also awaits them in this connection.

The next toast proposed by the chairman was "The King," which was ably responded to by W. P. Plant.

"Our Municipality" was fittingly responded to Reeve W. M. Fowld Councillor C. B. Plant and ex-Councillor R. C. Doxsee.

The toast to "The Ladies" fell into Master hands in Capt. Bill Tate, who was called on to respond. He was right at home on the subject and wished to thank the Ladies the citizens, the Hastings A.A.A. the committee who had charge and also Dr. J. H. Hess president, on behalf of the boys for the handsome way they had been threated all season.

Bruce Richardson and S. Stevenson also to thanked the people of Hastings for their loyal support all season.

A vote of thanks was tendered Mr. Spooner and his assistants by the committee in charge.

The wee small hours were spent in dancing and music.

CAMPBELLFORD AND DISTRICT

A Play in St. Andrew's Schoolroom — Seymour West Women's Institute —Personals.

CAMPBELLFORD, Dec. 1.—The humorous play, "Our Aunt From California," given last evening in St. Andrew's school room, under the auspices of the Young Ladies' Mission Circle, drew a crowded house, and was a decided success, each young lady taking her part with much credit. The caste was as follows:

Mrs. Needey, their mother—Miss Verna Hay.

Miss Wilcoxngibs (dressmaker)—Miss Bessie Locke.

Mrs. Merry Muntoburn (their aunt)—Mrs. John Storie.

Synopsis— Mrs. Needey, who is absent from home, writes her daughter of the intended visit of their aunt from California, who is going to invite one of her three nieces to accompany her on a trip to Europe. She also gives the young ladies a hint as to the type of girl the aunt admires most. All three vie with one another in ingratiating themselves into the aunt's good graces, when a faked telegram arrives and opened by Sally, informing them of her postponed visit. Whereupon Miss Sally decided to impersonate her aunt and get the joke on her sisters, which she does even after the aunt's arrival and does it so cleverly that she is chosen to go to Europe.

The following excellent programme was also rendered:

Miss Margaret Dickson rendered a solo in her usual sweet voice, which was much appreciated. Mr. John Storie, who is always a favorite with Campbellford audiences, sang a Scotch song "In My Ain We House" and was heartily applauded. A piano solo by Mrs. John Storie and an instrumental duet by Misses Faye Ketcheson and Emma Meiklejohn merited very hearty applause, as did also a vocal solo by Miss Hazel Atkinson, which was rendered very sweetly. Mrs. Ernest Cochrane rendered in a fine voice a comic song, "I've Got the Mumps," which won a hearty encore. The concluding number, a pantomine by five young ladies, Misses Dorothy Ackerman, Helen MacDonald, Eva and Mary Inkster, and Jean Locke, "My Faith Looks Up to Thee," was beautifully acted.

The young ladies of St. Andrew's are certainly to be congratulated upon the excellent programme rendered.

Rev. C. F. McIntosh in his usual efficient manner, occupied the chair and Miss Hawley, Mrs. Storie, Miss Ketcheson and Miss Meiklejohn acted as accompanists for the evening.

Seymour West Institute.

The regular monthly meeting of Seymour West Women's Institute was held at the home of Mrs. George Vanvolkenburg on Friday evening, November 27th. The meeting opened by singing the Institute ode, after which the president took charge of the meeting. As this was a social evening, a good programme was rendered and a very enjoyable evening spent by all present. Regular business was discussed and it was decided that a new delegate be appointed, with Mrs. David Stillman to attend the convention in Toronto.

Mr. Thomas Rowe was then appointed chairman, filling the position most capably. The following programme was then rendered: Song, "OCanada," by a number of girls, followed by a humorous reading by Miss Craven, entitled "Inventions." Little Miss Ruby Dunham gave a recitation "Happy Face." Mrs. Chas. Macoun then gave a report of the London convention to which she was a delegate. Miss Jessie Brown read a paper, "A Jolly Life of a Farmer's Wife." The aim of the Institute at the present time is to provide new playgrounds for the schools. The Institute has also donated to the Northern Ontario fire sufferers a box of clothing valued at $85.50. A contest by the girls concluded a very pleasing programme, after which a very dainty luncheon was served.

Personals.

Miss Grace Gillespie, B.A., who has been teaching in Alberta during the summer, returned home this week, visiting her sister, Miss Nora Gillespie, Ottawa, on her way.

Mr. Vanvolkenburg, son of Mr. George Vanvolkenburg, of Trent River, has joined the staff of the Union bank.

Born—In Campbellford, on Thursday to Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Cook, Rear street, a son.

Mr. Ralph Locke, Seymour West, left this week for California, where he will visit his uncle.

MEXICO CITY, Dec. 1.—(Canadian Press.)—The police guard under orders of Alonzo Romero, fired into a crowd demanding water last evening and it is estimated that at least fifty were killed. Three bodies lay in sight of the correspondent, who was in the crowd.

Mexico City's lack of water, which for the last eight days has forced the city of nearly a million inhabitants to suffer, caused a spontaneous parade through the main streets to the city hall at 6 o'clock. Two thousand working men and taxi drivers, with a sprinkling of office men, marched, carrying banners demanding water.

Upon arrival at the city hall, the parade found a strong guard mounted on the roof of the building, and as the crowd surged up on the sidewalks, shots were heard.

Answering shots were fired from the crowd and shooting continued for nearly five minutes.

OVATIONS FOR PREMIER KING

Crowds Cheered Prime Minister to the Echo at Carleton Place and Almonte.

CARLETON PLACE, Dec. 1. — (Canadian Press).—Lanark County last night gave Premier King a very warm reception. In the towns of Almonte and Carleton Place he was received with tremendous enthusiasm.

In Carlton Place, as in Almonte, the Town Hall was incapable of accommodating the crowds. Hon. Jas. Murdock, Minister of Labor, shared in the great reception, and David Findlay, Liberal candidate, was cheered to the echo here in his home town and in the neighboring town of Almonte.

In reply to Mr. Meighen's attacks of the new Railway Board, the Prime Minister said the leader of the Opposition would be better employed trying to help than in trying to sow seeds of discord among the people over Canada's great nationally-owned railway system. He defended the Government in its reduction of freight rates on grain, and said again he was prepared to overlook any differences between the Liberals and Progressives in the accomplishment of the aims they had in common.

CHICKEN FEED FOR YOUNG FARMERS

Enthusiastic Meeting was Held Tuesday Evening in the Club-Rooms — Officers Elected.

The organized farm young people from the district surrounding Peterborough held their annual meeting and a fowl supper in the club rooms on Tuesday evening, Nov. 28.

When Harvey Webber, as chairman, had called the meeting to order the young people joined lustily in the singing of the U.F.Y.P.O. chorus A new and progressve group of officers were chosen for the ensuing year, the ballots resulting as follows: President, Roy Sanderson; Vice-President, Harold Lewis; Secretary-Treasurer, Gladys Lewis. The club appointed Harvey Webber as its delegate to the annual convention of the United Farmers at Toronto, which commences on Dec. 13. Three debating teams for competition in the East Peterborough debating league were then appointed as the debates commence on December 5.

At this juncture the chairman stopped, scratched is head, and finally thought of the eats which Mrs. W. R. Shields and Mabel Grant had prepared. When each of the healthy young appetites had been appeased by roast chicken, salads and cakes the toast master moved the toast to the king. The usual response was then sung.

The following list of toasts was then run off—To the winning team in the programme-membership competition—Moved by Stanley Grant Response by Roy Sanderson.

To the U. F. W. O.—Moved by Mary Tully; Response by Mrs. S. Redmond.

To the U.F.O. Moved by Carl Wilson; Response by W. R. Shield.

To our leaders,—Moved by Gladys Lewis; Response by Mrs. Shields.

Mary Lewis and Mabel Grant were appointed as a programme committee for the next meeting on Dec. 12.

The meeting closed with the National Anthem.

Charlton Cups, are for the uusual open bonspiel, which will probably be held the latter part of January or the beginning of February. With all these trophies this is likely to be a grand season for the roarin' game.

IRELAND IS PROJECTED

Commission Appointed by Government To Inquire Into the Matter.

DUBLIN, Dec. 1.— (Associated Press)—The commission appointed by the Irish Government to inquire into the working of Irish railways has just reported, with one dissenting vote, in favor of the nationalisation of the railways by the State. It is recommended, however, that the management be not in the hands of a State Minister, but by a National Railway Board representing various interests, including labor.

The present market value of the entire railway stock in Ireland is estimated at between twenty five and thirty millions pounds sterling which, it is suggested, should be acquired by a tribunal that would issue bonds at reasonable interest and redeemable from a sinking fund in instalmetns every ten years. The project of nationalization, however, has been broadly criticized; it is not popular.

The Irish railways are at present being run under difficulties. During the war fares were raised 100 percent, although the increase in England was only 75 per cent. This has now been reduced to 50 per cent. while the Irish 100 per cent. increase remains unaltered.

A CRITICAL POINT IN CARNEAU MURDER CASE.

Detective Gives Names of Two Men Rumor Connects With Crime.

QUEBEC, Dec. 1. — (Canadian Press).—One of the critical points upon which the Blanche Garneau murder investigation may possibly turn was reached at yesterday afternoon's sitting of the Royal Commission, when Detective Valade, in cross-examination, gave, under protection of the court, two names that had been persistently connected with the crime in popular rumors. They are the names of sons of two members of the Provincial Legislature, but he based his declaration upon the apparent similarity of descriptions given to him by Duval and that of the two men named, not according to his own knowledge or finding or belief, but according to what others had told him. Since he admitted that he had no personal knowledge of the parties' names.

The names mentioned were those of "Bill" Martin Maddea and Arthur Paquet.

FOUND WONDERFUL RELIEF FROM CONSTIPATION BY USING MILBURN'S LAXA-LIVER PILLS

Constipation is one of the most prevalent troubles the human race is subject to, and is the greatest cause of many of our ailments, for if the bowels cease to perform their proper functions all the other organs will become deranged.

Keep your bowels working gently and naturally by the use of Milburn's Laxa-Liver Pills, and thus do away with the constipation and all other troubles caused by it.

Mrs. A. R. Spence, Springhill, N. S., writes:—"I have suffered for some time from constipation, and was advised by a friend to try Milburn's Laxa-Liver Pills. After taking a vial of them I have found wonderful relief, and would advise all those who are constipated to give them a trial, for I feel sure they will also receive the same benefit I did."

Price 25c. a vial at all dealers or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

RUSSIA NOW BUILDING ITS OWN LOCOMOTIVES

MOSCOW, Dec. 1.—(Associated Press)—Russian locomotive works are operating satisfactorily, it has been announced by the government, that hereafter it will not be necessary to purchase railway engines from foreign countries.

To date the Soviets have received 680 locomotives from Germany with 20 more to come, and 180 from Sweden, with 300 yet to be delivered.

Stop those dull, insistent aches, by relieving the painful congestion. Sloan's does this. Without rubbing, it quickly penetrates the sore spot, stimulating the circulation to and through it. Congestion is reduced, soreness allayed, the pain relieved.

ORIGIN OF THE CITY OF LONDON

One Historian Ascribes Foundation of Metropolis to Brutus—Called It Troy.

LONDON, Nov. 30. — (Canadian Press).—The origin of the city of London has not been penetrated by the historians. One of the oldest, Geoffrey of Monmouth, ascribed the founding of the city to Brutus, who called it New Troy, but the earliest authentic record is that of Tacitus, who, writing in A.D. 61, described London as a place "copia negotiatorum et commeatuum maxime celebre"—rendered, liberally, "much frequented by a number of merchants and trading vessels."

London's position, sixty miles inland, at the head of navigation of a deep tidal river, gave to it commanding advantages as a centre of distribution. To the end of the eighteenth century its trade was carried on either at moorings in the stream, by the aid of barges and lighters, or at wharves constructed on the riverside.

There were no enclosed docks in that period, with warehouses where valuable cargoes might be stored in security. Losses by theft and damage became so serious that public opinion was aroused in the City of London, and a scheme was promoted and the money guaranteed by the leading merchants for constructing enclosed docks. As a result a bill was passed by Parliament in 1799 authorizing the construction of the West India Docks, the beginning of the modern dock system as it is today. The foundation stone was laid with great ceremony in the presence of Premier Pitt and his Cabinet in 1800, and the docks were completed and opened to shipping in 1802.

So successful was this first venture that what would be called today a "boom" in dock-creating enterprise ensued, and further schemes in the Port of London were promoted and sanctioned by Parliament at short intervals. Prior to 1909, when the Port Authority was created, the provision of facilities and accommodation was in the hands of private undertakings, which had become impoverished by unwise competition one against the other, and consequently lacked the means to carry out the requirements necessary to keep abreast of the times. A state of inaction had existed for nearly thirty years, and this was becoming a menace to London's position as the world's centre of commerce. Then a Royal Commission was appointed to administer the various dock undertakings on the River Thames.

Lloyd George was then President of the Board of Trade and put through Parliament a Government Bill creating the Port of London Authority, 1903, and this came into effect in 1909. The beautiful Port of London Authority Administration Building, which was formally opened a short time before Lloyd George resigned the Premiership, is a monument of which the Port Authority and the citizens of London generally, have reason to be proud. It cost £10,000,000, and is considered to be one of the most beautiful buildings in London.

This Will Ward Off And Break Up Colds

THE two ailments that people generally regard as of the least importance are in reality the cause of most serious illness and of the greatest proportion of deaths. They are constipation and common colds. Many doctors believe that colds, tonsilitis, a touch of malaria will cause constipation, instead of constipation being their cause. The fact remains that you seldom have a cold without constipation, due to general congestion. The only way to avoid colds is to keep up your vitality. You usually catch cold in the winter if you are run down. Therefore in cold weather exercise more; eat more fatty foods; drink four to six glasses of water a day; keep the head cool, the feet warm, the bowels open.

You are also less liable to colds if your system is free from the intestinal poisons of constipation. so empty the bowels regularly with a plain vegetable laxative like Dr. Caldwell's Laxative Syrup Pepsin. At the first sign of a cold, at the first few warning sneezes, take a teaspoonful of Laxative Syrup Pepsin and the congestion will be gone in a few hours. Don't wait until the cold has a grip on you. Mr. R. H. Powell, of Gilbert Plains, Man., consiflers Laxative Syrup Pepsin the best laxative heever used, and Mrs. Chas. Lewis, of Winnipeg, Man., uses it effectively for all the small ills of her family, such as constipation, biliousness, headaches, dizziness, and to break up fevers and colds.

Dr. Caldwell's Laxative Syrup Pepsin is a scientifically-balanced compound of Egyptian senna with pleasant-tasting aromatics. It is safe to give to infants, and all children like it. Before you again resort to cold remedies containing narcotics try a teaspoonful of Syrup Pepsin. Any druggist will supply you, and the cost is less than a cent a dose.

ANY FAMILY MAY TRY IT FREE

Thousands of parents are asking themselves, "Where can I find a trustworthy laxative that anyone in the family can use when constipated?" I urge you to try my Laxative Syrup Pepsin. I will gladly provide a liberal free sample bottle, sufficient for an adequate test. Write me where to send it. Address Dr. W. B. Caldwell, 23 Caldwell Building., Toronto, Ont. Do it now!

PHOTOGRAPHED THE ECLIPSE OF THE SUN

Great Results Expected From Western Australia Expedition.

VICTORIA, B.C., Nov. 30.—(Canadian Press).—Interesting details of the Western Australia solar eclipse expedition, the results of which are expected to prove or disprove Einstein's theory of relativity, when photographs of the phenomena are developed and measured, were supplied to the Canadian Press by Professor C. A. Chant of the Department of Astrophysics of the University of Toronto, on his arrival here from Australia.

The most important part of Professor Chant's statement was carried in the leased wire report.

The expedition went to Wallal, Western Australia, to see and pohotograph the eclipse of the sun and incidentally to test Prof. Einstein's relativity theory. One thousandth of an inch is said to be all that lies between Einstein being hailed as a true or false prophet—a measurement that in most people's minds is lumped with iotas and jots and similar mythical standards, embalmed in popular sayings.

The eclipse of the sun occurred at 1.30 p.m. of September 21 last. It lasted five minutes, Prof. Chant stated. But the Chant expedition waited four weeks for the eclipse and it took ten days to get the apparatus in position for the observations and photographic exposures.

"We were treated with every courtesy by the Australian government and every assistance was given us in the accomplishing of our object," said Prof. Chant. There were about forty members in the expedition, from this continent, England and India. The United States party included H. Moore and Dr. and Mrs. Campbell from the Lick Observatory.

The members of the party had a most exciting experience in landing at Wallal, which isolated point they reached in a schooner from Broome. With the open sea ceaselessly pounding the shores, it was impossible to make a landing except by wading through the heavy surf. To Mrs. and Miss Chant, who accompanied the professor, and the other ladies of the party this was a thrilling experience.

Perfect weather favored the astronomers at Wallal on the day of the eclipse. The morning dawned with a gentle breeze which died away during the forenoon and was replaced by a sea breeze. About ten minutes before the total phase activity commenced, the plate holders were slipped into position, the dark slides were drawn and in the case of spectroscopic investigations, photos were obtained on iron arcs or special tubes for comparison purposes.

Long before this, the whole appearance of the landscape had changed. The sky had become a deeper blue, excepting near the horizon, where a peculiar yellow tinge was noticeable. The western sky was distinctly darker than the eastern, and this difference became more marked as totality drew nearer. The change in the character of the light during the last two minutes before the total phase was remarkable. The landscape assumed in turn a yellowish and then a greenish blue, then a purple color and the shadows cast by the narrow crescent sun were sharp and harsh. Just as the moon covered the sun, the phenomenon of "Railey's Reads" was noticed, the thin crescent breaking up into a series of brilliant detached points like the gems in a necklace. At the same time the corona burst into view. It presented a beautiful appearance, being of the irregular type generally associated with periods of sunspot minimum. Surrounding the black disc of the moon there was a brilliant ring of light and then several long streamers appeared.

One of these, in a westerly direction, was traceable out to a distance of about three million miles from the sun. The color of the corona was not pure white, but tended to a creamy tinge. The great brilliance of the inner portion of the corona to some extent detracted from the brightness of the streamer, but neverhheless the rayed corona was a wonderful sight. With the advent of totality the eclipse programmes were started and carried through with clockwork precision. All the parties expressed themselves as thoroughly satisfied with their observations. As they were chiefly photographic it is yet too soon to speak of the scientific value of the records obtained; but there is every reason to believe that Wallal will be associated always with important advances in astronomy.

The main visual observations made were in connection with the shadow bands—the dusky streaks which flit across the ground just before and after totality. On this occasion the bands were very indistinct and traveled faster than usual, the speed being about six miles per hour. Observations made bear out the theory that these bands are due to inequalities in our atmosphere rather than to anything connected with the sun and moon.

The eclipse was possibly darker than the average, but lamps were never needed. The contrast to the previous sunlight was very noticeable during the first minute of totality, but as one got used to the conditions the light seemed quite fair. The recovery to normal sunlight after totality was quite rapid. The aborigines were rather afraid of the eclipse and kept out of sight until daylight returned to normal. They amassed some astronomical knowledge of eclipses but did not feel too certain about it. The forty-foot camera was regarded by them with a certain awe. They passed it at a safe distance. After the eclipse was over the aborigines appeared satisfied with the efforts of the astronomers to clear up the sun again.

A Clear, Beautiful Skin

There are millions of tiny openings or pores in the skin and these must be kept open and clean if the beauty of the skin is to be maintained.

Because it cleanses these pores and encourages the healthful action of the skin, Dr. Chase's Ointment is most effective as a skin beautifier. Roughness, redness, pimples and all sorts of skin blemishes disappear by its use, and the skin is left clear, smooth and velvety.

PRIVATE BANK NOW OPENED IN RUSSIA

Organized As a Trade Bank By H. Ashberg, Swedish Financier.

MOSCOW, Nov. 30. — (Associated Press).—The first private bank in Soviet Russia, the Russian Commercial Bank, begins operations this month.

This bank has been organized as a trade bank by H. Ashberg, a Swedish financier, with the aid of American and German capital. The Russian state bank of Moscow has one member on the board and participates in the capital to the extent of 10 per cent. The founders of the bank do not intend to finance industry, but will assist in the organization of several limited companies with foreign capital for the development of vital industries.

For the purpose of banking operations in Germany a special bank, The Guaranty and Credit bank for the East, is being organized in Berlin with the aid of the Russian state bank, through which all operations of the new Commercial Bank will pass.

WOMAN HERO OF CUBA PROUDLY DECLINES AID

Ninety-Four Years Old, Juana Arias Attained Grade of Colonel.

SANTIAGO DE CUBA, Nov. 30.—(Associated Press).—Ninety-four years old, Juana Arias, the only woman who ever attained the grade of colonel in the Cuban revolutionary forces by courage under fire, steadfastly refuses to cede an atom of her independence by accepting either government or private aid.

Juana lives alone in a little thatched hut near Manzanillo, and her scanty wants are met by the sale of leaves for thatch from the palm trees that dot her little domain. The inseparable companion of her husband, Brigadier General Angel Maestre, she fought through the Ten Year War and, encouraging her husband in his refusal to submit under the Treaty of Zanjon in 1878, she accompanied him in his exile in the United States and Mexico. "La Coronela" returned to Cuba only after the Spaniards had been expelled.

ENTHUSIASM IN ROME LEAVES ONE MAN COLD

Triumphant Entry of the Fascisti Had Saddening Effect on Stranger.

ROME, Dec. 1. — (Associated Press)—"Buena Sera" the Italian equivalent to the English "good evening" when uttered with the customary Italian speed, is not unlike the English pronunciation of the name of the capital of Argentina, Buenos Aires.

In the midst of the enthusiastic celebration that followed the triumphant entry of the Facisti into Rome when streets, bars and cafes were filled with holiday makers, a handsome dark young man, alone and forlorn, sat dejectedly in a corner of one of the busiest hotels lobbies in Rome.

So lonely did he seem that some young Fascisti officers imbued with the spirit of their glorious day, and finding sadness out of place in the universal rejoicing, approached him in an evident effort to cheer him up.

"Buena Sera" one of the party greeted the lonely one.

Languidly the young man looked up and in a tone of infinite longing, replied:

"No, Rio Janiero."

FANATIC RESPONSIBLE FOR MONTREAL BLAZE.

MONTREAL, Dec. 1.—(Canadian Press.)— Anti-Roman Catholic incendiary is blamed for the fire which last night destroyed the dental department of the University of Montreal, and it is hinted that Ku Klux Klan propaganda "may have inspired him." Last night's fire was the third within two years in the University. No specific information, however, is available about the commencement of the fire, though Professors and students connected with the institution, which is Roman Catholic, appear firmly convinced a religious fanatic is responsible. sponsible.

VOICE OF THE PEOPLE

RE GARBAGE CONTRACT.

Sir,—Will you permit me to offer a suggestion regarding the above important question? It refers to an item appearing in your paper lately, where, in discussing the matter in Council it was stated that Withers and Angelsey's contract was $50.00 more than Mitchell and Bennett's. In this connection I wish to point out that during the three previous years Withers and Angelsey saved the city $1,500.00 by being the lowest tenderers. These men are both returned soldiers, and have given the city the very best service possible, and it does appear to me as though they should, under the circumstances, be given the preference, as, in reality, taking the four years into consideration, they have saved the city $1,750.00. It might be pointed out too that they were burned out recently and suffered a considerable loss. I do not suggest that they be given a contract solely from sentimental views, but when these views, along with business savings, are considered, I am of the opinion that these are two strong factors in favor of Messrs. Withers and Angelsey.

Thanking you for giving this to the public through your valuable paper, I remain, yours truly,

A. Cuppy.

To the Editor Examiner,

Dear Sir,—I notice in Thursday night's paper that Elector has sent in a list of names all new faces, of men whom he would like to see run for the Council. I have no fault to find with any of them, but just in order to make the list larger I submit the follwing names. As I am a Labor man I have handed in a Labor list.

W. Stevens, (Bricklayer),
Arthur Sharpe, (Pattern Maker),
Thos. Starr, (Moulder)
Wm. Hales,
T. J. McMurray, (Carpenter),
T. Stenton, (Moulder),
Yours truly,
Another Elector

HUNTER WHO KILLED MAN WORN BY GRIEF.

Watched 48 Hours Over Body of Victim of His Error.

CLIMAX, Mich., Dec. 1.—Word has been received from Beulah, Mich., home of Marion Alkire, who accidentally shot and instantly killed Frank Scramlin, local lumber dealer, a week ago Sunday, while deer-hunting in Luce County, that Alkire is unconscious in his home, suffering from exposure during a 48-hour vigil over the corpse and from grief over the shooting.

The prosecuting attorney of Luce County wrote the widow of Scramlin, asking if she intended to prefer charges against Alkire. She replied she did not. She asked, however, that inquiries be made to determine whether Alkire was intoxicated at the time of the accident, and, if so, that he be denied a hunting license in the future.

Proof that he was sober was furnished her. Recent word concerning Alkire's present condition has caused Mrs. Scramlin to waive further investigation.

KIWANIS SHOW HAD ANOTHER BIG CROWD.

Two-Night Show Was a Big Success—Christmas Cheer for the Under-privileged.

Last evening the Kiwanis Minstrels scored another success in their presentation of "Sinbad the Sailor," at the Grand Opera House. The chorus was particularly fine and the individual work of the performers did not suffer by repetition. At the conclusion of the performance, the company adjourned to the Louis Cafe, where a late supper was served followed by a few speeches in which generous reference was made to the success of the show. At the time of going to press the manager of the show had not decided whether to go to Montreal or Fraserville for the next booking but the majority of the performers are in favor of Montreal.

The proceeds of the show will bring Santa Claus into a number of Peterboro homes.

HON. RODOLPHE LEMIEUX HAD PRIVATE AUDIENCE.

ROME, Dec. 1.—(Canadan Press.)—Hon. Rudolph Lemieux had a private audience to-day with Pope Pius, who spoke of his affection for Canada and praised the religious spirit of its people. He said that spiritually and materially Canada was the hope of the new world. Her future destiny must be bright, illumined as it was by heroism, courage and devotion of early missionaries and pioneers of the country.

HOUSE AT BOBCAYGEON DESTROYED BY FIRE.

Family Away at Time and Nothing Was Saved.

LINDSAY, Dec. 1.—The residence owned by Mr. David Hetherington, of Bobcaygeon, and occupied by Bruce Freeburn, was totally destroyed by fire in that village a couple of days ago.

The family were all away at the time and nothing was saved. Mr. Freeburn had no insurance on the contents.

SCSOONER GIVEN UP FOR LOST IN LAKES.

BELLEVILLE, Dec. 1.— (Canadian Press.)—"Katie Eccles is probably sunk by this time," said Capt. Mitchell, of the schooner, who arrived here to-day from Timber Island. He and his crew abandoned the coal laden vessel Wednesday because she was dragging at anchor. They spent Wednesday and Thursday in a brush tent, which they built ou the island. They were taken Thursday at noon by lighthouse keeper at Main Ducks. Mitchell leaves for Kingston this evening.

WOMAN ADMITS TAKING PART IN THE KILLING.

CALGARY, Dec. 1.— (Canadian Press.)—"I shot Lawson," admitted Mrs. Florence Lassandra, accused with Emil Piccarillo of the murder of Constable Lawson at Colema last September, when formally charged with the murder. So said Sergeant Scott of the Provincial Police in evidence at the trail yesterday.

Mrs. Lassandra, he declared, admitted with Piccarillo that the reason for the trip to Colema on the night of the murder was to "get Lawson" for shooting his son Steve, an alleged rum runner, early in the day.

FOUR MEN ARE LOST IN A PORTLAND FIRE.

PORTLAND, Oregon, Dec. 1. — (Canadian Press.)— Four men lost their lives in a fire early to-day in the Ben Hur Hoel, formerly known as the Oak Hotel. None of the dead had been identified several hours after the fire.

All other guests are reported to have escaped in their night attire.

A REAL COMMERCIAL OUTLET FOR INVENTED.

A letter has been received by the Chamber of Commerce stating the fact that the First Universal Exposition of Inventions and Patents will be given in Grand Central Palace, New York City, February, 17-22, 1923. There has ever been any real commercial outlet for the inventor, after he had been granted his patient, nor any co-ordinated assistance in its development in the past and that is the exact purpose in view by the Exposition. Industry owes its rapid growth to the foresight of its captains, who had the vision of seeing the possibilities of many of the inventions that are now basic to our Industrial Life. A great many of these developments have taken place by the chance of Industry and Inventions meetings.

The object of this Exposition is to fulfill an important universal need, and it is intended to:—

(a) Bring the capital of America and the inventive brain of the world together.

(b) Give all inventors full opportunity to show the public, the manufacturer, the merchant, the capitalist and financier, the possibilties for utility, business, trade and commerce that lies in their inventions.

The Exposition will be a veritable "Clearing House of Ideas" through which the men of originality and ideas is brought in personal contact with the man in need of ideas and with the man of money.

One of the features of the Universal Exposition of Inventions and Patients will be to celebrate, each day of the Exposition, one of the world's great inventors or scientists, respectively Marconi, Steinmetz, Edison, Bell and Westinghouse.

This event affords a chance for Peterborough inventors and men with ideas of all kinds to turn them over for service and eventually cash. All those who anticipate entering this Exposition can receive further particulars from the local Chamber of Commerce or write for particulars to Universal Patent Exposition Corporation, World's Tower Building, 110 West 40th Street, New York City."

St. LOUIS, Mo., Dec. 1— Charges of peace disturbance against Mr. and Mrs. Edward F. Rehecker of Chicago, and Miss Mary Daugherty of St. Louis, growing out of a horse whipping administered Redecker and Miss Daugherty by Mrs. Redecker were dropped in police court to-day. The Redecker effected a reconciliation.

Redecker, 50 years old, and Miss Daugherty, 28 years have been collecting funds for a religious organization, and Mrs. Redecker used a raw ride on the two when Miss Daugherty entered her husband's room at a local hotel.

Mr. and Mrs. Redecker left the police court arm in arm. Mss Daugherty was in tears to-day. "They have given Mrs. Redecker my job," she sobbed.

FIERY, ITCHING SKIN IS QUICKLYSOOTHED WITH THIS SULPHUR

Mentho-Sulphur, a pleasant cream, will soothe and heal skin that is irritated or broken out with eczema; that is covered with ugly rash or pimples, or is rough or dry. Nothing subdues fiery skin eruptions so quickly, says a noted skin specialist.

The moment this sulphur preparation is applied the itching stops and after two or three applications, the eczema is gone and the skin is delightfully clear and smooth. Sulphur is so precious as a skin remedy because it destroys the parasites that cause the burning, itching or disfigurement. Mentho-Sulphur always heals eczema right up.

A small jar of Mentho-Sulphur may be had at any drug store.

EDMONTON ESKIMOS PRACTISE IN TORONTO.

Reached Queen City This Afternoon on Way to Kingston.

TORONTO, Dec. 1.— (Canadian Press.)—Edmonton Eskimos arrived in Toronto this afternoon on their way to Kingston. On their arrival the westerners announced that they would practice this afternoon at Varsity Stadium and leave for Kingston at 5.30. The Eskimos had planned to arrive in Kingston in time to have a practice at the Richardson stadium there this afternoon, but owing to not making train connections at North Bay they were several hours late in reaching Toronto.

CREAM FOR CATARRH OPENS UP NOSTRILS

Tells How To Get Quick Relief from Head-Colds. It's Splendid!

In one minute your clogged nostrils will open, the air passages of your head will clear and you can breathe freely. No more hawking snuffing, blowing, headache, dryness. No struggling for breath at night, your cold or catarrh will be gone.

Get a small bottle of Ely's Cream Balm from your druggist now. Apply a little of this fragrant, antiseptic healing cream in your nostrils. It penetrates through every air passage of the head, soothes the inflamed or swollen mucous membrane and relief comes instantly.

It's just fine. Don't stay stuffed up with a cold or nasty catarrh—Relief comes so quickly.

STEAMER WRECK

Duguay, Montreal; Hiram Willard, Stella, Ont.; John Wood, Hamilton; Florian Brian, Montreal; Wm. McClibbon, Woodstock; G. Mallette, Cascades Point, Que., and Malcolm McCaskille, Cape Breton.

The Maplehurst was formerly the Cadallac, of United States registry, owned by Cleveland Cliffs Iron Company. She was purchased by Canada S. S. Lines, her present owners, and re-named the Maplehurst. She was en route to Port Arthur with coal from Ashtabula, under the command of Captain Menard, of Montreal.

According to the coastguard service, Capt. Bernard and six others lost their lives because they declined to jump from the bridge. The rescue was effected in the teeth of a gale of hurricane proportions. The lifeboat ran alongside the ship time and again, only to be washed back. The Maplehurst is 200 feet long, with an iron hull, and was bound from Lorain, Ohio, to Port Arthur, with one thousand tons of coal. She sank in 25 feet of water, and this forenoon only her funnels are visible above the surface.

Faith in C. O. Investment

Sir Adam said that the vendors of the Central Ontario system had the right to dictate to the Government as to the 10-year bonds instead of the 50-year securities, as recommended, and the Government had to accept it. He would have recommended the change rather than lose the property.

In discussion of the various properties taken over in the O.C. purchase. Sir Adam said that all of these properties were getting into improved positions, where they could operate and take care of the various obligations. He believed the Government would ultimately be protected on its investment.

WILL PERERBOROUGH SEE REVIVAL THIS WINTER?

This Was the Burden of Billy Matheson's Message Last Evening.

The burden of Evangelist Billy Mathesons' message last night was, are we or are we not to have a revival in the City of Peterborough? The answer to this question rests with the people of God themselves, with the ministers and members of our churches. The evangelist made it clear last night that God was willing to bless and revive the churches. He preached one of his wonderfully powerfully yet tender messages. He hits sin and the devil as hard as he must have struck his opponent in a prize fight in the days when he lived in sin. At times his actions and gestures in the pulpit impress one as if he were in deadly struggle with an antagonist, as indeed he is, for he is engaged in a great fight with the powers of evil. When he strikes out at the sins of society it is straight from the shoulder and without gloves. Then when he turns fro the sins which are damning man, and marring and ruining thier manhood, to speak of the love of God for the sinful he becomes as tender in his pleading as a mother pleading with a wayward boy to come home to mother and love and God. One wonders how any man can hear him and still remain away from God. He strongly urged Christian people to continue to pray for a revival. He is here as the servant of God and not as the servant of any one church. He has engaged the Bethany Tabernacle as a suitable location for special meetings, but people of all churches attend and are invited to attend. He will give a special message to children and young people Saturday afternoon at three o'clock.

INTEREST IN WAITRESS LANDS HIM IN COURT.

British Lecturer Says Wife Knew, But Magistrate and Prosecutor Sceptical.

NEW YORK, Dec. 1.—His friendly interest for Helen Lilly, a waitress(discharged last week by the C. and L. Restaurant Company, which conducts a string of restaurants in this city, resulted in the arraignment in West Side Court of Saxby Vouler Penfold, of 250 West Seventy-Second Street, describing himself as a writer and lecturer and president and organizer of the British-American Association, which came into being after the war to promote friendly feeling between the United States and the United Kingdom.

Penfold went to the offices of the restaurant company at 205 West Seventy-Sixth Street and demanded of Samuel Levine, an official, that the waitress be reinstated. It developed that she was discharged because Penfold's lengthy conversations with her at one of the restaurants "held up the works." It was charged that Penfold's interference resulted in Levine calling a patrolman.

Penfold admitted his interest in the waitress and said he had gone out with her, but that his wife went along, too.

"Your wife must be very indulgent," said Magistrate John E. McGeehan. "I'm sure my wife wouldn't let me get away with anything like that."

"Nor would mine," chimed in Assistant District Attorney Henry Goodmar, who recently became the father of twins.

Penfold was found guilty of the charge, but sentence was suspended.

For the average healthy man, engaged in ordinary work, 118 grams of proteids, 56 grams of fat, 500 grams of carbohydrate, 39 grams of salt and three liters of water has long been recognized as the ideal daily food allowance.

ENTIRE FAMILY WIPED OUT IN AUTO KILLING.

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., Dec. 1.—An entire family was killed here when a automobile carrying Mr. and Mrs. Percy Wilcox and their two daughters, 1 and 3 years old, was struck by a Chicago and Alton north bound passenger train.

A snowstorm prevented them from seeing the train. They resided six miles south of Springfield.

The engine and three passenger coaches were stripped of steam piping in passing over the wrecked auto mobile so that a new engine and new coaches had to be substituted before the train could continue.

EFFICACY OF FINGER-PRINT METHOD SHOWN.

CHICAGO, Dec. 1.—In more than 90 per cent. of cases the guilt of criminals is definitely established by finger print identification, James F. Bishop, of Chicago, told the second annual convention of the Allied States Association of Identification, which opened at Joliet under the presidency of Edward J. Hargreaves. A. J. Renoe, chairman of the Federal Bureau of Identification, also spoke at the meeting, which was attended by more than one hundred police investigators.

FORGET BRIBE FACTS AT TRIAL OF POLICE.

Complainants Lose Memory of Details When Called to the Witness Stand.

NEW YORK, December 1. — Police Sergeant James H. Noziglia and Patrolmen Walter A. Asklund, Geo. P. Stacey and Charles H. Seifried, all attached to the Bath Beach Police Station, were on trial yesterday before Judge George W. Moartin, in the King's County Court, and charged with accepting a bribe. Assistant District Attorney Marshall Snyder is in charge of the prosecution, while Attorneys Edward J. Reilly and Julian Carabba represent the defendants.

The indictments charge that on the night of October 6 last the policemen accepted $100 from Antonio Martorello of 2838 Stillwell Avenue, to release him after he had been caught transporting a barrel of wine on his motor truck. The capture of Martorello took place on Harway Avenue near Cooney Island Creek. The indictments were based mainly on the evidence given before the Grand Jury by Martorello and his nephew, Louis Bruno.

Martorello in making his complaint, stated that when he was caught with the wine on his truck, the policeman demanded $200, and that when he told them he did not have that amount he was taken to his home in the patrol wagon. He stated to Mr. Snyder that he got $100 and then returned to the point where the policemen were waiting for him. He took his nephew with him and declared that the latter saw him give the money to the policemen. Bruno corroborated the story.

Martorello and Bruno were called as the principal witnesses yesterday. To the astonishment of Mr. Snyder he found that both of the witnesses possessed very poor memories. In some of the minor details of the story they told when the original complaint was made their memory was good, but when it came to any important detail concerning their charge against the policemen, their usual answer was "I do not remember."

KIDNAP CHICAGOIANS IN CLOSED CARS NOW.

CHICAGO, Dec. 1.—Kidnappers have been active in Chicago, according to report to the police.

An unusually polite bandit intruded on a party of five in a cafe and after drinking with them until the departure of two members, kidnapped a woman and two men in the taxicab that had been waiting for them. According to the chauffeur's story, he robbed the men and made them leave, politely giving each a dollar. Next he escorted the young woman home and paid the taxicab bill of $20. How much money the robber obtained the chauffeur did not know and the victims did not report.

Mrs. Thelma O'Keefe reported to the police that she had been kidnapped by three men in a closed motor car. The kidnapping occurred after she had dismissed a taxicab in front of her home.

Police also were working on a theory that Catherine Dorgan, 6 years old, who failed to return home from church, had been kidnapped.

BANDITS SLAY OHIO OFFICER IN AMBUSH.

Two Caught After a Gun Battle —Hid in Stolen Automobile.

COLUMBUS, Ohio., Dec. 1.—Hidden in a stolen automobile, four bandits early this morning shot two Columbus policemen, killing one. To-night one of the four had been shot dead, two had been captured, following gun fights with police posses, and one was still at large.

The bandits started the series of battles this morning after they had been arrested for stealing the car they rode in. They sped away after a gun taken from under the cushion of the car. They sped away after killing Patrolman Koehler. Corporal Friddle, lying on the ground, emptied two pistols he had taken from them at one car. One shot found its mark, for when the car was found abandoned, fifteen miles away this morning, one desperado, known only as "Bill", was inside, dead.

Three of the bandits were seen late to-day entering a farm house. Police surrounded the house and opened fire. After returning the fire the fugitives ran ut of a back door into a woods. One "Loomie" Cummins, fell, injuring his knee and was captured.

Soon afterward the police closed in on James Martin. He pointed a revolver at his head and fired in an attempt at suicide. Physcians say he will live.

Scores of Columbus and Springfield policemen and deputized citizens were scouring the woods and hills southwest of Columbus to-night for the missing bandit, aided by huge torches and fire department searchlights.

Cummins is said to have confessed that the men formerly were employed as mine guards in the Pittsburg district and were on the way to Southern Indiana to rob a bank.

In the Mississippi river, between St. Paul and the mouth of the Missouri, there are 540 islands large enough to be known by names or numbers, to the mouth of the Ohio 69 more, to the mouth of the Red river another 147, thence to the Gulf only three.

My! How a Top Spins Merrily When First Set in Motion and oh! how it topples when its force is well spent, finally swaying drunkenly and ultimately falling over completely. It maintains its equilibrium only when travelling at a high rate of speed.

Businesses must keep whirling to keep going.

At The Cressman Store it is the momentum of the satisfied customers that keeps business rotating steadily.

The Cressman Co. Ltd.

Values up to $42

A smart assortment of Dresses that present this season's most favored styles. They feature the straight-line and long-waisted blouse effects and some exemplify the circular side-closing that gives a novelty flare to the skirt. The materials are extra fine navy blue Poiret twills and tricotines. The trimmings are artistically arranged—braidings and cordings. Sizes 16 to 40.

Special Clearing Line of Misses' Cloth Dresses

An inexpensively priced lot that have the appearance of better models, which they are. Made of good qualities of serge, tricotine and homespun. The colors are navy, black, brown and heather mixtures. Contrasting colored trimmings of braid, embroidery and Canton crepe. Several styles to select from. Sizes 16, 18 and 20.

Warm Winter Coats for Women - - - $25

This collection of excellent Coats marked at this insignificant price carry themselves with dignity far above the $25 mark. The material is American velour; full loose lines with belt all around or in front, trimmings of self-colored stitchings. Choice of reindeer or brown tones. Sizes 16, 18 and 20.

A Raincoat Opportunity at $6.75
Worth Double This Amount

Persons who drive much have found there is nothing like a Rubberproofed Coat to break the wind. Some wear them over heavy woollen coats and some muffle with sweaters beneath. For those who do not drive the tweed numbers are ideal for any rainy, sleety occasion or moderate winter day. Parametta cloths and heavy rubberized tweeds.

PETERBORO BOY HONORED IN U.S.

Fred. D. Long, Born in Ashburnham, Elected to Minnesota State Legislature.

It will be of interest to many in Peterboro to learn that Fred D. Long, born in Ashburnham, has like many another boy from Peterboro, made exceedingly good across the border. In fact he has climbed somewhat higher the ladder of American appreciation of Canadian worth, in that for representative in the state legislature in Hubbard county, Minn., Fred D. Long of Park Rapids, had no opposition. Mr. Long understands well county and state affairs, has had good business experience and will give Hubbard County good representation in the next legislature, it is confidently held.

Fred Long was born in Ashburnham, March 19, 1873. He attended the Peterboro public school as a boy and later graduated from a course of training at the Peterboro Business College. In 1892 Mr. Long went to Minnesota, locating at Brainerd, where he was in the restaurant business for five years. He then went to Bemidji, where he was employed in the lumber camps for two years, and then became timekeeper and storekeeper for the M. and I. Railway, which position he held for three years. In 1903 Mr. Long went to Park Rapids to work as a bookkeeper for Wilson Bros., logging, and a year later became a member of the firm of the Wilson Logging Company. The Park Rapids Mill and Elevator Company, was organized in 1908, and Mr. Long became its vice-president and manager. This brought him in close touch with the farming interests of the community, the firm doing business with farmers all the way from Sekeka to Akeley. He served as manager of the company until its elevators were sold to the Farmers' Exchange, when he became the active manager of the Park Rapids Fuel and Supply Company.

The Press of Park Rapids commends Mr. Long as a public spirited man, whose business abilities have been recognized by the community in which he lives.

For eleven years he served on the Park Rapids school board, seven years being its president. Two years he served as president of the Commercial Club of Park Rapids, and for three years was a director of the Hubbard County Farm Bureau organization. He has served as superintendent of the Sunday school at the Episcopal church for several years and been an active supporter of that organization.

Fred Long and Miss Ellen Tighe were married at Peterboro in 1900, and to them were born four children three of whom are living, a daughter (Miss Mildred) having passed from this life during the past summer, at the age of 15 years.

"The business experiences through which Mr. Long has passed," says the Park Rapids Enterprise, "qualify him especially well for valuable service as representative to the Legislature. The large vote that he received from the farming communities in the primaries, indicates that through the past years his dealings with the producers has been honest and fair and that he is established in their confidence.

"Always showing an unselfish interest in the public affairs of the community in which he has made his home, Mr. Long has come to be regarded as a man who may be of real value to the community. His friends and business associates believe that in the legislature Mr. Long will serve well his home community and the state."

WILLIAM M. GRAY.
Vice President of Wm.-Gray-Sons-Campbell, Limited, Chatham, Ont.

Wm. A. Gray, vice-president of The Wm. Gray-Sons-Campbell Limited of Chatham, Ont., has just announced the alliance of his company with the Gray Motor Corporation of Detroit to market in Canada the Gray car.

The Wm. Gray-Sons-Campbell Limited, one of Canada's oldest anl largest business institutions, controls Gray-Dort Motors, manufacturers of the Gray-Dort car, and Gray-Campbell Limited, the big Western distributing organization. Established nearly three-quarters of a century ago, they have been for decades one of the biggest factors in the vehicle business in Canada, and since the rise of the automobile, have taken the same position in the motor car industry through their subsidiary.

Vice-President William Gray, who engineered the deal, for a long time has been in search of a car which would meet the widest possible need —a low-priced, complete car which would give the man who must save every possible dollar on his purchase better looks and better performances than he has been able to get.

Mr. Gray believes that in the Gray car he has found such an automobile. It is curious that the very car he was looking for should bear his own name.

Gray Motor Corporation was organized about fifteen years ago by the sons of John S. Gray, the first president and financial backer of Henry Ford when he went into the motor business in 1903. For years they built marine and stationary engines. But about two years ago they decided to enter the motor car field and F. F. Beall, who had been vice-president in charge of sales of the Packard Motor Co., became associated with Gray Motor Corporation. Shortly after Frank L. Klingensmith, vice-president and treasurer of the Ford Motor Company became president of Gray Motor Corporation.

The joint experience and ability of these men, who have reached the top of the industry, has gone into the Gray car. They have produced an automobile which will creat the biggest sensation of a decade because it gives so much for the money. In price it will compete with anything now on the market, while it will out-perform any car in its class. It already hold the official world's record for economy on a long run—made on a trip from San Francisco to New York.

The Gray car will be distributed throughout Canada by the many branches of Wm. Gray-Sons-Campbell Limited and the Gray franchise will be available for dealers in every city, town and village who have been looking for a car to meet the competition of the low-priced cars now on the market.

SANTA'S STOREHOUSE

With the first day of December arrived and the Christmas month actually launched a store like Botnick' Bros. where so many articles are peculiarly adapted as Gifts naturally bring to the front, the things that are most seasonable. Coupled with the fact that they are in the midst of their Year's Greatest Sale the presence of hundreds of useful articles of wearing apparel for Women, Men and Children means substantial savings at sale prices. As quoted in their large advertisement of yesterday, all new lines lately arrived for holiday selling are priced equally low as regular sale stock, and will surely attract buyers who feel the wisdom of careful shopping.

The Mississippi, frequently spoken of as the second longest river in the world, in reality is the fifth, being surpassed by the Amazon, the Nile, the Yangtse and the Yenisei, in the order given.

A SURPRISE

Men's Winter Coats and Suits to Measure at Remarkabiy Low Prices.

Occasionally we hear of an opportunity that seems to outclass others, and it is strange that quite often it seems to come from the same place, Peterboro Tailoring Co., Of course it is hard to interest, a man in a newspaper advertisement, but when he sees a man's tailored overcoat or suit advertised at such astonishing low prices as those mentioned in the large space used by this firm in to-day's paper, he is bound to sit up and take notice.

Any man who reads this and has not seen the ad, is advised to look it up. When he reads it he will know whether to act on it or not.

The RED HOUSE MYSTERY

by A. A. MILNE

BEGIN HERE TODAY

A revolver shot was heard two minutes after ROBERT ABLETT, ne'er-do-well brother of MARK ABLETT, the bachelor proprietor of The Red House, had returned from his 15 years' absence in Australia and been ushered into Mark's office.

MATT CAYLEY, Mark's companion, pounding on the locked door of the office and demanding admittance. The two men entered the office through a window and on the floor found the body of Robert with a bullet through the head. Mark was not to be found.

Police Inspector Birch believes that Mark has murdered his brother, whose visit he anticipated with annoyance, but there are several points which arouse Antony's suspicions. Cayley invites him to remain over the inquest and Antony informs Bill Beverley that "things are going to happen here soon."

GO ON WITH THE STORY

Cayley was walking across the lawn tow rd them, a big, heavy-shoulderea man, with one of those strong, clean-shaven, ugly faces which can never quite be called plain.

Cayley nodded as he came to them, and stood there for a moment.

"We can make room for you," said Bill, getting up.

"Oh, don't bother, thanks. I just came to say," he went on to Antony, "that naturally they've rather lost their heads in the kitchen, and dinner won't be till half-past eight. Do just as you like about dressing, of course."

Having said what he wanted to say, Cayley remained there a little awkwardly, as if not sure whether to go or to stay. Antony wondered whether he wanted to talk about the afternoon's happenings, or whether it was the one subject he wished to avoid. To break the silence he asked carelessly if the inspector had gone.

Cayley nodded. Then he said abruptly, "He's getting a warrant for Mark's arrest."

Bill made a suitably sympathetic noise, and Antony said with a shrug of the shoulders, "Well, he was bound to do that, wasn't he? It doesn't mean anything. They naturally want to get hold of your cousin, innocent or guilty."

"Which do you think he is, Mr. Gillingham?" said Cayley, looking at him steadily.

"Mark? It's absurd," said Bill impetuously.

"Bill's loyal, you see, Mr. Cayley."

"And you owe no loyalty to anyone concerned?"

"Exactly. So perhaps I might be too frank."

Bill had dropped down on the grass, and Cayley took his place on the seat, and sat there heavily, his elbows on his knees, his chin on his hands, gazing at the ground.

"I want you to be quite frank," he said at last. "Naturally I am prejudiced where Mark is concerned. So I want to know how my suggestion strikes you—who have no prejudices either way."

"Your suggestion?"

"My theory that, if Mark killed his brother, it was purely accidental—as I told the inspector."

Bill looked up with interest.

"You mean that Robert did the hold-up business," he said, "and there was a bit of a struggle, and the revolver went off, and then Mark lost his head and bolted? That sort of idea?"

"Exactly."

"Well, that seems all right." He turned to Antony. "There's nothing wrong with that, is there? It's the most natural explanation to anyone who knows Mark."

Antony pulled at his pipe.

"I suppose it is," he said slowly. "But there's one thing that worries me rather."

"What's that?" Bill and Cayley asked the question simultaneously.

"The key."

"The key?" said Bill.

Cayley lifted his head and looked at Antony. "What about the key?" he asked.

"Well, there may be nothing in it; I just wondered. Suppose Robert was killed as you say, and suppose Mark lost his head and thought of nothing but getting away before anyone could see him. Well, very likely he'd lock the door and put the key in his pocket. He'd do it without thinking, just to gain a moment's time."

"Yes, that's what I suggest."

"Yes, that's all right if the key is there. But suppose it isn't there?"

The suggeston, made as if it were already an established fact, startled them both.

"What do you mean?" said Cayley.

"Well, it's just a question of where people happen to keep their keys. You go up to your bedroom, and perhaps you like to lock your door in case anybody comes wandering in when you've only got one sock and a pair of braces on. Well, that's natural enough. But downstairs people don't lock themselves in. It's really never done at all. Bill, for instance, has never locked himself into the dining-room in order to be alone with the sherry. On the other hand, all women, and particularly servants, have a horror of burglars. And if a burglar gets in by the window, they like to limit his activities to that particular room. So they keep the keys on the outside of the doors and lock the doors when they go to bed." He knocked the ashes out of his pipe, and added, "At least, my mother always used to."

"TELL ME SOMETHING ABOUT MARK," SAID ANTONY SUDDENLY.

"You mean," said Bill excitedly, "that the key was on the outside of the door when Mark went into the room?"

"Well, I was just wondering."

"Have you noticed the other rooms—the billiard-room, and library, and so on?" said Cayley.

"I've only just thought about it while I've been sitting out here. You live here—haven't you ever noticed them?"

Cayley sat considering, with his head on one side.

"It seems rather absurd, you know, but I can't say that I have." He turned to Bill. "Have you?"

"Good Lord, no. I should never worry about a thing like that."

"I'm sure you wouldn't," laughed Antony. "Well, we can have a look when we go in. If the other keys are outside, then this one was probably outside, too, and in that case—well, it makes it more interesting."

Cayley said nothing. Bill chewed a piece of grass, and then said, "Does it make much difference?"

"It makes it more hard to understand what happened in there. Take your accidental theory and see where you get to. No instinctive turning of the key now, is there? He's got to open the door to get it, and opening the door means showing his head to anybody in the hall—his cousin, for instance, whom he left there two minutes ago. Is a man in Mark's state of mind, frightened to death lest he should be found with the body, going to do anything so foolhardy as that?"

"He needn't have been afraid of me," said Cayley.

"Then why didn't he call for you? He knew you were about. You could have advised him; Heaven knows he wanted advice. But the whole theory of Mark's escape is that he was afraid of you and of everybody else."

"Yes, I expect you're right," said Bill thoughtfully. "Unless he took the key in with him, and locked the door at once."

"Exactly. But in that case you have to build up a new theory entirely."

"You mean that it makes it seem more deliberate?"

"Yes; that, certainly. But it also seems to make Mark out an absolute idiot. Just suppose for a moment that, for urgent reasons which neither of you know anything about, he had wished to get rid of his brother. Would he have done it like that? Just killed him and then run away? Why, that's practically suicide. No. If you really wanted to remove an undesirable brother, you would do it a little bit more cleverly than that."

Cayley had been silent, apparently thinking over this new idea. With his eyes still on the ground, he said now:

"I hold to my opinion that it was purely accidental, and that Mark lost his head and ran away."

"But what about the key?" asked Bill.

"We don't know yet that the keys were outside."

"Oh, well, of course, if they are inside, then your original theory is probably the correct one. Having often seen them outside, I just wondered—that's all."

"Even if the key was outside," went on Cayley stubbornly, "I still think it might have been accidental. He might have taken it in with him, knowing that the interview would be an unpleasant one, and not wishing to be interrupted."

"But he had just told you to stand by in case he wanted you; so why should he lock you out? Besides, I should think that if a man were going to have an unpleasant interview with a threatening relation, the last thing he would do would be to barricade himself in with him. He would want to open all the doors and say, 'Get out of it!'"

Cayley was silent, but his mouth looked obstinate. Antony gave a little apologetic laugh and stood up.

"Well, come on, Bill," he said; "we ought to be stepping." He held out a hand and pulled his friend up. Then, turning to Cayley, he went on, "You must forgive me if I have let my thoughts run on rather."

"That's all right, Mr. Gillingham," said Cayley, standing up too. "You say that you're going up to the inn now about your bag?"

Cayley nodded and turned to go into the house. Antony took hold of Bill's arm and walked off with him in the opposite direction.

CHAPTER VII

"Tell me something about Mark," said Antony suddenly.

"What sort of things?"

"Well, never mind about his being your host, or about your being a perfect gentleman, or anything like that. Cut out the Manners for Men, and tell me what you think of Mark, and how you like staying with him, and how many rows your little house-party has had this week, and how you get on with Cayley, and all the rest of it."

Bill looked at him eagerly.

"I say, are you being the complete detective?"

"Well, I wanted a new profession," smiled the other.

"What fun! I mean," he corrected himself apologetically, "one oughtn't to say that, when there's a man dead in the house, and one's host." He broke off a little uncertainly.

"Well?" said Antony. "Carry on, Mark."

ENGLISH REFORMERS OPPOSE NIGHT CAFES

But London Getting Back to Pre-War Bright Night Life.

LONDON, Dec. 1.—(Associated Press)—London clearly is getting back to the bright night life of before the war, for there is an enormous rush just now to secure licenses for night cafes, music and dance halls, and other resorts where the light hearted were wont to foregather in the old days.

But the churches and the welfare organizations are protesting. They urge that London has lived for seven years without such establishments, and that it is not necessary for them to be re-opened now.

THE CHRISTMAS FAIR AN ATTRACTIVE EVENT

Made-In-Canada Section Quite Instructive, and Should Be Visited.

The Christmas Fair, under the auspices of the Ladies' Aid of George Street Church, opened to gratifying attendance yesterday and this afternoon, and will be continued this evening. The Fair is held in the basement of the Church, which is beautifully decorated for the occasion. The decorations are of a Christmas character and consist mostly of ever-green boughs, maple leaves, flags, colored streamers, baloons, Christmas bells and flowers. The numerous booths are exceptionally atractive in the delicate dressing annd present a remarkably gay spectacle to the visitor on entering the room.

The president of the Ladies Aid is Mrs. R. Foote and the chief conveners of the Fair are Mrs. George C. Carruthers and Mrs. J. Long.

The ladies in charge of the different booths are: candy booth, Mrs. (Dr.) H. M. Yellland; home-made cooking, Mrs. S. J. Stubbs; made-in-Canada booth, Mrs. G. L. Stevens; handkerchief and babies' wear, Mrs. G. S. Kindom; flower booth, Mrs. D. Allison and Mrs. F. A. Eyres; white wear, Mrs. E. E. Lloyd and Mrs. W. P. Hetherington; novelty booth, Mrs. G. A. Borland and Mrs. Malcolm McIntyre; tea room, Mrs. (Dr.) E. E. Harvey, and dining room, Mrs. J. Spencer.

The Made-in-Canada is among some of the most striking booths. Its contents have been denoted by different Canadian firms, within the city as well as out-of-town, and nearly every product imaginable is there exhibited.

This Fair is numbered among the great yearly events staged by the ladies of George Street Church, and this year, as always, is decidely worth while.

VILLA DECLINES TO WRITE HIS MEMOIRS

Erstwhile Bandit is Now A Gentleman Farmer in Durango State.

MEXICO CITY, Dec. 1.—(Associated Press)—Pancho Villa, erstwhile bandit and now a gentleman farmer in the State of Durango, has declined to write his memoirs, although an American publishing company is said to have offered him $50,000 for the manuscript.

Villa is reported to have told the publishers that he has no desire to perpetuate the story of his adventures, but rather prefers that his children, now small, hear of their father's exploits as a rancher and benefactor.

AN INSIDE BATH MAKES YOU LOOK AND FEEL FRESH

Says a glass of hot water with phosphate before breakfast keeps illness away.

Physicians the world over recommend the inside bath, declaring this is of vastly more importance than outside cleanliness, because the skin pores do not absorb impurities into the blood, causing ill health, while the pores in the ten yards of bowels do.

Men and women are urged to drink each morning, before breakfast a glass of hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it, as a harmless means of helping to wash from the stomach, liver kidneys and bowels the previous day's indigestible material, poisons, sour bile and toxins; thus cleansing, sweetening and purifying the alimentary canal before eating more food.

Those who wake up with bad breath, coated tongue, nasty taste or have a dull aching head, sallow complexion, acid stomach; others have bilious attacks or constipation, should obtain a quarter pound of limestone phosphate at the drug store. This will cost very little but is sufficient to show the value of inside bathing.

REGENT — Gladys Walton, in "The Trouper," George Walsh in "With Stanley in Africa."

AT THE GRAND

ON THEIR HONEYMOON.

From all accounts the ancient feud that has existed between Mutt and Jeff, Bud Fisher's famous cartoon classics, has been satisfactorily patched. This fact, it is understood, has been thoroughly and decisively established in the new side-splitting comedy with music, "Mutt and Jeff's Honeymoon." In this triumph of fun, revelry, screams, laughter, surprises, novelties and innovations, Little Jeff undertakes the somewhat Herculean task of acting as counsel and general adviser in Mutt's unfortunate martial affairs. The result can be better imagined than chronicled. Suffice to say that everything Jeff does is totally wrong and Mutt spends many an uncomfortable hour extricating himself from a mess of unexpected entanglements. The offering is in two acts and six scenes and runs gamut of some of the heartiest merriment it has been our good fortune to report in many a day. The attraction will hold the boards at the Grand Opera House next Saturday, December 2nd matinee and night.

John Barrymore will be seen in screen version of "Sherlock Holmes" He is a gifted actor to protray the most famous fiction detective in motion pictures. He is supported by scintillating cast of notable players. Sherlock Holmes is the best known character in fiction of the present generation, if not of all time; his name and fame have been carried over the civilized world until merely to pronounce the name conjures up a vision of a master detective of almost super-human intelligence. In every language the words, Sherlock Holmes, mean a detective of uncanny insight. The stories by Sir Conan Doyle, in which Sherlock Homes figures have been translated into all languages and have carried his fame into every nook and cranny of the world.

In the realm of the imagination he is a commanding figure, but a figure that has not hitherto been available for the screen. It was inevitable that some day Sherlock Holmes would appear as the hero of a screen story. The immortal detective will be seen at the Grand Theatre on Monday for 3 days in the Goldwyn picture called "Sherlock Holmes." It is an adaptation from the stage play fashioned about Sir Arthur's famous character by William Gillette, which that actor used for years on the speaking stage.

It has been one of the most popular plays in the history of the American stage. Every stock company in the land has played it. Its film version awaited the finding of an actor who could translate the cnaracter in all its finesse to the screen.

Barrymore the Right Actor.

Such an actor was found in the person of John Barrymore the most romantic and picturesque figure on the American stage—scion of a theatrical family, who has of late proved himself possessed of histronic genius in a high degree. In "Redemption," in "The Jest," in "Richard III" he leaped head and shoulders above the best known actors on the American stage. He has youth, magnetism and an uncanny power of submerging himself in the character of any role he plays. His selection to act Sherlock Holmes in the Goldwyn picture was a managerial inspiration. He is Sherlock Holmes in the picture just as he was Richard in the Shakespeare play, just as he was Gianetto in "The Jest" and just as he was both Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde in the screen version of Stevenson's masterpiece in which young Barrymore demonstrated that he is a consummate screen actor, rivaling in shadowland his acting triumphs of the speaking stage.

"Sherlock Holmes", as a photoplay has all the ingredients of thrills, suspense, mystery and high-actioned drama which make the detective story the most captivating form of fiction and which have made the Sherlock Holmes stories stand at the head of that class of fiction. The production was directed by Albert Parker, one of the most skilled picture directors in America. He took Mr. Barrymore and the other members of the company to London where most of the scenes—all of the exteriors and many of the interiors—were shot. A flying trip was even made to Switzerland to get absolutely accurate "atmosphere" for the few brief scenes which take place there.

Brilliant Players in Cast.

Photographically, "Sherlock Holmes" is as attractive as the story is compelling. The cast contains names that stand for the best acting to be found on stage or screen. Gustave von Seyffertiz, character actor and stage director (for many years he was producer-general for the late Charles Froham), is the villianous Professor Moriarty whose mastermind directs all the forces of evil in London's underworld marshalled against Sherlock Holmes. Carol Dempster, one of fildom's best known leading women, is the Alice Faulkner, Hedda Hopper the Madge Larrabee; Anders Randolf the James Larrabee; Roland Young, lately star of "Rollo's Wild Oat", the Dr. Watson. Louis Wolheim, of "The Hairy Ape" has a small part; Albert Brunning who, as the Elderly Gentleman in the Theatre Guild's production of Bernard Shaw's "Back to Methusaleh," had one of the longest roles on record, appears briefly. Others in the big cast are William H. Powell, Robert Schable, Percival Knight, Reginald Denny, David Torrence, Lumsden Hare, Jerry Devine, Peggy Bayfield, Margaret Kemp and John Willard.

Taken all in all, 'Sherlock Holmes' is one of those rare photoplays that appear from time to time which appeal to and satisfy everyone. It is one of the biggest pictures of the year, and bound to prove a great popular success.

The Grand Opera House 5-piece Orchestra under the direction of Geo. Howarth will furnish a special musical setting for all photoplays and the best high class refined vaudeville will be given, secured from Pantages Theatre, Toronto.

Complete change of program will be given on Monday's and Thursday, with matinee daily. Bargain prices prevail at all times, and seats for evenings can be reserved in advance.

Capitol Entertainment

AT THE CAPITOL.

Katherine Trowbridge, whose perverse disposition is so admirably portrayed by Viola Dana in the picture, "They Like 'Em Rough," which opened at the hospital last night, was a young girl petted and spoiled, with a large number of love affairs to her credit. Finally she consented to marry a young man from no higher motive than the conviction that her uncle and aunt, who have reared her from infancy, are opposed to the match. Katherine is arrayed in wedding attire and the guests have gathered for the ceremony, when she overhears her guardians congratulate themselves that their ward is securing so excellent a husband. That settles it with the bride-to-be and she makes her escape by way of the window and an automobile, resolved to marry the first white man who will take her. Her victim happens to be a former discarded lover whom she has not seen for seven years and who has spent the interval in a lumber camp. He has grown a beard and adopted the fantastic garb of the members of that craft, so that Katherine fails to recognize him. After the ceremony she prepares to leave him but hereveals his identity and practically abducts her to the cabin which is his home in the forest. He employs the methods of the cave man to tame his perverse spouse and in the end succeeds. The story is interesting, abounding in thrills and containing a valuable object lesson for all mismated couples. Viola Dana never had a better medium for the display of her talents.

Lou Skuce, the well known cartoonist of the Sunday World, divides the interest of the audience with the leading lady of the feature play. Those who watch his performance will get an excellent insight into the various stages through which a cartoon passes from the time the artist makes the first pencil mark until the finished product emerges from a modern printing press into an unbelievable rate per minute. The artist, who works on the stage, was rewarded with generous applause, produced some lightning-like samples of his art, including excellent portraits of Sergt. "Jack" Dainard, Mayor Taylor and other prominent local citizens. The same bill will be presented all this week and is well worth seeing.

PRODUCE MARKETS

CASH GRAIN.

MONTREAL, Dec. 1.—(Canadian Press.)— There was no important change in the condition of the local grain market, prices being steady. Feeling in flour was good with a moderate trade passing. The market for mill feed was active and the trade in rolled oats steady. The market for baled hay was quiet.

The tone of the egg market remained steady owing to the fact that supplies are not excessive. There was little movement in potatoes. Prices for butter show no change. There is again nothing to report in cheese.

WINNIPEG CATTLE.

WINNIPEG, Dec. 1.—(Canadian Press.) — Receipts, 870 cattle and calves, 1,200 hogs and 550 sheep and lambs.

The cattle market opened yesterday morning with buyers bidding generally firm over the close of Wednesday and with a liberal enquiry existing for most classes and grades continued mostly active and brisk.

Prices ranged from 25 to 50 cents higher from the opening of the week.

On the hog market packers were bidding steady at 9.50 for thick smooths.

Early sales of good killing lambs were completed from 10.50 to 11.00, while the mutton sheep ranged from 6.25 to 6.50.

EGG MARKETS.

OTTAWA, Dec. 1.—The poultry market is becoming of increasing importance as the holiday season approaches. Chief interest centres in turkeys but it is difficult at the moment to say how the market will be for Christmas, prices have not yet been established. Some of the trade are of the opinion the price will be around 50 cents, others anticipate lower prices. The only car lot sale so far reported is one of dressed turkeys from Alberta to Montreal, number ones 35, number twos 30, f.o.b. Bassano, Alta. The egg situation remains firm and unchanged.

Toronto specials jobbing 75 to 80, extras 65 to 70, storage extras 43 to 44, firsts 38 to 39, seconds 33 to 35.

Montreal firm, jobbing prices on specials range from 80 to 95, and on extras 75 to 80. The demand for storage stocks is good, extras moving at 46 to 47, firsts 40 to 41, seconds 35 to 36.

Western markets unchanged.

Curling Club Preparing For The Coming Winter Season

Take Possession of the Rink To-Day and Will Immediately Start Work to Put It in First - Class Shape — Prospects Are Bright For a Successful Season.

The Curling Club has sent a wireless to George Stevenson, at Hastings, to return the rings as soon as possible. If George hasn't mislaid them since he took them away last spring, it is expected that they will show up any day. The local followers of the Scottish winter pastime will take possession of the rink today and Angus MacIntosh will make things hum for a day or two getting everything into shape. After that—well, the boys will just wait till Old Jack Frost puts a good bottom on 'er and there will be big doings at the old rink.

The executive committee has not been resting, but has been at it hot and heavy for some time. Several meetings have already been held and another is scheduled for tomorrow evening for general business and making the final arrangements before the actual season opens. There are a number of applications for membership to come before this meeting of the executive.

The regular meeting of the club will be held on December 11 when the rinks will be selected, according to the custom of the club.

The visit of the touring Scotch curlers has been under discussion by the executive committee for some time. The final arrangements for their entertainment on January 22 and 23 have not been made but the preliminary plans which have been drawn up show that the local curlers propose to give the visitors a right royal time.

MIKE O'DOWD WOI FROM ROSENBERG

O'Dowd Was Leading By a Wide Margin When Rosenberg Fouled Him in the Eighth.

NEW YORK, Dec. 1.—(Canadian Press)—Mike O'Dowd of St. Paul won over Dave Rosenberg of New York, on a foul in the eighth round of a 15-round bout here yesterday. Rosenberg was disqualified for hitting low after two minutes and 28 seconds of fighting in that round. O'Dowd was leading by a wide margin when the bout ended.

The judges' decision awarding the bout to O'Doud gives him the recognition of the New York State Athletic Commission as world's middleweight champion.

Rosenberg twice had been warned by Referee Patsy Haley in the eighth round, when suddenly O'Dowd crumpled up and sank to the floor. Referee Haley immediately disqualified Rosenberg and the bout was awarded to the St. Paul boxer by the judges.

Immediately after the bout, Deputy Boxing Commissioner Harry Burchill ordered that Rosenburg's share of the receipts be withheld pending an investigation by the Athletic Commission.

O'Dowd outfought and outgeneralled Rosenberg all the way, scoring a knockdown in the third round. When Referee Haley was forced to warn the New Yorker for hitting low, O'Dowd had a big lead and was still going strong.

The weights announced were: O'Dowd, 159; Rosenburg, 156.

KEN MALLEN WILL COACH BRANTFORD

Famous Pro. Hockey Player to Take Charge Monday Night.

Ken Mallen ,one of Canada's best known hockey players, Wednesday signed to coach the Brantford intermediate and junior hockey teams in the O.H.A., and will start licking the Brants into shape on Monday. Ken Mallen is brother of G. O. Mallen, Roy Mallen and Jimmie Mallen, all well-known hockey players. They came originally from Morrisburg, and played there years ago when Morrisburg was in the O.H.A.

Ken Mallen went from Morrisburg to Cornwall, and then to Montreal Wanderers. Then he turned pro and played for Calumet in the old International League. From there he came to Toronto and played for Alex. Milne's Ontario in the pro. league. Then he played for Montreal pros, Renfrew, Ottawa, Quebec, Vancouver, New Westminster, Victoria and San Francisco.

Ken Mallen always was a cool, heady player, and is a man of a type who will be welcomed to the ranks of O.H.A. professional coaches. He should do well with Brantford if he has real material to work on.

BRINTONS LOST GAME

The Brintons forfeited a game in the Soft Ball League to the Quakers last evening because they lacked a full nine. A scrap team was picked up which fell th the Quakers by the score of 12 to 0. The only feature of the game was the good pitching of Gilchrist, the flour gang's hurler. He was "dead on" last evening having his fast one cutting the plate everywhere. Eleven of the opposing team returned to the bench, feeling blue, in the seven innings of play.

The teams were:

Brintons and pick ups—Ross 1b, Corbett 3b, Shaughnessy p, Taylor c, Jenkins lf, Rose ss, Thomas ss, Outram rf, Cripps 2b.

K. OF C. VANQUISHED THE ROTARY CLUB

Hard Hitting Gives Them 11 to 6 Victory Over Rotarians, and a Big Lead For Honors.

SOME SNAPPY BALL.

The Knights of Columbus have a strangle hold on the Club section of the Men's Soft Ball League, which can only be broken by fast work by the Firemen. They practically clinched things by defeating the Rotarians last evening, by the score of 11-6 in a game brimming with fast work on both sides.

The Caseys toted there heavy artillery up to the Armouries and slammed Mathews all over the lot, O'Hern got a two bagger off him and Mike Sheehy nailed him for a triple. The Rotarians also carried something heavier than twenty-twos with them and Murphy didn't escape unscathed. MacPherson collected a nice two bagger off the Casey's hurler early in the game. In the last few innings, Murphy weakened badly and passed six men. Finally in the last innings after he had walked two and things were looking exciting, the Caseys sent in A. Primeau to finish the job.

The Caseys unlimbered right at the start sending O'Hern and Abbie Rose across for two runs earned on hits in the first innings. The Rotarians also got one in the opening act, MacPherson's two bagger accounting for it. The Caseys in the second were kept from scoring by snappy fielding on the part of the Rotarians in which MacDonald figured prominently. The Caseys were retired in order. The Rotarians evened things up in the second, a hit by Graham sending Primeau across. The Rotarians had two men on in this frame, but the needed hit never loomed in sight and they didn't get another. In the third the Caseys scored again. Primeau got a hit, but was caught stealing second. Mike Sheehy got a hit and stole around to third and got home on a nice hit by O'Hern. O'Hern was caught coming home after he had advanced to third. The Rotarians failed to score in the third although they had the bases loaded. The Caseys had a big innings in the fourth and fifth chasing across four and three. The Rotarians were blanked in both their innings. In the fifth Dobbin made a great catch of a hard fly after a long run.

Both teams failed in the sixth. In the seventh the Caseys were retired in order on two hard flies to Young and a foul to Graham. The Rotarians made it three in the seventh, MacPherson coming through for one. The Rotarians threatened to break lose in that inning, but Graham was caught off third by Murphy and on a nice throw to second, O'Hern caught Rogers stealing. The Caseys made it eleven in the eighth. In the same innings the Rotarians got two, three men getting on by walks when Murphy weakened. Neither team scored in the ninth. The final score was 11 to 6.

The teams were:

K. of C.—A. Primeau ss, p, M. Sheehy 1b, O'Hern c, Rose ss, Murphy p, ss, D. Sheehy 3b, Corkery 2b, C. Wolfe rf, J. Rutherford lf.

Rotary—MacPherson ss, Case 1b, Mathews p, MacDonald 3b, Primeau 2b, Young ss, Dobbin lf, Graham c, Rogers rf.

Score by innings:

Road Race Prizes To Be Presented Monday Evening

The prizes for the Examiner Road Race and the City Championship track events will be presented to the prize winners Monday evening at the Capitol Theatre. Through the kindness of the management a few minutes will be granted between acts when the successful contestants will be called to the stage and presented with their trophies.

The Committee in charge regrets the delay in making the presentations but it has been unavoidable as the prizes for the city championships could not be obtained from the makers any sooner. Every effort was made to speed them up and as a result they are here at last.

The prize winners are requested to be at the theatre not later than 7:45 and the committee will see that convenient seats are arranged for them.

Those who are still holding cups won last year in the City events are asked to return them not later than Saturday night.

ESKIMOS ARE IN FINE CONDITION

Purposely Delayed Start East So That the Team Would Not Go Stale After Arrival.

EN ROUTE WITH THE EDMONTON ESKIMOS, Dec. 1.—A splendid spirit prevails among the Eskimos. Everyone is in the prime of condition and feeling fine. Coach White took on several gallons of distilled water before leaving the west, for he is running no chance of the boys becoming affected by the change of water experienced in the east.

"Last fall we learned many lessons on our trip" remarked the coach today. "The water made a difference, and so did the climate. It may not worry a person under ordinary conditions, but it does a healthy group of highly trained athletes.

"Many people have offered criticism of the management for delaying the trip east, and not leaving sufficient time for the squad to limber up before going into action this year against a highly trained student champions. I have not ventured an explanation up to this juncture, but now I might reveal this reason why we decided to draw plans for our arrival just on the eve of the game.

"Last year we were over a week in Toronto before we met the Argos. It might have been good judgment in the opinion of the outside, but I realized at the time that we had made a mistake. The only time the boys displayed their regular form was in the practice we held the first day there. After that they lagged and appeared to lose their zip. It was the climate all right, and before the week was up it had its telling effect.

"Then, again, there was the matter of environment. The public naturally poured into the cars of the new players distorted stories of the prowess of the Argos, and all that they could do. Such talk might not affect seasoned men, but there were some beginners on the club and I feel satisfied they figured it was an aggregation 'of supermen' they were facing. Right there and then I decided if we ever took the trip again it would be at the last minute and thus our plans are working out according to schedule."

BOWLING

HAMILTONS WON THREE.

The Wm. Hamilton team took three straight from the A.O.F. aggregation in the Mercantile five-pin league at the Water street alleys last evening. The A.O.F. boys were not up to their usual form and had a bad "night off." LeBarr was high man with 519, while Frost and Roberts were both over the 200 mark for single games.

Following are the scores:

JUNIOR TEAMS MAY PRESENT BIG PROBLEM

Many Teams Looking For a Place on the Junior City League Hockey Schedule For This Winter.

MEET NEXT WEEK.

The powers that be in the City Hockey League gathered in the Chamber of Commerce rooms Wednesday evening to discuss things as they are and things as they should be. It looks as if the question of keeping the junior players going this year is going to be quite a problem. The problem will not be to get the boys to turn out but rather to provide for them after they are lined up. Fifteen or sixteen teams are already clamoring for a place in the Junior League schedule and the moguls are pondering deeply as to just how they are to be worked in.

Another meeting will be held at the call of the president some time next week when representatives of the various junior clubs will be asked to state definitely if they are or are not going to be able to come to organize that they will not be able to get all the players they want. In many cases they will find that other teams have been there before them.

It is probable that a double header schedule will be run with both a senior and junior game each night of play. So far but three senior teams have been lined up, Raybestos, C. G.E. and Lakefield, and with the preponderance of junior material it may be necessary to make some other arrangements.

Regular indoor practices are being held at the Y.M.C.A. and the boys will be getting well into shape by the time the ice is ready for them.

MALONE IS HOLDING OFF.

HAMILTON, Dec. 1.—Joe Malone, veteran centre player of the Hamilton Club, has not yet sent along his signed contract and it is not by any means certain that he will be here. Business Manager Thompson feels that everything will be ironed out satisfactorily, but the fact remains that he has not yet made a move that would indicate his desire to get on the job.

Malone has a position in Montreal and doesn't care to give it up for hockey's sake. He would like to play for Canadiens and take part only in thir home games, but this is not satisfactorily to the Frenchman.

If Malone feels the same way about it when the season gets under way the Hams will have a big gap to fill at centre ice.

One of the best pieces of good fortune we've stumbled on in many a day. The buyer went to Montreal to buy Suits—happened into the College plant when the stock chief was trying to figure out how to use up a lot of short ends of woollens. Our buyer, true to Crescent tradition, made an offer for the lot if they were made up into Polo lined Overcoats.

Now they're here. 100 of as finely made Overcoats as a man would want—exceptionally good woollens too! Practically made to our order—just the models we know you men of Peterborough want.

Double breasted Ulsters with belts, Ulsterettes and Kimona Coats—and you pay $10.00 to $15.00 less than you would have paid two weeks ago.

These Coats will go like ink under a blotter—Peterborough men will absorb them as fast as that.

"Shag" Suggests Several Changes in Rugby Rules

MONTREAL, Dec. 1.—(Canadian Press)—Now that the football season is nearly over and is finished so far as the clubs in Montreal are concerned, attention is being turned by enthusiasts to the question of the revision of the rules. It is agreed that the game as played this year was under rules that need but few changes and those only of a nature to eliminate several features that would quicken the play even more, and also eliminate some of the too strenuous movements.

The intercollegiate rules committee will meet early in December to consider the revision of rules, and it is understood that several changes will be advocated by the delegates from the various universities. Frank Shaughnessy, coach of the McGill intercollegiate squads, has several suggestions which will be offered as suitable revisions to better rugby. These will include questions of interference on the line, hurdling, piling on after a man is held, one-man bucks only, and a reduction of the penalty for off-side, but not for holding, while the matter of the forward pass will also likely get consideration.

The majority of these have been suggested by the McGill coach with a view to eliminating serious accidents in games. The one-man buck, with no player either pushing or pulling the man carrying the ball, is advocated for next season. Also the dangerous practice of hurdling by players, that is, going over opposition players with both feet off the ground and in front or with knees up; and finally, a strict enforcement of a rule regarding players who pile up after a man is held on the ground which frequently results in the man with the ball being severely hurt.

The McGill coach advocates three-yard interference on the line of scrimmage, to apply from one side of the field to the other, but only for those actually on the front line, and not for the backs who might prove up into the front rank.

The question of the reduction of the 15-yard penalty rule to one of five yards for offsides has been generally accepted this season as a fair proposal, it being agreed that the present imposition is too big a handicap to a team for a minor offense, which is more frequently than not committed not intentionally, but by an over-anxious player. The great handicap can be seen when it is remembered that Argos lost 185 yards on penalties against Queen's Saturday—enough to lose any team the victory in so close a match.

Inclusion of the forward pass, as played in the American game, will cause considerable debate, as there are many just as enthusiastically opposed to the adoption of the play under the Canadian games as there are in favor of it. Shaughnessy favors the play, as does Pete Campbell, former University of Toronto quarterback, who with Coach Dr. Jack Maynard formed that famous pair of blue and white backs in the intercollegiate in the few seasons immediately preceding the war. Campbell witnessed the Harvard-Yale game last week and returned to this side a supporter of the movement to introduce the play in the Canadian game.

No doubt some of these suggestions will be carried, while others will have a rough road to get through and be incorporated in the 1923 regulations, but whatever changes are made it is fairly evident that general satisfaction exists with the main principles of the present code and that the brilliant game seen this season will not be altered much next year. College spirt and the clean sportmanship and ability of the players in all leagues has brought the game to its present high standing, and there is little doubt that it will go on to future seasons of interesting and successful Canadian rugby.

DIAGNE MAKES STRONG APPEAL

PARIS, December 1 (Canadian Press). — The fight waged in behalf of Battling Siki, the Senegalese pugilist, by his fellow-countryman, Deputy Diagne, in the Chamber of Deputies, has been lost by the member from Senegal, M. Diagne's attempt to have the appropriation for physical education reduced by 300,000 francs because of th action of the French Boxing Federation in penalising Siki for certain misdeeds, was defeated yesterday by a vote of 408 to 136.

He made a lengthy speech, and his words aroused some sympathy, but as the appropriation is intended only for amateur associations, a professional affair like Siki's was declared to have no standing.

M. Diagne said that this was a subject of national interest; he drew attention to the popular favour enjoyed by boxers, asserting that if the crowd were invited to hear a great statesman speak, or witness a fight between two celebrated boxers, they would rush to see the fight. Had Carpentier defeated Dempsey, he had no doubt the Legion of Honour would have been the reward of his prowess.

The Deputy's complaint against the Boxing Commission was that it had given consideration to matters entirely unconnected with sport, such as the eccentric conduct of Siki in public places; Siki's actions at the ringside, and similar occurences.

Siki, without being heard, had been condemned, and yet he had, though patriotism, refused an engagement in Berlin.

He concluded by charging that certain persons were making their living out of Carpentier's victories by having Siki condemned.

M. Maginot, Minister of War and Pensions, declared that M. Diagne's amendment had absolutely no connection with the budget to national defence, and the Chamber could not [illegible] to a Court of Appeal in connection with a sporting [illegible]'s decision.

HER THREE CHILDREN HAD WHOOPING COUGH

Many mothers make the mistake of thinking that whooping cough is not of serious importance, but it is one of the most dangerous diseases of infancy, and yearly causes more deaths than scarlet fever, typhoid or diphtheria, and is more common in female than male children.

DR. WOOD'S NORWAY PINE SYRUP

is highly recommended by mothers everywhere for the relief of this trouble as it helps to clear the clogged-up air passages of the mucous and phlegm that has collected, and in this way brings on the "whoop" which brings the so-much-sought-for relief and heals and soothes the lungs.

Mrs. H. W. Mahar, Kentville, N. S., writes: "My three children had whooping cough. I tried every medicine I could think of until an old gentleman told me to try Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup. Before they had one bottle taken the cough seemed better, and after two bottles they were about well. It loosened the cough and relieved them of that hard, distressing and strangling feeling that goes with it."

Fine for Chest Too and Is Cheaply Made at Home

When you make, in two minutes, a world beating remedy that acts directly on the membrane and often overnight causes stubborn coughs and even hard chest colds to disappear, why trifle with things that will probably disappoint.

Hawking and snuffling and also soreness of the mucous membrane go and you will feel fine in almost no time.

Just get one ounce of Parmint (double strength) add to it a little sugar and enough hot water to make a half a pint and you've got an inexpensive remedy better than you can buy ready mixed.

Its soothing, healing action on the membrane is the reason so many people use it for Catarrh and acute nasal colds.

Hickey's Men's Clothing Store Announces a Desperate Attempt to Win Against Odds.

The fine fall weather has of course been felt in all lines of business, more in some cases than others—evidently it has assumed serious proportions at Hickey's Clothing Store, for they announce to-day a spectacular effort to get out from under a heavy overload of stock and relieve the financial stuation. Their method of doing this is to make a sale, that embodies such sacrifices in clothing values, that prices have been cut away below cost to effect the object of an immediate clearance of overstock. LAST AUTO RACE OF SEASON POSTPONED.

BEVERLY HILLS SPEEDWAY Los Angeles, Cal., Dec. 1.—(Canadian Press)—The final championship auto race of the 1922 season of the American Automobile Association, to be held here yesterday, was postponed at the start on account of rain.

The 250 mile race will be run next Sunday, Speedway officials announced.

Eighteen drivers, after making several trial trips of the oval, reported the track too slippery to race. The attendance was estimated at 75,000.

The postponement probably will eliminate Ralph De Palma from the race next Sunday. He recently was arrested for speeding and may be serving his ten-day jail sentence when the race is started.

In the entire breeding season—about three months—a single pair of flies will be responsible for about 63 tons of flies.

THOUSANDS SEE RUN FOR NEW YORK THIEF.

NEW YORK, Dec. 1. —A thief chase which drew a crowd of more than 5000 persons to the busy shopping and theatre district about Seventh Avenue and 125th street yesterday, when detectives with drawn revolvers, in an automobile, captured a man who said that he was Reinhold Kockholz, 38 years old, of 3059 Decatur Avenue, the Bronx. The prisoner was locked up on a charge of robery preferred by Herbert Sergison, owne of the jewelry store, at 125th steet and Seevnth Avenue.

Sergison had jusst placed several trays of diamond rings in the window, when a woman custo er screamed as she saw a man hurl a brick wrapped in a newspaper through the window, and grab a tray of diamonds Gergison ran to the street yelling. Commandeering an automobile, he pursued the thief, who had turned north in 7th avenue and was running towards 126th street. Detectives Louis Hyams and James Garvey, who were neraby also, commandeered an automobile and dashed after the fleeing man. Meanwhile the chase and the cry of thief had been taken up by scores of the passers by.

The fugitive turned east in 26th street and had not gone more than half a block when the detectives ran their car up to the curb and covered Kockholz with their revolvers. When searched at the station none of the jewelry was found on him. They said that they did find however a ticket market $325 which was the price of one of the diamonds in the tray. The tray had on it three diamond ring, thrree diamond studded wrist watches and one diamond studded cigar cutter, the total value being $2000. A tray alongside of the one stolen had jewels valued at $0,000.

Sergison identified Kockholz at the station as the man he had seen throw the brick and escape with the tray.

FOR A WIFE ANSWERED

Lived at Same Time in Bombay 40 years Ago, in England During War, but Never Met.

ORANGE, N.J., Dec. 1.—Prayers of George Hermann Lawson, evangelist and former baseball promoter, for a wife have been answered, and on Dec. 3 he is to escort his bride-to-be, Mrs. Mary Mason, of 151 North Bay Street, to the altar.

Lawson is said to have been one of the organizers of the Federal Baseball League and in recent years was a candidate for Assembly in Massachusetts. Two years ago he took up evangelistic work. He has been living in Orange for six months and recently organized the People's Evangelistic Church.

On October 28 he conducted his first service at the church and on that day met Mrs. Mason, widow of William C. Mason, of Hoboken, superintendent of a steamship company. Twenty-three days later he proposed. They will be married in the new church after the Sunday sermon, which on that day will have as its text, "The Woman Thou Gavest Me."

By coincidence it was learned that forty years ago both Mrs. Mason and Lawson were living in Bombay at the same time and again during the war both spent several months in Trent, England, simultaneously, but never met.

AUSTRALIAN RAILROAD OPENS RICH COUNTRY

Will Be Built in Centre of Continent Where Rich Minerals Abound.

ADELAIDE, South Australia, Dec. 1.—(Associated Press)—The new Oodnadatta railway will be built into the center of the Australian continent and through the richest mineral and greatest pastoral section of the country according to an announcement by the Minister of Home and Territories.

This will be the first step of a plan to cover every section, including the vast deserts, with railroads which will not only facilitate commerce, but also form a defensive barrier for the Australian coast line.

points as the machine guns started their purr of death.

From that moment the historic Zocalo became a bloody battlefield. The deadly rustle of bullets was in the air. Men and women fell and were trampled as the crowd, hurled back from the portals of the Government bulding, was seized with panic and fought only to escape from that trap.

Gasoline was poured over a scaffold, which has been erected against one side of the structure by workmen making repairs.

Count Casualties.

The city to-day counted the casualties in a pitched battle between the police and a mob which attempted to storm the municipal buildings last night. The death list as a result of the fighting stood at seventeen, while about fifty persons are known to have been injured.

WEDDING BELLS

LANG--TATE.

A quiet but pretty wedding took place on Thursday afternoon, Nov. 30th, at three o'clock, in Trinity Methodist Church, when Charlotte Irene (Babe), youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William L. Tate, of 495 Bolivar street, was united in the holy bonds of matrimony to James Kenneth Lang, the second eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. J. T. C. Lang, 629 Rubidge street, The Rev. A. J. Langford of Trinity Methodist church, officiated.

The parents of the contracting parties and many friends were present. The groom's gift to the bride was a black fox stole.

The young couple left on the 3.50 C.P.R. for a brief honeymoon in Toronto, and on their return will reside in Port Hope, where Mr. Lang has accepted a position with the Amalgamated Knitting Co.

TATE—FOWLER.

A pretty wedding was solemnised on Wednesday afternoon at 1.30, in All Saints' Church, when Ethel E. Fowler and Reginald Tate were united in marriage by the Rev. R. B. Grobb.

The bride is the only child of Mr. and Mrs. John Fowler, 326 Water Street, and was given away by her father. She was attended by Miss M. Elliott, of Toronto, as bridesmaid, while Mr. Harry Finley attended the groom.

The wedding march was played by Mrs. Logan.

The happy couple returned to the bride's home, where a dainty dinner was served, and they afterwards left on the 3.50 p.m. train for a short honeymoon in Toronto.

Mr. and Mrs. Tate will reside at 326 Water Street on their return to the city.

OBITUARY

MRS. A. P. CAMPBELL.

Mrs. A. P. Campbell died at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Robert Wright, 459 Albert street, on Thursday afternoon at 12.30 o'clock. She was born on the island of Tyree, Scotland, 77 years and 6 months ago, and when four years old came to Canada with her parents, who settled in Mariposa township, in the county of Victoria. She was married 54 years ago to John Osborne, and the young couple of those days resided in Mariposa township for twelve years until the husband's death. In 1901 she married A. P. Campbell at the village of McIntyre, near Collingwood, and after his death, seven years later, Mrs. Campbell came to live with her daughter in Peterborough. She is survived by two children, John Osborne of Souigarth, Man., and Mrs. Wright. The funeral service will be held this evening at 6.30 o'clock at the family residence, 459 Albert street, and will be conducted by Rev. Mr. Morrow. The body will be taken to Cannington on the G.T.R. 8.23 a.m. train tomorrow, and will be interred in the Cannington necropolis. Friends are requested not to send flowers.

Society

The St. John's C. W. A. bazaar had a successful opening day yesterday, and by all appearances late last night, will sell out to-day. The excellent afternoon tea and supper, served respectively at 4 and 6, were well patronized. On the entertainment side, Mrs. Cameron kindly brought a gramophone and a choice collection of records. Vocal numbers were kindly given by Miss Quartermaine, Mrs. Amys, and Mrs. McKee Bingham. An orchestra, composed of Miss Dora Brown (violin), Miss M. Bridge (piano), Mr. Eric Roberts (saxophone), Mr. C. Thirnbeck (cornet), Mr. Kenneth Brown (drums), furnished some delightful selections. Mrs. Mulholland, the president, was well satisfied with the results of the first day, and heartily thankful to all patrons and workers.

SCHOOL CHILDREN HAD CLOSE CALL WOODSTOCK.

WOODSTOCK, Dec. 1. —(Canadian Press.) — Two carloads of school children had their lives imperilled this morning when a train on which they were travelling crashed into a freight train which was standing at the water tank just west of the station, completely demolishing the caboose on the freight, throwing two cars off the track and smashing the front part of the engine of the passenger train.

GREEK CONSUL IN A DIFFICULT POSITION.

MONTREAL, Dec. 1. — Recent developments in Greece have rendered the position of Mr. Machoras, the Greek consul here, somewhat difficult. Interviewed here yesterday, he stated that he was as yet without official word from his government as to recent occurrences and until he hears from Athens he will be unable to define the position of the Consulate General here.

If, he added, the withdrawal of the British Minister from Athens meant that all ministers and all consular officers will be withdrawn "from both Greece and Great Britain "of course there will be nothing for me to do but pack up."

THE EDMONTON TEAM MISSED CONNECTIONS.

TORONTO, Dec. 1.— (Canadian Press.)—Edmonton Eskimos, due to arrive here this morning, missed connections at North Bay last night, and will not reach Toronto until this afternoon. They will leave immediately for Kingston.

DOES IT RIGHT

When Mr. Chesler Says "Sale" He Puts Characteristic Vim Behind It

If there's one thing Mr. Chesler prides himself on it is that when he announces a sale he makes it a good one, with real bargains that somehow seem to place him in the front rank of sale-makers. Yesterday's paper contained his latest sale event, and as usual he has gone at it in a whole-hearted way. He calls it a stupendous sale, and if most extraordinary price cuts on ladies' clothing, furnishings, boots, and shoes will bring the event up to its name, there is going to be a big rush around his store for some days. Before coming up town to shop, just look over yesterday's advertisement again to get some idea of the magnitude of the savings he offers.

HARRY LONG RETURNS FROM WEST FOR WINTER.

Mr. Harry Long returned from Buffalo Park, near Edmonton, last night, and will remain in the city over the winter.

Harry reports no snow nor frost yet in the far Western district from which he came, while the weather is unseasonably warm, and the country dried up.

He believes prospects at Tabian are bright for profitable oil pumping by the Imperial Oil Company, who purchased last month many acres of what is claimed to be oil land. This company, Mr. Long says, have spent $300,000 on their well.

VOL. LI., No. 129 PETERBOROUGH, SATURDAY, DECEMBER 2, 1922 PRICE THREE CENTS

THREE YEARS SINCE THE DISAPPEARANCE OF AMBROSE SMALL

Police Records of Continent Do Not Provide a More Mysterious Case Than the Vanishing of Toronto's Theatrical Millionaire.

SLIGHT HOPES THAT HE'LL EVER BE FOUND

TORONTO, Dec. 2.—(Special).—Three years ago to-night Ambros J. Small, millionaire theatrical owner vanished. And he is still missing. Not since he was seen alive in his office in the Grand Opera House, about 5.20 on the night of Dec. 2, 1919, has he been seen by anyone or heard from.

Police records of this continent do not provide a more mysterious case than the disappearance of Ambrose Small. He dropped out of sight, as though the earth had suddenly opened up and swallowed him, after closing the sale of his vast theatrical holdings to the Trans-Canada Theatre Co., and after receiving a check for $1,000,000 in part payment the day before.

Speculation Rife

Naturally while the mystery is a mystery, speculation is rife. That Mr. Small is dead is the general opinion.

The kidnapping theory, coupled with the fact that Small has been missing so long gives point to the belief he is dead.

Who killed Ambrose Small? This is the question every citizen of Toronto has asked himself scores of times.

Thousands Spent

Thousands of dollars have been spent trying to find a trace of Mr. Small and to solve the case. Sergeant of Detectives Austin J. Mitchell has travelled more than forty five thous and miles invesigating clues of all kinds. But as on the day he vanished, the police have not been able to uncover aclue that would end the mystery, except that they arrested John Doughty, Mr. Small's secretary, and convicted him for the theft of $105,000 of the bonds.

Relatives of Mr. Small have slight hopes that he will ever be found and some of them think he never will be.

Unmarried Mother and Her Young Son Finds Benefactor

NEW YORK Dec. 2.—Miss Nancy Jordan, English girl, who was admitted to the United States only after Mrs. Mary Warren of Kansas City, Mo., had deposited with immigration authorities a $1,000 bond for her and her boy of 3 years old, to-day celebrated her release from Ellis island on a shopping tour with her benefactress.

Mrs. Warren has not decided when she and Miss Jordan will leave for Kansas City, where she will provide a home for Miss Jordan and her son.

"We'll stay in New York and shop a while," she said.

"It is good to be free again," Miss Jordan said, smiling at her small son. "I was sure all the time that Frank and I would not be excluded from the country, but it was very discouraging to spend a week on Ellis island."

Mrs. Warren ,the former wife of Frank G. Warren who knew Miss Jordan four years ago in England, played with Miss Jordan's boy.

"Very glad to have Miss Jordan and Frank here," she said.

The young unmarried mother repeated her denial that Warren was Frank's father.

Mrs. Warren said that she was interested in the girl simply because she liked and admired her.

"Miss Jordan will live in my home for the present," she said. "Beyond that we have made no plans."

OVER 1,200 PERSONS HOMELESS RESULT FIRE.

Million Loss at Terrabonne Through Fire Which Started in a Sawmill.

TERRABONNE, Dec. 2.—(Canadian Press.)—One hundred and seventy-five houses destroyed, 1,200 persons rendered homeless, and millions of dollars' damage done, is the latest estimate of losses sustained by a fire which swept a large section of this place last night. Fire fighters and apparatus from Montreal are present in large numbers and have dynamited buildings to prevent any spread of the fire to the west end of the town, although the flames are now pretty well under control. Refugees are being cared for at College St. Louis which was not reached by the flames.

The conflagration was started by an explosion in Limoges saw mill, which immediately set buildings ablaze. From there the flames leaped to a pile of lumber and houses in the vicinity. General panic was avoided by carrying of host through streets by Fathers of Holy Sacrament.

BOMBS WERE HURLED AT TEACHER'S HOME.

BELFAST, Dec. 2. — (Canadian Press.)—Bombs were hurled to-day into the home of Professor Thomas Walsh, of Galway University and chairman of Urban Council. Missiles broke windows and tore a hole in the wall. It is believed the act was the outgrowth of Prof. Walsh's refusal to permit discussion of Dublin executions in Council.

DEADLOCK AT PEACE PARLEY

Smoke Rising From the Far East in Increasing Volumes.

LAUSANNE, Dec. (Special).—Lacst reports show a deadlock among the delegates at the peace conference here, and an adjournment may be made for six weeks.

ISMET PASHA'S STAND

LAUSANNE, Dec. 2.—(Canadian Press).—The question of Turkish capitulations was on the Near East Conference programme for discussion to-day. Ismet Pasha was prepared to make a hard fight to sustain his claim that the Kemalist Government has successfully terminated speial privileges accorded to foreigners under the Constantinople regime. He also attempted to prove that all capitulations have been waived by the Angora Government, and that Turkey must no longer be hampered by foreign conrol of Customs and finance and that there is no necessity for further consular courts to administer justice to other Nationals living in Turkey.

TROUBLES CONTINUES

CONSTANTINOPLE, Dec 2.—(Canadian Press). — With reports coming in from Lausanne that the allies are continuing their tactics of not recognizing Turkey as an independent sovereign state and disregarding the national pact, smoke is rising from the Near East in increasing volume. Raoul Bey announces that nothing had been done in Lausanne except to refuse the Turk's demands. Afterward he held a long conference with the Afghan representatives at Angora of Sultan Ahmed Khan to consider the situation.

News from Thrace while belittled by Greeks, indicated that trouble is continuing. The Orient express is still held up and is not leaving nor coming in. Rebels are under the leadership of Nevzad Bey. At the same time despatches from Bagdad indicate trouble there. It is reported that the Kurds have formed a Goverment and taken over Sulmania, which the British evacuated few months ago.

MEN FEATURED MARKET TO-DAY

Were as Plentiful as Ever But Moved Slowly—Hugged the Stove as if February Had Driven Them in.

The men made a ring around the market stove this morning as a matter or habit or of defiance to the ukase recently issued by Ald. M. McIntyre, whose Property Committee were reported as being determined to clear out the loafers who clutter up the aisles and generally impede the trade that is peculiarly women's. There was no excuse of cold weather to cause the congestion of the men, and if they must hug the stove why not move it down to one corner seeing that the authorities are loath to let loose the police.

This morning's prices were featured the firmness of eggs which ranged from 70 to 75 cents a dozen with a fairly large supply. Poultry was abundant with chickens selling at 25c and 27c a pound,. but as a matter of fact one buyer loaded up at 20c a pound. Butter was freely offered at 35c.

Outside potatoes were 80c and pork 18 and 20c a pound. The usual display of garden stuff made up the background of the outdoor market with prices of vegetables generally unchanged.

A NEAR PANIC AT MEIGHEN'S MEETING

Wind Rang Fire Alarm Bell in Crowded Hall, Carleton Place.

CARLETON PLACE, Dec. 2. — (Canadian Press).—The wind affected a wire, ringing the fire alarm, and nearly caused a panic in the crowded hall in which the Right Hon. Arthur Meighen spoke here last night. The bell rang as he was speaking on the Near East situation, and some one shouted "fire." The people arose en masse, but Mr. Meighen assured them there was no danger and the panic subsided.

Attacking the action of the Government in the Near East, Mr. Meighen declared that the honor of Canada had been stained as never before in its history. When other Dominions had rallied to the support of Britain, he said, Canada had weakened the Empire's cause by merely asking a question. The Government did not have the courage to say "Yes" or "No." He charged that the Government had not co-ordinated the National Railways and expressed the belief that it did not desire to get the best results out of the National lines. He had not criticized Sir Henry Thornton, he said, but maintained the Government had thrown a better man overboard "through party vanity."

DETROIT MAYOR WILL RESIGN TUESDAY NEXT.

Says Surgeon Left Sponge in Abdomen Sues For $100,000

ANN ARBOR, Mich., Dec. 2. Charging that a surgical sponge was left in the wound sewed up after an operation had been performed on her by Dr. Scott C. Runnells, director of homeopathic laboratories at the Univeristy of Michigan, Fay Robinson of Ann Arbor, has started suit for $100,000 damages against the doctor and the board of regents. The plaintiff says that on March 23, 1921, she was operated on by Dr. Runnells. Four months after, she says, it was necessary to have another operation, in the opinion of other physicians, ao save her life. She alleges that this operation disclosed a sponge in her abdomen.

PRESENT WINDOWS TO S.A. FOR TEMPLE

Will Be Dedicated to Memory of the Army's Soldier Dead.

The Great War Veterans' Association has presented to the Salvation Army five beautiful stained glass windows, to be dedicated to the memory of the Salvation Army men who gave up their lives for the Empire in the World War. These windows form the contribution of the Association toward the remodelling of the Temple, and will be placed in the main auditorium, where they will beautify the front and sides of the building.

The windows will be put in place immediately, and will be unveiled at a special ceremony which will be held Sunday afternoon, December 17. Members of the G.W.V.A. and other returned men in the city will attend in a body to pay tribute to the fallen.

These windows are five of the twelve that were in the old Murray Street Baptist Church, now converted into the G.W.V.A. Hall. When the building was remodelled they were very carefully removed and stored away until an opportunity, such as this, should arise, where they could be used to commemorate the memory of the boys who made the supreme sacrifice.

CANADIAN BACON IS AGAIN LOSING HOLD.

OTTAWA, Dec. 2. — (Canadian Press.)—At present Canadian bacon is losing rather than gaining ground on the British market, Dr. J. H. Grisdale, Deputy Minister of Agriculture, told senior officers of live stock branch at a banquet here last night.

"While in appearance Canadian bacon on the British market is equal to that of England and Ireland, the same is considered to be below their requirements. Hog grading will undoubtedly restore to Canada her lost prestige on the British market," he said.

PRINCE ANDREW WILL BE PLACED ON TRIAL.

ATHENS, December 2 (Special to The Examiner). — Prince Andrew is to go on trial to-day or on Monday.

Conviction of Henry Scriver Is Annulled

Had Been Sentenced for Possession of Teaspoonful of Spirits—Bottle Picked Up on Roadside

IDENTITY NOT PROVEN

In a judgment delivered this morning, Judge Huycke quashed the conviction of Henry Scriver, of Hastings, who was fined $500 with the option of three months in jail, on a charge of having liquor in a place other than his private dwelling contrary to the Ontario Temperance Act. The appeal from the decision of Police Magistrate Langley was heard this week. Scriver has been in jail since he was sentenced. He was represented by Mr. C. R. Widdifield and Mr. Joseph Wearing was the solicitor for License Inspector Stewart, who laid the information.

Judge Huycke's written annulment is as follows:

This is an appeal to me as County Judge from a conviction made by Mr. O. A. Langley, Police Magistrate for the City and County of Peterborough. Mr. Langley fined the appellant Scriver $500 and costs, fixed at $26.64, and in default of payment imprisonment for three months in the jail at Peterborough. Scriver now appeals to me from this conviction, the conviction being for having liquor in a place other than his private dwelling house, namely in a motor car on the main highway between Havelock and Norwood.

The difficulty all arose out of a motor accident or collision. On the 12th day of November last about 7 p.m., Scriver was driving an old Ford car and collided with, or rather overtook and ran into a horse and buggy driven by W. McKay. The buggy was upset and so was the car. Arising from this three charges were laid against Scriver. First, negligent driving of his car. On this charge he was convicted and fined the sum of $20 or $30 with costs. From the evidence before me no reasonable fault could be found with this decision. The second charge was that he was intoxicated at the time in question. This charge was dismissed by the Magistrate, and from the evidence before me I would say most properly dismissed. The third charge was the one in question here, that of having liquor in his car.

Bottle Found on Road.

The circumstances were that a lot of tools and other articles were thrown out of the car when it upset and were scattered along the road, some under the car and others behind and beside it. Some of the spectators went to his assistance and some one picked up a bottle from the road and threw it in a pile with Scriver's belongings which were being gathered together for him. Scriver when gathering up his property to put in the car, picked up this bottle and threw it over the road side by the fence; later, one Nightengale found this bottle, or a bottle, near the fence, when it was found to contain about a teaspoonful of liquid, some say it was clear like water, others slightly colored like weak tea. "De minimis lex non curat" is an old legal maxim of great authority in our courts in all past time, but perhaps it does apply so forcibly to more modern enactments. On this charge of having a teaspoonful of liquid in his car, Scriver has been fined $500 and costs, or three months' imprisonment. He is now in custody in the jail in Peterborough.

Case Inherently Weak.

With very great respect for the judgment of the learned police magistrate, I am unable to agree with the conclusion he has arrived at in this case. It is not affirmatively shown that the bottle in question was the property of Scriver, or that it was ever in his car. Apart altogether from the denial of Scriver of any ownership or knowledge of it, I think the case fails from its inherent weakness. A bottle was found on the road near, or under the car, after the accident. This bottle was tossed over by the fence. Some bottle was found near the fence after dark, and it is assumed to be the bottle that was originally found near the car. This may or may not be correct, and may or may not be the same bottle. Nightingale found it, he gave it to Fife, Fife gave it to McKay— there being a general discussion about it and the night said in argument to have been dark, although there is no distinct evidence in the record as to that, except from the time, 7 p.m. The evidence given by the Crown is conflicting as to where the bottle was found. Assuming for the moment, and it is but an assumption, that the bottle so found was the property and in the possession of Scriver, it is not satisfactorily and affirmatively shown that the same bottle was found by the fence, and further and perhaps more seriously it is not satisfactorily shown that the same bottle got into the hands of Constable Puffer.

Identity Not Shown.

The constable says he went down on the night in question to the scene of the accident, that some one there on the road gave him a bottle. The other witnesses speak as if the bottle had been taken to the house nearby. Constable Puffer does not say who gave it to him. McKay, the last holdcr of the bottle, according to the evidence does not say he gave it to Puffer. It is true that Fife says he saw McKay give it to Puffer, but the identity of the bottle is not shown satisfactorily. It is not

PUT CANADA'S HOUSE IN ORDER (SAYS ROBERT HARSTONE) BEFORE INVITING THE GUESTS

Girl Whipped With Strap Six Times a Day For a Month

DETROIT, Dec. 2.—Johanna Golya, 12 years old, living with her foster parents, Frank and Lengyel was taken to the Juvenile Dentention Home by Maj. John F. Roehl special investigation for the board of health after the child had told him that her parents had beaten her with a strap as often as six times a day for nearly a month.

Maj. Roehl investigated the case following a complaint made by the principal and nurse of the Morley school, where Johanna was a pupil. The nurse told the Major that she had examined the child's body Monday and found her back covered with bruises which she said were caused by a strap that her foster father had used in whipping her A visit to the child's home followed whereupon the foster mother is alleged to have told the nurse that she would do with the child as she pleased. Maj. Roehl sent officers to the home and had the child taken to the Detention Home, pending the outcome of a complaint to the prosecuting attorney.

THOUGHTS TURN TO CANDIDATES

With Nomination Day on Friday, December 22nd—Warming Up Public Duty Again,

While most persons reckon the passing of December in terms of the approach to Christmas, ratepayers are supposed to mark the intervening time to nomination day, which in the municipal calendar falls this year on Friday, December 22nd, with elections on New Year's. Presumably the thoughts of the citizens are turning to the duty—some might even regard it an opportunity—of shaking up the administrative bodies or infusing new blood as a matter of prerogative or dissatisfaction. And for the guidance of those who are beating the bushes in the hope of dragging out new candidates the records show that in the Council the terms of Mayor Taylor and Aldermen Crowe, Gainey, Hamilton, Jones and Morrison expire this year; on the Board of Education, Messrs. Fowler, Denne, McKone and Greene, and on the Utilities Commission, Robert Hicks.

Whether or not there will be a mayoralty contest will depend upon the fixedness of the municipal amenity, that is almost a custom, of stretching the mayoral term into two years, and correlatively the ratepayers' opinion of Mayor Taylor's leadership. There have been rumours that His Worship will have opposition, and in this connection the names of from one to four of the aldermen, individually and collectively, have been mentioned. And the possibilities have been further enlarged by the inclusion of the names of other citizens who have been more or less prominent in public affairs.

However, the custom of the mayor's two-year term was threatened in December gossip on several other occasions without materializing, and it is more than possible that Mayor Taylor will not be an exception.

Street conversations these days reveal a conviction that Peteborough needs all the ability it can enlist in public service. This is a perennial opinion which waxes until nomination day, and then is satisfied to make the best of the majority of the ratepayers' selections on New Year's.

"GALLAGHER'S" AGAIN

We have had such splendid success in the treatment of Rheumatism that it is worth any one's while to try a three months' Treatment of our Blood Purifier and Kidney Remedy. We do not pretend to get perfect results in all cases, but so very many persons have been completely relieved, that it is well worth a trial. In any case your general health will be much improved.

Last Saturday a party from out of town said in the office that rheumatism was settling in feet and ankles, and after taking a course of "Gallagher's" it had all disappeared. A business man of this city has said that he would not take a thousand dollars for what Gallagher's Herbal Remedies did for him. We can give you the names of scores of such cases.

A Three Months' Treatment costs only Seven Dollars and a Half and consists of three sixteen-ounce bottles of our Blood Purifier and six eight-ounce bottles of Kidney Remedy. You will be well pleased with a trial.

Sane Immigration Policy Needed for Development of the West, but Close Attention Should Be Given to Vexing Problems That Require Solution—Cheaper Money, Machinery and Labor.

VAST COAL DEPOSITS

"Shouldn't we put our house in order before we invite guests," was the figurative expression used by Mr. Robert Harstone in commenting upon an immigration policy for Canada at the request of the Examiner.

"Canada needs a sane immigration policy, and I mean, of course, Western Canada. In the past we have brought in settlers, and left them to shift for themselves. Many of them had no knowledge of farming, but came here as a last resort, and, eventually failing in the attempt, drifted out of the country. The experience of the last twenty years has clearly shown us that the West needs farmers with a knowledge of farming, and who also have a little capital. And they should be selected as carefully as conditions will permit."

Mr. Harstone recently returned from the West, where he has extensive interests in the Prairie Provinces. This was the twentieth successive summer he spent there, visiting many parts of Manitoba, Alberta and Saskatchewan, whose development he has kept in close touch with year after year. It would not be an exaggeration to say that Mr. Harstone is an authority on Canada's great middle west, its difficulties and needs, and general conditions. He has seen since 1891 cities like Edmonton, Calgary and Regina grow from hamlets, many large towns spring up all over the prairies to prosper and flourish, and railways extend in all directions, giving form and pulsing, vigorous life to the Provinces which only a short time ago were grouped together in what was known as the Northwest Territory.

Cheaper Money Needed.

Mr. Harstone emphatically advocates a broader, selective immigration policy for Canada, but he is convinced that many conditions call for redress and readjustment, without which an increasing population cannot yield its fullest advantages and benefits to the country. These conditions might be lumped together in a general enunciation that the farmers of the West must be enabled to grow grain at a profit.

"In the first place, the Western farmer needs cheaper money, machinery and labour," said Mr. Harstone. "The prices for machinery should be lower than they have been, and the rate of interest on loans should be less. This is of great importance to men who must borrow from the loan companies, banks and other sources. The average wage paid to farm labour was from $5.50 to $6 a day during the harvest season, and in most instances labourers refused to work beyond certain hours even to avoid impending rain. As a consequence farmers lost many valuable days. A more reasonable attitude by the men who are engaged on the farms would be a great help.

Marketing System.

The farmers need a proper system of marketing their grain so that it will not all be maketed in the course of three months or be forced on the market below the cost of production. The prosperity of Canada depends to a large extent upon the prosperity of the West, and financiers should give careful attention to the problems of the West, and help to remedy prevailing conditions. In other words, they should help to put the Western household in good order."

Smaller Farms.

Mixed farming, rotation of crops and smaller farms are changes Mr. Harstone believes would be profitable and would solve some of the problems. "A land unit there should not exceed 480 acres," he said. "This could be worked with the same outfit as 320 acres, and would make an ideal farm. Mixed farming should be more generally practiced. There should not be so much attention given to one crop. With mixed, coarser grains, hogs could be produced extensively, and the fertility of the land could be maintained without resorting to fallow periods."

Operating costs have materially increased throughout the West. Threshing that used to cost from 8 to 10 cents a bushel now run from 12c to 20c a bushel and even higher this year. The amazing development and improvement of the country along social lines, including roads and schools, telephones and other utilities, mean that the farmer has to base his earnings on land worth $35 and $40 an acre, which ten years ago cost $20 and $25 an acre.

Mr. Harstone said he was constantly impressed by the wonderful feat that has been accomplished in a comparatively few years in the upbuilding of populous and thriving cities and the development of the rural districts.

This Year's Crop.

Council Gets Big Bill For Better Roads

From Suburban Commission an Account for $8,000 and From Ont. Govt. for $14,688.23.

SOME COMMENT

Bills for roads Biggs built out of Peterborough amounting to $22,688.23 were laid before the Finance Committee of the Council last night. Ald. Phelan presided, with Mayor Taylor and Aldermen McIntyre and Hamilton present.

It was a case of road costs comin' home to roost. One was an item of $8,000 from the Suburban Area Commission, which evoked a mild criticism from Ald. Hamilton. The other was a levy from the Ontario Department of Highways for $14,688.23, being twenty per cent. of the expenditure of $73,411.16 on 4.27 miles of the Gravel road within the suburban area up to December 31st, 1921.

Someone asked rather helplessly whether anything could be done about these accounts, and the grim answered followed that there was nothing to do but pay them.

Ald. Phelan was instructed to ascertain whether the major item had overlooked anything, but this was merely a stalling formality.

"I'd like to see the Council issue ten-year debentures for that," suggested Ald. Hamilton.

"That sounds like a good idea," said Ald. Phelan. "Mr. Adams told me there wasn't any difficulty in selling the short-term debentures."

So much for that.

Suburban Bill.

The $8,000 bill came from the Suburban Area Commission, composed of E. Deyell, Ald. Morrison and W. Brown, and was the city's assessment for the work done this year under the commission's direction. This money was due on November 1st, and last night's communication was a follow-up communication from County Treasurer Elliott.

Apparently there were no details accompanying the demand, and Ald. Hamilton observed that the Council should have had reports from Ald. Morrison from time to time.

Discussing the commission's reported plans, Ald. Hamilton said he understood that the original intention contemplated the extension of the suburban roads as county roads beyond the suburban boundary of four or five miles from the city. Apparently, however, this was not being carried out, and the work ended abruptly at the rural end of the suburban area on some roads. On others Ald. Hamilton understood that the commission was carrying suburban work ten or twelve miles into the country. He contended that the Council was entitled to the confidence of the commission and information of progress, and not simply the bald claim for payment at the end of the season.

A grant of $100 to the Poultry Association was recommended in a motion by Ald. Hamilton, seconded by Mayor Taylor. This money is given now in time for the annual show in January, and represents the usual grant that would be customarily made early next year.

TO-DAY'S BLUNDER CORRECTED

It is always best to use standard size cards or envelopes. During the Christmas, Easter and Jewish holiday seasons great quantities of very small envelopes and cards are put into the mails, with the result that all postal work is very much retarded and considerable mail disfigured and torn. These small and irregular shaped envelopes and cards do not run freely through our postmarking machines, but frequetly get caught in belts and are mutiliated and torn; and many of them are of such odd shape that they must be held out of the regular mail and postmarked by hand, which is a slow and tedious process. Delay is also caused by the fact that small sizes do not fit into letter packages readily and cannot be tied securely.

CANADA MUST CONSERVE HER TIMBER SUPPLY

FOR THE FUTURE.

OTTAWA, Dec. 12.— (Canadian Press.)—A call to Canadian citizens to assist in preventing the devastation of Canada's remaining timber supply has been issued by Premier King in a letter to the Canadian Forestry Association.

"The Canadian people have before them many onerous and perplexing problems demanding, for a wise solution, the utmost in unselfish citizenship," writes the Prime Minister. "One of the finest tests of loyalty to the state is to be found in individual support of the cause of forest conservation. Its keynote and inspiration lie in the forethought for Canada's future. Present gain should be made subordinate to the profit, comfort and safety of generations to come. The people of Canada own more than 85 per cent. of the forest lands. The state with its uninterrupted tenure, is peculiarly endowed to act a sconservator to timber corp which may take a century to matur.e We must look upon our forest resources as a source of wealth held in trust for this and future generations."

"This is emphatically the business of citizens. We cannot relegate it to any control that does not focus its eyes on the legitimate rights of the people of a century hence."

Eleven Men Perished When Storm Swept Lake Superior

Coastguard Crew Saved Nine — All Could Have Been Saved If They Had Followed Instructions.

ONE BODY RECOVERED

HOUGHTON, Mich., December 2. —Canadian Press. — Eleven men, members of the crew of the Canadian steamer Maplehurst, lost their lives early yesterday morning when the vessel foundered near the upper or canal entrance to the Keewenaw waterway. Nine others were saved by Captain Charles A. Tucker and the members of the crew of the Coast Guard station at the canal.

Not a single life would have been lost, Captain Tucker declared, if the men on the doomed steamer had acted promptly and jumped into the Coast Guard power boat when he told them to, as he brought it alongside the Maplehurst. Ten times, Captain Tucker said, his frail craft was brought alongside the Maplehurst and every man on board had a chance to get off. Ten out of the twenty on board jumped. First Mate Henry Smith missed the lifeboat and went to his death in the lake. The nine others who jumped were saved while the ten who remained on the Maplehurst perished.

Chief Engineer Ambrose Dunn, of Kingston.

First Mate G. Lalonde, Veryfield, Ont.

Wheelsman Jack Wood, Hamilton, Ont.

Wheelsman Hiram —— (last name unknown), Kingston.

Oiler Gaston Malette, Cascade Point, Ont.

Fireman "Mac" Mackastle, Sidney, Ont.

Second Cook Hughes, Montreal.

Deckhand C. E. Pelon, St. Zotuque

Deckhand A. Pelon, St. Zotuque.

The Survivors—

Jean Duval, St. Zotuque; Will Sauve, St. Zotuque; Frank Roderique, Coteau Du Lac; Fred Marshall, Montreal; R. Marshall, Montreal; Henry Burch, Cabong; H. Duval, St. Zotuque; Henry Murray, Kingston, Ont.; Thomas C. Brown, Montreal.

The Maplehurst, owned by the Canadian Steamship Company, of Providence, Quebec, was bound from Lorrain, Ohio, to Fort William, with a cargo of coal. The vessel encountered a storm on Thursday and Capt Menard headed his ship down the shore intending to enter the canal, but the storm increased so rapidly that he feared to enter.

The Maplehurt continued west, three or four miles off shore, while the storm raged with increased fury. The velocity of the wind was over 60 miles an hour.

About one o'clock in the morning the pilot and the wheelhouse on the vessel began to break up from the hard pounding that it was receiving and Captain Menard lighted flares.

Seeing these signals, Captain Tucker ordered the lifeboats out. The Maplehurst was but two miles off shore and four miles west of the canal. The steamer was still under her own power when Captain Tucker and his men reached her, but was weakened from the continued pounding.

Ten times Captain Tucker brought his coast guard cutter alongside the Maplehurst and all but one of the men who jumped were saved.

Captain Menard, the survivors said told his men to jump if they wanted to, but said that he was going to stay by the ship. The tenth time Captain Tucker passed the Maplehurst the lights on the steamer went out and when he turned he could not locate the vessel in the darkness Tucker made for shelter, his own craft being in danger of being dashed to pieces by the heavy seas.

The Maplehurst evidently foundered a few minutes later. She is now lying about a thousand feet from shore. One body, that of First Mate Smith, was washed ashore.

Bakers of Paris Decide to Strike

PARIS, Dec. 2. — (Canadian Press).—The bakers of Paris yesterday decided to strike in protest against the action of the Prefect of the Seine fixing the price of bread at one franc ten centimes per kilogram. Announcement of the price was made in a decree published today. During the war bread sold for one franc per kilo.

The city administration is mobilizing all the bakers in Paris to make bread and will distribute to citizens tomorrow morning in front of the City of Paris.

Tied Woman Up and Tortured Her With Burning Matches

NEW YORK, Dec 2.—Confessing he had tied the wife of a policeman several months ago and and burned her flesh with matches in an effort to force her to divulge the hiding place of her jewels, and to additional charges of robbery and grand larceny, 16 year old Albert Kruger today was sentenced to 13 years in State's Prison. He will begin his sentence at Sing Sing to-morrow.

SAY NATIONS' LEAGUE IS A SPENDTHRIFT

Has Not Justified Its Existence Declares "John Bull."

By LLOYD ALLEN.

LONDON.—(By Mail to United Press).—"The League of Nations has not justified its existence."

"It is helpless in preventing war."

"It is wasteful."

"It has taken front rank as a money-spender."

Thus "John Bull," the British weekly of large circulation sums up the league's record in an article entitled "Squandermania at Geneva," the costly futility of the League of Nations.

"John Bull" declares:

"With the ideal of the League of Nations everybody must agree. This is an entirely different thing from agreeing with its methods and procedure.

"What is the League of Nations doing? In the recent Near East crisis we were on the verge of another great war. The league was helpless. But when it comes to spending money the league is right in the front ranks.

"True, it is dealing with certain questions — the opium menace and the age consent for the women of Siam. This is a far cry from the prevention of war and the reduction of armaments. But the league is spending 1,000 pounds a day in salaries alone.

"Its officials and clerks draw handsome salaries with no practical results, and altogether the league has cost over a million pounds.

"Girl typists working in Geneva get more than British Members of Parliament at Westminster; married members of the staff are sent over from this country with their wives and children at the expense of the ratepayers.

"Sir Eric Drummond, the chief of the British staff, gets 4,000 pounds a year and 6,000 pounds for expenses. Many officials get 2,000 pounds a year and expenses.

"The day may come when the League of Nations will justify its existence."

CHICAGO, December 1. — The police were busy yesterday dragging Lake Michigan for the body of Walter L. Squires of Arlington Heights, Ill., believed to have committed suicide earlier in the day near the foot of Van Buren street.

A complete suit of clothes, an overcoat and a pair of shoes, were found by Carl Nelson, of 6315 Harper Ave., early in the morning near the lake. Attached to them was a note reading:

"If anything has happened it is all a mistake. Some one has done something awful but what it is I do not know. You have the wrong party.—Walter L. Squires."

MANY VESSELS ARE HELD UP BY STORM

Many Have Put Into Sheltered Harbors to Await More Favorable Weather

DETROIT, Dec. 2. — (Canadian Press.)—The storm sweeping Lake Superior yesterday and the severe weather approaching the Lower Lake region will find more than 150 vessels north of Detroit, eighty-eight steamers having passed here, upbound, since Monday.

Reports reaching here last night indicated a large number of vessels were in sheltered harbors awaiting more favorable weather.

Only one vessel had been reported in difficulties south of the St. Mary's canal. The steamer G. B. Leonard, grounded in Mud Lake during the day ,while battling the gale. She was coal-laden. A wrecker and tugs have gone to her aid from Sault Ste. Marie.

Continued heavy coal movements have kept the unusually large number of vessels in service during the late shipping season.

HALF A TOWN IS WIPED OUT

Terrebonne Destroyed by Fire and 400 People Homeless — Spectacular Scene.

MONTREAL, Dec. 2.—(Canadian Press.)— The lower half of the town of Terrebonne, 25 miles from Montreal, was destroyed by fire last night, according to a telephone message received here this morning by the Canadian Press. The town hall, post office and 75 houses are said to be destroyed with the loss of half a million dollars. The church, convent and Roman Catholic college are reported safe. Four hundred people are homeless. No lives were lost.

Scenes of wildest confusion attended the outbreak of the fire. Householders rushed from burning buildings, carrying with them what they could salvage. Women dragged sleighs along muddy streets, while men tried to combat the flames. Fathers of the Holy Sacrament brought out the host, and it was carried about the smoke filled streets, while men, women and children knelt and prayed. The fire was most spectacular. It was so vivid from Montreal that people here thought it was within the city limits. Three miles away at St. Vincent it was possible to read by the light of the flames, and so strong was the heat in Terrebonne that people could not wear coats.

FRENCH METHOD OF CHARGES FOR PHONES

Applicants For Service in Pairs Are Charged Seven Hundred Francs.

"You may get service in seven years" is the hopeful statement applicants for telephones in Japan are accustomed to hear.

Now comes France with conditions almost challenging Japan. "You understand, of course, there is a charge of 700 francs on new applications" is how our Parisian brothers are greeted when anxious to obtain telephone service.

Deputy Jean Lambert, who has just returned from a tour of investigation, which included this continent, has classified telephone conditions in France as "the worst in the world." His report recommends that the telephone system be turned over to Private interest, and removed entirely from the Political influence.

At a time when Business interests all over the world are sparing no effort towards greater business, it is astonishing to read that the French administration in order to discourage applicants for telephone serivce, have placed a super-charge of 700 francs on every new application.

Stories of wills, bequeathing a place on the waiting list to a favorite son, are common in the land of Nippon. Deputy Lambert is evidently anxious to avoid such a condition in France and his suggestion that the control of such an important ntility should be changed is timely when such a charge is imposed by the administration of a public service.

OBITUARY

JOHN TAYLOR.

HASTINGS, Dec. 2.— Mr. John Taylor passed away at his home in Percy on Friday morning. Although he had been ill for some time it was hoped by his friends that his health would be regained, but his advanced years could not withstanding the severe strain, and death ensued.

Mr. Taylor had been a resident of Percy for many years and his sterling qualities as a man and citizen gained for him the respect of all classes. He leaves to mourn his loss besides his widow, two sons and four daughters.

The funeral will be held Sunday from his late residence to Trent Valley cemetery.

SETTLEMENT MADE IN RAILWAY WAGE

About 40,000 Canadian Employees Will Benefit By New Agreement — Slight Raise Given.

MONTREAL, Dec. 2.—(Canadian Press.)—An agreement was concluded here yesterday afternoon between the wage sub-committee of the Railway Association of Canada and the mens' committee of the United Brotherhood of Maintenance of Way Men and Railway Shop Laborers, providing that, effective as of November 1, rates of pay for employees covered by the agreement will be increased on an average rate of two cents an hour.

The agreement was signed in the offices of the Railway Association here and is the result of negotiations which have been proceeding for the past week or ten days. Before it goes finally into effect, it must be ratified by the operating committee of the Railway Association of Canada.

Approximately 40,000 Canadian railway employees who come under the category of maintenance of way men will benefit by the new arrangement.

There remains now only the dispute between the Canadian Railway Companies and the shop craft employees and another attempt to come to a final settlement in this long drawn out wage dispute will be made next week the shopmen's committee representatives meeting here next Monday.

As soon as they meet they will be informed of the result of the ballot to determine whether there shall be a strike or a compromise. This result which was known to union officials on November 1 last, has been kept a close secret.

Organization to Help Sale of Work By U. S. Artists

Prominent Business Men and Artists and Sculptors Are Getting Together to Popularize Knowledge and Sale of Works of Art By U. S. Artists.

NEW YORK, December 2 (Canadian Press). — Plans have been completed for the organisation of an association of prominent business men on one hand and artists and sculptors to the great portion of the United States public who, owing to the present inadequate system of exhibition and distribution have found the buying of works of art prohibitive. Briefly, the aim of the new association is to popularise the knowledge and sale of the works of United States artists.

The new public galleries, to be opened about 1st January, occupy the entire Dome Floor of the Grand Central Station. This will be the largest gallery in New York, outside of the Metropolitan Museum, having a floor area of 14,000 square feet and a lineal wall space for hanging pictures of 1,500 feet.

The names back of the new enterprise are names significant in the field of art and the cultural life of the United States. Heading the lists of invited artists who will display their work are John S. Sargent and Daniel Chester French, while among the lay members are such well-known names as Mr. Irving T. Bush, Mrs. Joseph H. Choate, Miss Helen Frick, and Mr. Charles L. Hutchinson, President of Chicago Arts Institute.

Millions of dollars are spent every year in the United States in the education of artists through schools, foreign scholarships and awards, yet nothing is spent for the selling of the artists' output after he has received his education. Such masters as Blakelock have walked the streets hungry, unable to sell their wares. The lay members of the society, who will have full active control of the new galleries, feel that the artist, being the genius who creates, should not be expected to merchandise his own stuff. Yet it is necessary that the worthy artist find a ready market for his paintings and sculptures or embrace the other alternatives—starvation through life (with perhaps a tardy recognition and fabulous prices after death)—or go in for commercial hack work.

Previous attempts to found an artists' salon, or permanent exhibition, have failed, the same trait that restrains the artist from being a good salesman stopping him from organisation for mutual help and advancement. The result has been that only a few of the artists highest in rank have been able to market their works through the fashionable galleries, and at a price that attracts only those of exceptional means; a great group of worthy painters and sculptors find themselves with canvases and figures with a very slow market and with no means or time for the disposition of them.

The object of the organisation is to put on a commercial basis the merchandising of the artists' output. The working plan of the new association is as simple. No one will benefit by the undertaking except the artist. He will be invited to exhibit his wares in the galleres, the number of pictures or pieces being determined by the space, and when his subject is sold he will receive the sale price minus a nominal commission. The lay members have contributed sufficient funds for the establishment of the project.

INQUEST WAS GREAT JOKE IN GARNEAU CASE

WRONG CLUE.

QUEBEC, December 2 (Canadian Press). — "The inquest held by the coroner was a huge joke," was the remark made by one of the witnesses at the session of he Royal Commission yesterday afternoon.

Blanche Garneau's uncle, Henri Delisle, said that several important witnesses had not been heard by the coroner's jury, and that the inquest had been adjourned to allow one of the jurors to assist at the horse races at Three Rivers.

Mrs. Delisle, the girl's aunt, could not understand how the body had not been found earlier by the children who played near the place where it was discovered.

At the morning session counsel for the Attorney-General's Department produced the death certificate of Herman Madden, one of the persons Special Detective Valade had mentioned as being one of those the rumours connected with the murder.

The certificate showed Herman Madden had died in 1918. The murder was committed in 1920.

Mr. Jusice Archibald, one of the commissioners, was asked by L. G. Belley, K.C., of Quebec, to correct a statement the Judge had made when he had said Mr. Belley had said he knew two persons who corresponded to certain other persons mentioned in the rumours.

Mr. Belley claimed he had never said he knew any such two persons.

The commission decided they would consider Mr. Belley's request and reply to it later.

"They all come back to Oatmeal"

THIS is the day of fads in foods as well as in everything else. Many new breakfast foods are launched. People experiment with first one and then another. But in the end they all come back to oatmeal.

WHY?

Because instinct leads them back to the simple, basic food which provides the balanced nourishment the human system requires.

Oats come nearer to being a perfect food than any other cereal. They are vital to the health of children because they make brawn and bone for growing bodies. They are equally important for grown-ups as an energizing vim-food.

Just as Oats have greater food value than other cereals, so Quaker Oats have greater food value than ordinary oats.

We secure the very cream of the oat crop, and in the milling the grains are sifted until none but the rich, plump, queen grains are left. These are the oats you get in the Quaker Oats carton,—the finest oats in the world, with a flavour that is unrivalled. Protected by the sealed carton, Quaker Oats are kept fresh, sweet and clean, retaining all the original flavour of the unbroken kernels.

SATURDAY, DEC. 2ND, 1922.

A GRAND RECORD.

Figures as to Canada's crime record for 1921, although the statistics show an increase in the total number of convictions of 5.17 per cent. over the previous year, offer a remarkable demonstration of the fact that the police forces of Canadian municipalities have reached a high state of efficiency.

The statement shows that 138,708 indictable offences were known to have been committed during the year.

The persons prosecuted for these offences reached a total of 84 per cent. of this number, and the convictions a percentage of 86 per cent. of those prosecuted, which is a showing that speaks volumes for the manner in which the law is enforced throughout Canada.

Figures for the same period throughout the United States are not available, but it is a safe wager that the record of those prosecuted and those convicted of indictable offences did not come close to the Canadian percentage, judging by the large number of mysterious murders and other major crimes in which no arrests have been made.

Canadians, while regretting that the crime according to the official figures is slightly on the increase, can take pride in the fact that those entrusted with the enfocement of the law have been vigilant, active and successful in bringing the vast majority of the offenders to justice.

NO EARLY BIRDS HERE.

Several citizens who are contemplating allowing their names to go before the electors as candidates for municipal ofices at the coming election hesitate to declare themselves, believing that a short election campaign is the best plan.

While there is no necessity for dragging out the contest, it is true, there are many people who believe that if municipal candidates were in the field early there would be far more interest in the election and consequently a much larger vote polled than is usually the case.

The British elections can be quoted as an argument against that assertion, for while the campaign lasted only two weeks, the percentage of votes polled was much higher than is customarily reached in this country either in municipal or general elections.

A municipal campaign is a different affair, however, and it is possible that if the majority of those who are likely to be candidates were to announce that fact the apathy of the electors might be dispelled to a considerable extent.

Usually the composition of the field is not known until the time limit for the qualification of candidates has expired on the day after nomination, which does not leave much time for the electors to size up the candidates or for the latter to discuss the issues as they should be discussed.

SHOULD GET A FAIR CHANCE.

Regardless of political affiliations, the majority of people will be inclined to agree with Hon. Mr. Motherwell that attacks upon and criticism of the new Canadian Railway Board should be suspended until the new President and his Directors have been given a fair chance to show what they can do.

Sir Henry Thornton has arrived to take over his responsible duties and simple justice demands that he be afforded an opportunity to drag the National Railways out of the slough into which they have fallen.

Most Canadians will hope that his reputation for the successful handling of big tasks will be enhanced by his showing at the head of Canada's railways and will be inclined to resent attempts by anyone for political advantage to throw a monkey-wrench into the machinery.

Especially does it seem desirable that attacks on the new management should not be a feature of political gatherings, for it should readily be seen that the further the National Railways are kept out of politics the more likely are they to win their way through to that success that is imperative for the welfare and progress of the Dominion.

If Sir Henry Thornton falls down on the job or finds himself involved in a network of political intrigue that will make his task impossible there will be opportunity enough then to assault the Railway Board from the hustings.

In the interim the general opinion seems to be that Sir Henry and his Directors should be given a free hand to demonstrate their ability.

THE "ECONOMY" CANDIDATE.

In Peterborough, as doubtless everywhere, the municipal elections bring out a number of candidates whose chief claim upon the support of the electorate is that they profess to stand for the exercise of the most rigid economy in the administration of the city's affairs.

Blanket policies of that kind are of little value.

Genuine economy is undoubtedly needed, but candidates who adopt economy as an election slogan and yet have no real idea as to how they would proceed to bring it about are more concerned about getting elected than they are in seeing their promises fulfilled.

Such candidates should be more definite in their platform. Merely shouting, "We must have economy," is attempting to get into office under false pretences.

The simple truth is that the economy cry is worn out. It has been used so often as a vote-catcher that people are getting suspicious of the men who employ it.

A candidate who can show where expenditures can be lopped off, who is able to point out leaks through which the ratepayer's money is being wasted, who can lay his finger upon spots where the overhead can be cut down and who is willing to promise that if he is elected he will take steps to see that the leaks are plugged and the wasteful expenditure eliminated, would be in quite a different category.

The trouble is, however, that few aspirants have anything as definite as this to offer.

They merely shout "economy" at the top of their voices, hoping o slide into office under cover of the noise.

And once in their policy of saving seems to have been left on the outside.

"BLUE SKY" LEGISLATION.

The introduction of a "blue sky" bill is a development that has been suggested by many organizations, including the Peterborough Chamber of Commerce, and the committee of the Legislature which is at present discussing the details of the proposed legislation will have the best wishes of the majority of people with them in their labours.

While no legislation can keep a fool and his money united, it is undoubtedly true that much of the present flotation of stock swindling schemes would be prevented by a "blue sky" law.

Ontario is the happy hunting ground for shady promoters with all kinds of dubious investment plans, crooks who have been forced out of the various States in which legislation of this kind is in operation.

They are preying upon people who have little knowledge of business conditions and who are easy victims of the first glib-tongued, stock-selling "strong arm" who happens along.

It would not, of course, ensure that every prospect offered to the people represented a good investment.

Many undertakings, started in good faith and with no intention of defrauding the public, prove failures, and the intending investor will have to continue to exercise judgment.

But the "sucker" schemes with no prospect of success and nothing behind them but the nerve and audacity of the promoers should be fairly well looked after by the bill that is pending, and it will to that extent at least be a blessing to the Province.

PROTECTING INVESTORS.

It is quite obvious from the preliminary meeting of the "Blue Sky" committee in Toronto recently, that very little opposition may be expected from legitimate traders in stocks and shares, says The Hamilton Spectator. The proposed bill drawn up by Superintendent of Insurance Evan Gray and Deputy Provincial Secretary Johns, and its aim is to protect the investing public against fraud. That such protection is needed everyone is well aware. Not a day passes, and scarcely an hour, when some unfortunate victim in this province does not succumb to the wiles of plausible solicitors for a gim-crack get-rich-quick scheme of some kind or other which has nothing to recommend it beyond the enterprise, and not infrequently the dishonest enterprise, of its promoters. The suggested legislation, it is emphasized, must not be taken as an official endorsement of the particular project in which the investor may be interested. All that can be done is to certify to the honest intentions of the promoters; the public must exercise its own judgment as to the probable outcome of the venture.

The appointment of this committee will be warmly welcomed by the Ontario public, as well as by the legitimate bond traders. It is deplorable that the activities of financial "sharks" should have been allowed to continue so long, with a loss of money to the gullible investors of the province which has been as disastrous to themselves as it has been an economic waste to the province. Though we are warned that the government must approach the question with extreme caution, there are many ways in which such official supervision will work out to the advantage of people with funds at their disposal for the assistance of useful undertakings.

THE DISFRANCHISED SAVERS AND WORKERS.

How far are the weaknesses of political leaders responsible for the guerilla movements which are threatening the very foundations of responsible government? According to the despatches, the Ku Klux Klan practically control the State of Louisiana and are a formidable political factor in many other States of the Union. The Fascisti justify their usurpation of power in Italy by the failure of Italian politicians to give the country stable and efficient government.

Walter H. Page coined a great phrase when he spoke of "the forgotten man." In most countries today there is a forgotten man of a type somewhat different from that which Page described. Political leaders have become the agents of organized groups, of aggressive minorities, of noisy levellers, of downright destructionists. The solid, sober, saving elements of the people are forgotten and cast aside. They are overtaxed, overlooked and over-ridden. It is assumed that they are dumb cattle who will suffer in silence to "save the party" and placate the insurrectionists. Practically they are impotent, disfranchised and dehorned.

They see that one concession is only the basis of a demand for other concessions, and that the bellies of revolutionaries can never be filled with the fodder of Governments unless and until they can live upon the savings of other people in houses they have not builded. So Fascisti arise and Ku Klux Klan defy constituted authority. How far wiser they would be if they exerted their full authority in the open and legitimate warfare of politics, expressed themselves in press and on platform and became as articulate as the spineless leaders by whom they are betrayed and the greedy minorities by whom they are plundered. When all is said a country which can be dominated by secret revolutionary organizations has lost its freedom and cast away the power to govern itself.

One rejoices in all constitutional movements to improve the position of the unfortunate and to make a world "fit for heroes to live in." But for defiance of authority and organized violence, there should be no toleration and little mercy. The sober, hard-working masses of the people have it in their power to ensure that there shall be no taxation without representation. They have it in their power to prove that the equal right to life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness does not mean that those who save shall be robbed by those who will not save and that those who do a full day's work shall be forced to support those who have no other business than agitation and no gospel but that of spoliation and plunder.

A stiff people can find stiff political leaders. Where there is a living patriotism class, sectionalism and faction cannot control. Whatever may be the objects of Fascisti and Ku Klux Klan, their action is in conflict with every sound theory and principle of free government. Where courts are intimidated and Parliaments are powerless anarchy prevails. And this has been brought about by the feebleness of political leaders, the cowardice of the press and the complacency of "the forgotten man" who fails to use his own power in the common interest. What is needed is more courage, more independence and a fuller recognition of the duties and responsibilities of citizenship. It was a great thing to save democracy by sweat and blood and sacrifice, but only democracy itself can prove that it was worth saving.—Montreal Star.

EDITORIAL NOTES AND COMMENT.

Hon. W. E. Raney evidently believes in the Coue method. "Every day in every way Ontario is getting dryer and dryer," is his theory.

The Ku Klux Klan is now reported to be invading British Columbia for the purpose of stopping liquor smuggling. The latter offense, however, is preferable to the activities of the "night shirt brigade."

They take their politics seriously in Greece, and in Ireland, too, it may be remarked.

"Drive slowly, you may meet a fool," is a good slogan, but a reader suggests that "drive slowly, two fools may meet" is even better.

Municipal candidates in Peterborough seem to be emulating the shrinking violet. So far there has been no mad rush of aspirants to get their names before the public.

If Northern Ontario people had shown as much hesitancy in getting away from the fire as many centres in the older part of the Province are displaying in coming to their rescue, the death roll would have run up into the hundreds.

Opposition is being made by a number of Ontario municipalities to the proposal of a half mill assessment for the relief of the stricken north. They are evidently not in sympathy with the principle to "give till you feel it."—Hamilton Spectator.

MOTORIST BLAMES THE JAY WALKING PUBLIC.

M. O. Eldridge Says They Cause Majority of Accidents.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 2.—Blame for the greatest number of street and road accidents in which automobiles and pedestrians figure is placed upon the "jay-walker" by M. O. Eldridge, Executive Chairman of the American Automobile Association.

The public is entirely too ready to blame the driver, Mr. Eldridge declares; the first cry that goes up, as a rule, when such an accident occurs, is that the driver was at fault, when, as a matter of fact, in a large majority of cases the person injured was to blame.

Explaining a chart summary of traffic accidents in New York City in which the fault or incapacity of the proper party is shown, Mr. Eldridge declared that while almost 50 per cent. of the causes of accidents are unknown, the blame in the case where the fault was determined was overwhelmingly placed on the injured one.

"Over a certain period of time in which 7,327 accidents, involving private automobiles, occurred, the Police Department of New York City found by thorough investigation that in 450 cases the driver of the car was to blame," he continued. "In 3,168 cases the person injured was to blame, and in 3,683 cases the cause of the accident was unknown. With the heavy preponderance of blame placed on the person injured in the known causes of accidents, it is but fair to presume that the injured perron was to blame in more than 50 per cent. of the remaining 3,683 cases.

"These figures emphasize the contention that no traffic legislation is complete until it provides a penalty for jay-walking. If a motorist is to be fined for disobedience of a traffic signal then the pedestrian should be fined for jay-walking across the street, putting himself as well as every motorist in the immediate vicinity in danger."

TRY CALOMEL IF YOU DO NOT FEEL WELL

Excellent for Constipation, Indigestion, Headaches, Heart Burn, Rheumatism, etc.

Persons who are troubled with any of these complaints can find almost instant relief by taking one tanated calomel tablet before meals or two at bedtime and you will feel 100 per cent better the next morning. Tanated Calomel is the only medicine known that acts upon the liver, which makes it the best medicine in the world. No salts, seidlitz or castor oil are necessary to take after, because it is self-eliminating. Do not allow your system to become poisoned with waste, causing all these aches and pains. Tanated calomel is sold at Webber's Drug Store, Charlotte Street.

RARE WINES FOR SALE.

VIENNA, Dec. 2.—(Associated Press)—Rare wines to the value of 25,000,000,000 crowns or about $350,000 at the present rate of exchange, still lies in the cellars of the Imperial Palace. One vintage of red wine known as "Achauer of Empress Elizabeth" from grapes grown from vines brought by her from Greece, is being sold at 900,000 crowns the bottle, or approximately $12.

There is said to be the largest stock of original Chartreuse, both green and white, in the world stored in these cellars, and it is to be sold for standard money only.

A revolver shot was heard two minutes after ROBERT ABLETT, ne'er-do-well brother of MARK ABLETT, bachelor proprietor of The Red House, had been ushered into Mark's office on his return from a 15-years' absence in Australia. ANTONY GILLINGHAM, a gentleman adventurer and friend of BILL BEVERLEY, one of Mark's guests, arrived at that moment to find MATT CAYLEY, Mark's constant companion, pounding on the locked door of the office and demanding admittance. The two men entered the room through a window and discovered the body of Robert with a bullet through the head. Mark was not to be found.

Antony, who had been invited by Cayley to remain at The Red House with Bill until the inquest is over, refuses to believe the theory of Inspector Birch that Mark murdered Robert. Several things arouse his suspicions. If the key of the office door was on the outside, could Mark have locked it? He asks Bill to tell him all he knows of Mark's characteristics.

GO ON WITH THE STORY

Bill was silent, wondering how to put in words thoughts which had never formed themselves very definitely in his own mind. Seeing his hesitation, Antony said:

"I ought to have warned you that nothing that you say will be taken down by the reporters, so you needn't bother about a split infinitive or two. Talk about anything you like, how you like."

"Well, Mark fancies himself at arranging things. He arranges things, and it's understood that the guests fall in with the arrangement.

Arranging things for you?"

"Yes. Of course, it's a delightful house and opportunities for every game or sport that's ever been invented. But with it all, Tony, there's a faint sort of feeling that—well, you've got to do as you're told."

"How do you mean?"

He's a devil for taking offense. That Miss Norris—did you see her?—she's done for herself. I don't mind betting what you like that she never comes here again."

"Why?"

Bill laughed to himself.

"We were all in it, really—at least, Betty and I were. There's supposed to be a ghost attached to the house. Lady Anne Patten. Ever heard of her?"

"Never."

"Mark told us about her at dinner one night. He rather liked the idea of there being a ghost in his house, you know; except that he doesn't believe in ghosts. I think he wanted all of us to believe in her, and yet he was annoyed with Betty and Mrs. Calladine for believing in ghosts at all. Rum chap. Well, anyhow, Miss Norris—she's an actress, some actress too—dressed up as the ghost and played the fool a bit. And poor Mark was frightened out of his life. Just for a moment, you know."

"Where did the ghost appear?"

"Down by the bowling-green. That's supposed to be its haunts, you know."

"Was Mark very angry afterward?"

"Oh, Lord, yes. Sulked for a whole day. He got over it—he generally does. He's just like a child. That's really it, Tony; he's like a child in some ways. As a matter of fact, he was unusually bucked with himself this morning."

"Is he generally in form?"

"He's quite good company, you know, if you take him the right way. He's rather vain and childish—well, like I've been telling you—and self-important; but quite amusing in his way, and—" Bill broke off suddenly. "I say, you know, it really is the limit, talking about your host like this."

"Don't think of him as your host. Think of him as a suspected murderer with a warrant out against him."

"Oh! but that's all rot, you know."

"It's the fact, Bill."

"Yes, but I mean, he didn't do it. He wouldn't murder anybody. It's a funny thing to say, but—well, he's not big enough for it."

"Suppose it was an accident, as Cayley says, would he lose his head and run away?"

Bill considered for a moment.

"Yes, I really think he might, you know. He nearly ran away when he saw the ghost."

"Well, now," said Antony, "what about Cayley?"

"How do you mean, what about him?"

"I want to see him. I can see Mark perfectly, thanks to you, Bill. You were wonderful. Now let's have Cayley's character. Cayley from within."

Bill laughed in pleased embarrassment, and protested that he was not a blooming novelist.

"Besides," he added, "Mark's easy. Cayley's one of these heavy, quiet people, who might be thinking about anything. Mark gives himself away . . . Ugly, black-jawed devil, isn't he?"

"NOW THEN," SAID BILL, "WE ARE ALONE."

"Some women like that type of ugliness."

"Yes, that's true. Between ourselves, I think there's one here who does. Rather a pretty girl at Jallands"—he waved his left hand—"down that way."

"What's Jallands?"

"It's a country cottage belonging to a widow called Norbury. Mark and Cayley used to go there a good deal together. Miss Norbury—the girl—has been here once or twice for tennis; seemed to prefer Cayley to the rest of us. But of course he hadn't much time for that sort of thing."

"What sort of thing?"

"Walking about with a pretty girl and asking her if she's been to any theaters lately. He nearly always had something to do."

"Mark kept him busy?"

"Yes. Mark never seemed quite happy unless he had Cayley doing something for him. He was quite lost and helpless without him. And, funnily enough, Cayley seemed lost without Mark."

"He was fond of him?"

"Yes, I should say so. In a protective kind of way. He'd size Mark up, of course—his vanity, his self-importance, his amateurishness and all the rest of it—but he liked looking after him. And he knew how to manage him."

They reached the inn, and Antony went upstairs to his room. He returned his brushes to his bag, glanced round to see that nothing else had been taken out, and went down again to settle his bill.

CHAPTER VIII

ANTONY'S bedroom looked over the park at the back of the house. He was sitting on his bed, in shirt and trousers, absently smoothing down his thick black hair with his brushes, when Bill shouted an "Hallo!" through the door, and came in.

"I say, buck up, old boy, I'm hungry," he said.

Antony stopped smoothing himself and looked up at him thoughtfully.

"Where's Mark?" he said.

"Mark? You mean Cayley."

Antony corrected himself with a little laugh. "Yes, I mean Cayley. Is he down? I say, I shan't be a moment, Bill." He got up from the bed and went on briskly with his dressing.

"Oh, by the way," said Bill, taking his place on the bed, "your idea about the keys is a wash-out."

"Why, how do you mean?"

"I went down just now and had a look at them. Some were outside and some inside, and there you are. It makes it much less exciting. When you were talking about it on the lawn, I really got quite keen on the idea of the key being outside and Mark taking it in with him."

"It's going to be exciting enough," said Antony mildly, as he transferred his pipe and tobacco into the pocket of his black coat. "Well, let's come down; I'm ready now."

Cayley was waiting for them in the hall. The three of them fell into a casual conversation.

"You were quite right about the keys," said Bill, during a pause.

"Keys?" said Cayley blankly.

"We were wondering whether they were outside or inside."

"Oh! oh, yes!" He looked slowly round the hall, at the different doors, and then smiled in a friendly way at Antony. "We both seem to have been right, Mr. Gillingham. So we don't get much farther."

"No." He gave a shrug. "I just wondered, you know. I thought it was worth mentioning."

"Oh, quite. Not that you would have convinced me, you know. Just as Elsie's evidence doesn't convince me."

"Elsie?" said Bill excitedly. Antony looked inquiringly at him, wondering who Elsie was.

"One of the housemaids," explained Cayley. "You didn't hear what she told the inspector?"

Cayley told them of what Elsie had heard through the office door that afternoon.

"You were in the library then, of course," said Antony, rather to himself than to the other. "She might have gone through the hall without your hearing."

"Oh, I've no doubt she was there, and heard voices. Perhaps heard those very words. But—" He broke off, and then added impatiently, "It was accidental. What's the good of talking as if Mark was a murderer?" Dinner was announced at that moment, and as they went in, he added, "What's the good of talking about it at all, if it comes to that?"

"What, indeed?" said Antony, and to Bill's great disappointment they talked of books and politics during the meal.

Cayley made an excuse for leaving them as soon as their cigars were alight. He had business to attend to, as was natural. Bill would look after his friend. Bill was only too willing.

"Let's go outside," suggested Antony. "I want to talk to you."

"Good man. What about the bowling-green?"

The road bent round to the right, but they kept straight on over a broad grass path for twenty yards, and there in front of them was the green. A dry ditch, ten feet wide and six feet deep, surrounded it, except in the one place where the path went forward.

"Yes, it hides itself very nicely," said Antony. "Where do they keep the bowls?"

They walked along the edge of the green until they came to it—a low wooden bunk which had been built into one wall of the ditch.

They finished their circuit of the green—"Just in case anybody's in the ditch," said Antony—and then sat down on the bench.

"Now then," said Bill, "We are alone. Fire ahead."

THE MILLBROOK CURLING CLUB ELECT OFFICERS FOR SEASON

MILLBROOK, Dec. 2.—The annual meeting of the Millbrook Curling Club was held in the clerk's office in the Town Hall, the retiring president, J. N. McGill, occupying the chair. There was a good attendance at the meeting, and after the routine business was transacted the following officers were elected: President, W. G. Hetherington, Vice-president, W. E. Ball, Secretary-treasurer, H. J. Grassett, Executive, Messrs. Joseph Lancashire, J. E. Allen, L. C. Russell, T. H. Bradley and Douglas Sheppard.

The newly-elected president took the chair for the conclusion of the meeting, and after discussion the secretary was instructed to make application to the Ontario Curlers Association to allow one rink from here the privilege of competing with the Scotch Curlers when the latter come to Peterboro this winter. The gathering then adjourned to meet again on Friday, December 22 when the skips will be appointed, and the various rinks chosen, and other necessary arrangements made for a good winter's sport.

December Meeting

The council held their December meeting on Thursday evening, instead of the first Monday in the month, the usual date, as Reeve Wood will be in Cobourg next week attending the Counties' Council. All the members were present, the reeve occupying the chair. Mr. D. Hampton waited on the council re an increased grant for the Public Library explaining that the law now allows a levy of fifty cents per head according to the population, which in the case of a municipality the size of Millbrook would amount to $375; he also explained that the Library has been in operation for over twenty years, and the original grant of $175 is all the council is still giving. In view of the increased cost of books magazines, etc., and the larger number of people who are now taking advantage of its privileges, more money is required to enable the librarian and the Board of Managers to adequately serve the public in so necessary an institution.

Stinson-Eakins—That an increase of $50 be made to the Library Board, the total amount now being $250 instead of $200 as formerly.—Carried.

C. W. Richards submitted his report that $9425 has been paid in taxes up to date, leaving a balance of only $659 to be collected before the

The usual accounts were read and ordered paid. J. A. Vance, who has been placing weatherstrip round the windows in Council Chamber and the Clerk's Office (twelve in all), was authorized to make necessary completion of the work using Argus Chalk, as specified at a cost not exceeding $10. An order for $1100 was passed to pay on the County rate, and a communication from the General Baggage Agent of the G. T. R. Toronto, to the faciilties for handling a Milk Condensing Plant here was read, and the clerk instructed to write Mr. Harris for further particulars, and make arrangements for holding a public meeting, if he thought best, when the matter could be thoroughly explained and discussed. The school question also came in for some discussion as it has not yet been possible to announce any definite date for the visit of Mr. Hoag, the Continuation School Inspector. Council then adjourned to meet again at the call of the reeve

Day of Prayer

The annual Day of Prayer in connection with the Woman's Missionary Auxiliary of the Methodist church was observed on Thursday, November 30th., at 3 p.m. the president, Mrs. (Rev.) S. T. Tucker, acting as general leader, and giving some interesting facts regarding the work at the Home Base. Mrs. Tucker showed that the missionaries with their message of hope and confidence, emphasizing, especially amongst the foreigners, the need of truth and honesty in life and business dealings, and waging unceasing warfare against all manner of evil, are rendering a service to Canada in its development that is of inestimable worth, to say nothing of the increased happiness, and improved social conditions, which they do so much to bring about. During the last quadrennium every department of the W. M. S. work has shown phemonimal growth; there has been a large increase in membership, in the number of misisonaries commissioned and stationed and also in income, while the Conference Branches, Districts, and all organizations under their care, show spiritual life, earnest devotion and business efficiency.

Miss P. Byam was the leader for the period on Canada Mrs. B. R. Raper for that on China, Mrs. J. George for Japan, and Miss Stella Hetherington for the young people. Intercession was made for the gift of the Holy Spirit upon those attending the meeting, not only here, but also wherever such gatherings were being held throughout the Dominion since this Day of Prayer is a general one, upon the entire membership of the church, for the officers of the W.M.S., for workers amongst the immigrants to Canada, for Christian forces in Japan for teachers and other workers there for work in China, for Canadian mothers, girls, and young women, for children and their teachers, parents, and guardians, and for other needs. The meeting, which was well attended, closed by all repeating the W.M.S. watchword, "Not by might nor by power, but by My Spirit, said the Lord of Hosts. This is the victory that overcometh the world, even our faith."

Personal Mention

Mr. and Mrs. R. J. Doak and son, Albert, are in Orillia visiting their daughter, Mrs. B. H. Price going from here on Thursday.

Much sympathy will be felt for Mr. D. and Miss A. Hampton who have received the sad news that their brother-in-law, Dr. Rae of London who was badly crushed in a motor accident one year ago last August, is suffering from cancer as the ultimate result of the injuries then sustained and that there is practically no hope of his recovery. Mrs. Rae, who was Miss Lottie Hampton, had a serious nervous breakdown last summer, following her husband's accident, and is still far from being in a normal state of health.

FIRE DOES GREAT DAMAGE TO TOWN.

NEWBURN, N.C., Dec. 2.—(Canadian Press).—Approximately 1,200 persons, most of them negroes were made homeless, about 200 residences two churches, two warehouses and several small stores were destroyed and loss estimated a 1,000,000 was caused by fire which late yesterday swept twenty blocks in the western section of Newbern, The flames, starting in the negro section, gained great headway before a high wind at start, because the local fire department was engaged on the opposite side of the town fighting a fire at the Roper Company's sawmill, where 300,000 damage was estimated to have been done.

The wind last night had diminished and firemen expressed the opinion that they had the fire under control, though several dwellings still were burning.

Golden Anniversary of Eureka Lodge, No. 283, A. F. and A. M., Belleville.

CAMPBELLFORD, Dec. 2.—Many Campbellford Free Masons will find interest in the following report of the Golden Anniversary of Eureka Lodge, No. 283, A.F. & A.M. of Belleville, recently, that organization having enjoyed 50 years' existence.

At the annual communication of Grand Lodge held in 1872, a warrant was recommended to be granted to 13 members of the craft for the institution of the Lodge. Of those 13 who were the charter members, but one is living today, namely, Rt. Wor. Bro. S. S. Lazier, who in 1871-'22 was Master of the Lodge. In 1877 V. Wor. Bro. Col. P. H. Hambly, was the Worshipful Master. Both of these brethren were present at this anniversary observance, and were tendered a hearty welcome. Rt. Wor. Bro. J. O. Herity, was in the chair, and filled the position most acceptably. R. W. Bro. R. A. Backus, of this city, District Deputy Grand Master, also paid his official visit to the lodge. There was a large turnout of the brethren. After Lodge business had been completed, a banquet was partaken of and a toast list was carried out. The toast master was Wor. Bro. E. D. O'Flynn, Master of the Lodge. A rather lengthy toast list was carried out. The toast to Eureka Lodge, was proposed by V. Wor. Bro. Col. P. H. Hambly, and was responded to by Rt. Wor. Bro. Col. S. S. Lazier. The orchestra in connection with the lodge rendered tuneful selection, and solos were given by Bro. Harry MacKay, Bro. Stewart Rathman and Bro. James Booth. It was a night which will be long remembered by all who were present. The toast to the Grand Lodge was proposed by the toastmaster and was ably responded to by Most Worshipful, the Grand Master of Canada, Bro., Col. W. N. Ponton, K.C.

Principal Moffatt Resigns and Will Go to Tweed—Personal Mention.

CAMPBELLFORD, Dec. 2.—The resignation of Principle T. E. Moffat came as a surprise to the Board of Education at their regular meeting on Thursday evening. Mr. Moffatt has accepted a school at Tweed, Ont., and assumes his new duties about January 31st, 1923.

Coal and Wood Down.

During the high wind on Friday morning the big sign in front of O'Connor's coal yards came down with a crash and landed near the Grand Trunk tracks on Grand road. Fortunately there was no one passing at the time, and it will only require a new post to repair the damage.

Personals.

Mr. and Mrs. George Helson of Warkworth, who have been visiting friends in town, returned home on Saturday.

Mr. Cyril Chessell of the Grand Trunk staff, formerly connected with the Campbellford station, was renewing acquaintances around town this week.

Mr. Thomas Craighead has moved into his new home on Canrobert street, recently purchased from Dr. Young.

Mrs. Charles Haig, of Rear street, entertained a number of her friends on Friday evening.

Death of Mrs. Jackman.

The sad news of the death of Mrs Mary Ann Jackman, of Lindsay, widow of the late George Jackman, and mother of Mrs. W. L. Stillman, of Campbellford, reached town on Thursday. The late Mrs. Jackman was in her 77th year and had been ill for some time. The funeral took place at Lindsay on Friday afternoon at 2.30, to the Riverside Cemetery, and was largely attended.

Christ Church Men's Club have arranged the following programme for 1922-23:

Dec. 14—Father and Son banquet.
January 11—Ladies' Night.
Jan. 25—Lecture night — Mark Twain.
Feb. 8—Concert.
Feb. 22 — Lantern Lecture (Mr. Harris.)
March 8—Open night.
March 2—London churches — Mr. J. H. Rodgers.
April 5—Annual meeting.

There will be no lack of entertainment in Campbellford and indications point to a very jolly winter.

High School News.

Mr. S. B. Coon of S. B. Coon & Son, architects, Toronto, presided at a meeting of the Board of Education held in the public library on Thursday evening and in connection with the proposed new high school, strongly advised the board to erect fire proof buildings, stating that the aditional cost would be very small and also mentioned that there had been many improvements worthy of consideration regarding school buildings since the last plans were drawn up some four or five years ago.

Mr. Grant Woodward of Cannington, was a visitor in town this week, the guest of Mr. and Mrs. I. A. Humphries of Booth street.

HIT BY TREE AND MAY DIE

Accident at Burke's Camp, Near Haliburton, to David Bissette.

LINDSAY, Dec. 2.—An accident which, it is expected, will have fatal results, took place at Burke's Camp, five miles from Haliburton Village, Friday. David Bissette, formerly of Lindsay, was felling a balsam tree when the wind shifted it. In getting from under, Bissette tripped on a stump and the tree hit him a glancing blow. A piece of the tree penetrated his head, and he was rendered unconscious. He was still in an unconscious state this morning, and no hope is held out for his recovery.

OBITUARY

DUNCAN FIFE.

HASTINGS, Dec. 2.—Mr. Duncan Fife, of this village, departed this life on Friday, December 1. He had been in his usual good health until Monday, when he was stricken with paralysis, and while hope was entertained for some days of his recovery, he never rallied.

Mr. Fife, who was born in the Township of Asphodel, where he successfully engaged in farming the greater part of his life. He retired from the farm about six years ago, building a home here, where he resided until his death.

He leaves, besides his sorrowing widow, five daughters: Mrs. Gordon Beavis of Colborne, Mrs. Lobb of Alberta, Mrs. Hope of Otonabee, Misses Belle and Alexia of Toronto, and three sons: Howard and Scott of Asphodel Township, and William of Alberta. Mr. Fife was a staunch Presbyterian, a strong Liberal, and always took a deep interest in all current events.

Funeral from the family residence on Sunday afternoon at 2 o'clock to Trent Valley Cemetery.

THE HOUSE OF COMMONS REJECTS THE MEASURE.

LONDON, Dec. 1.—(Canadian Press).—The House of Commons to-day rejected by a vote of 303 to 172, the amendment to the speech from the Throne, moved by the Labor party. The amendment raised the question of unemployment.

The Irish Constitution Bill passed unamended to-day through the committee stage of the House of Lords. It will receive its third reading on Monday.

"Nearly Lost Baby With Croup"

Has Depended on Dr. Chase's Medicines for 25 Years

This letter from Mrs. Thompson gives you some idea of why so many thousands of people depend on Dr. Chase in the hour of sickness.

Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine has a permanent place in the great majority of Canadian homes because it is the most certain relief from Croup, Bronchitis, Whooping Cough and Asthma.

Mrs. Alex. Thompson, Whitla, Alta., writes:—"When my first baby was born, I think she would have died from croup before we could reach a doctor, if it had not been for a neighbor who had a bottle of Dr. Chase's Linseed and Turpentine in the house. This relieved her almost immediately. That was 21 years ago, and Dr. Chase's Medicines have been friends of ours ever since."

Asthma

Mr. Thomas Bond, Sheldrake, North Shore, Que., writes:—"I suffered for years with asthma, sometimes being unable to lie in bed, but after a treatment of Dr. Chase's Linseed and Turpentine, I am now quite well and thank this medicine for restoring me."

ALARM OF FIRE CREATED PANIC

PERTH, Dec. 2. — (Canadian Press).—The crash of a fire door being blown in by the high wind and an excited rush from the "Gods," and an alarming cry of fire created a panic at the Right Hon. MacKenzie's King's meeting here last night in the Balderson Theatre. The panic lasted only for a moment, but it sent a hurtling crowd of men and women to the street before cooler heads prevailed.

The Premier continued speaking and the audience was calmed. Premier King, in his address, declared that the Government intended to do all in its power to give public ownership of national railways a fair deal. His defence of the Government's attitude in the Near East and assurances that Canada would have a Government in which the people would continue to be consulted were features of the Premier's speech.

CASH GRAIN.

MONTREAL, Dec. 2.—(Canadian Press.)—The tone of the market for spot supplies of cash grain was steady here yesterday. Conidtion of the flour market was unchanged. A feature of the millfeed market was the demand for supplies for shipment to United States points with some business reported in this direction at better prices than those ruling on spot. Domestic trade in millfeed continues good with pirces firm. The market for rolled oats was good. A steady feeling prevails in the baled hay.

The egg market was fairly active with no change in prices to note. There is nothing new in the potato market. Feeling in butter is firm under a steady demand. There is next to no business passing in cheese.

STERLING RATES.

MONTREAL, Dec. 2.—(Canadian Press.) — Sterling exchange rates were quoted here yesterday: Demand 4.5251; cables 4.5276.

WINNIPEG CATTLE.

WINNIPEG, Dec. 2.—(Canadian Press.)— Receipts 700 cattle, and calves, 500 hogs and 112 sheep and lambs.

Light offerings on the cattle market resulted in a small volume of trading.

But there was a keen demand and sales were completed at strong prices.

The hog market was unsettled, packers were bidding 9.25 for thick smooths with salesmen holding out for 10.00.

The sheep and lamb market was strong. Top lambs sold at 12.00 and good sheep at 8.25.

EGG MARKETS.

OTTAWA, Dec. 2. — (Canadian Press.)—A better demand is reported on some markets for dressed poultry. Prices remain particularly firm for turkeys, these being quoted in a wholesale way at 40 to 42 in Montreal as there seems to be no change in the market situation regarding eggs except the increasing firmness for fresh that will grade specials or extras as storage stocks are moving out satisfactorily at firm prices, dealers genearlly have more confidence in the future.

Toronto firm and unchanged.

Montreal firm, fresh unchanged, storage extras 46 to 47, firsts 40 to 41, seconds 36 to 37. Demand improving for dressed poultry at firm prices. Turkeys quoted 40 to 42.

Winnipeg firm, dealers quoting 30 for straight receipts delivered, fresh extras and specials mixed jobbing 70, storage extras and firsts mixed 40 to 42, seconds 33.

British Columbia local fresh 52 country points with 54 offered for straight specials, jobbing specials 60, firsts 48, pullets 42, local storage firsts 35, seconds 30. Live poultry steady and unchanged.

CHICAGO WHEAT.

CHICAGO, Dec. 2.— (Canadian Press.) — Although wheat prices showed considerable strength at times yesterday, the market in the final dealings reacted owing largely to assertions that some foreign buyers had been selling back at less than replacement value. The close was unsettled at 3-4c. net decline, to 3-8c. advance, with May $1.16 5-8 to $1.16 3-4, and July $1.07 7-8 to $1.08. Corn finished unchanged to 1-2c. lower; oats 1-4 an d3-8c. off to 1-4c. gain, and provisions unchanged to a rise of 12c.

The Council adjourned to meet again on 1st December.

HASTINGS, Dec. 2.—Mrs. Pue of South Monaghan is a guest of her sister Mrs. D. Fife.

Mr. Bruce Richardson of the Union Bank staff has been transferred to the branch at Norwood.

Mrs. G. R. Beavis of Colborne is at the home of her father Mr. D. Fife, who is seriously ill.

Skin Eruptions
Are Usually Due to Constipation

When you are constipated, not enough of Nature's lubricating liquid is produced in the bowel to keep the food waste soft and moving. Doctors prescribe Nujol because it acts like this natural lubricant and thus replaces it.

Nujol is a lubricant—not a medicine or laxative — so cannot gripe. Try it today.

Nujol

A LUBRICANT—NOT A LAXATIVE

Dr. W. N. Campbell is moving his office to the Sherwin block next to Mr. Alex. Wilson's hardware store.

Mr. R. Boyes, Public School Inspector of Campbellford, was in town on Wednesday.

Dr.) J. H. Hess was in Oshawa this week and brought home a new car.

Mr. Harry Keenan of Buffalo, is visiting his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Keenan.

Duncan Fife, who passed away at his late residence yesterday, at the age of 65 years, death being due to paralysis. Deceased was the son of the late John Fife of Asphodel and spent his boyhood and young manhood on the farm, known as the Fife homestead. He was twice married, first to Sarah Porter to whom was born, three sons and five daughters and later to Mrs. R. Morrison, who survives. The sons are Howard cott and Will of Asphodel, and the daughters, Mrs. G. R. Beavis of Colborne, Mr. Hughson of Alberta, Mrs. Ralph Plunkett and Mrs. W. Hope both of Otonabee and Miss Lena of Toronto.

Much sympathy is extended to the sorrowing wife and bereaved family. The funeral will be held from his late residence on Sunday afternoon to the Trent Valley Cemetery.

Mrs. Pue of Monagffan, is the guest of her sister, Mrs. D. Fife.

Mrs. G. R. Beavis is visiting friends in town.

Mr. W. Moncrief of Monaghan, is with Hastings friends.

New and Interesting Facts from Science and Life

Why WINTER Is Getting WARMER

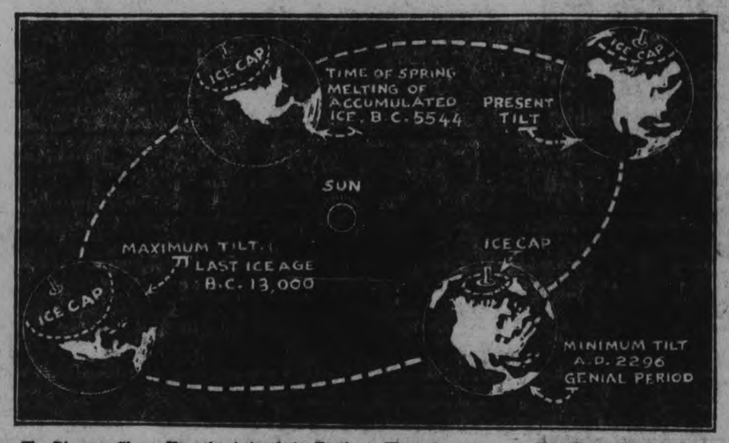
WINTERS are growing warmer. As evidence of this phenomenal change in the cold season scientists point to the retreat of ice at both Poles (estimated at nearly a mile a year at the South Pole), and the shrinkage of the Swiss, Alaskan, and Himalayan glaciers, bear witness to it. These phenomena, in their turn, support various geological conclusions as to the recency of the last Ice Age. This retreat of ice, according to Scriven Bolton, is necessarily the result of the gradual reduction of the earth's tilt to its orbit, which is known to have been decreasing for at least 3000 years since the first record was made.

As further evidence of this phenomenon and that the Arctic regions are warming up, the United States Consul at Bergen, Norway, reports to the Commerce Department at Washington that seals are finding the waters of the polar seas too hot. In fact, but few seals and no white fish are being found in the Eastern Arctic, while vast shoals of herring and smelts, which have never before ventured so far north, are being encountered in the old seal fishing grounds.

Explorers also report that there is scarcely any ice as far north at 81 degrees 29 minutes and that soundings to a depth of 3100 metres show that the Gulf Stream is still very warm. Great masses of ice have been replaced by moraines of earth and stones while a many points well known glaciers have disappeared.

"Our seasons being due to the earth's axis not being perpendicular, it follows," Prof. Bolton explains in the Illustrated London News, "that the more the axis is inclined, the more accentuated must be the seasons. The word 'climate' means, in its origin, 'inclination.' The new theory, which also receives startling confirmation from archaeology and other sciences, maintains that the axis is tilted to a maximum amount (35 degrees, as against 23½ at the present time)

LESSENING of the TILT of the EARTH'S AXIS Is DECREASING the AREA of POLAR REGIONS



The Diagram Shows How the Axis of the Earth, as Throughout the Ages This World Has Revolved Around the Sun in an Eclipse, Inclines to the Plane of the Earth's Orbit. As This Tilt Becomes Smaller the Polar Areas Shrink in Size.

every 31,756 years. At this period lands lying within this Arctic circle and beyond it, the latitude without any sun in midwinter, would be liable to be covered by ice sheets descending from distant elevated regions, and many hundred feet in thickness. This period represents the Ice Age, the date of which has hitherto been so enigmatical.

"According to computations made in the United States and in Sweden, the middle of the Glacial period occurred about 15,000 years ago, and corresponded with the earth's maximum tilt. Since then the tilt has been gradually decreasing, and will continue to decrease until the year 2296, when the period of minimum tilt will be reached. In exact ratio with this decrease of tilt, the Arctic and Antarctic Circles are receding toward each Pole.

"Winters, in consequence thereof, are growing gradually warmer in the temperate zones and regions further North are slowly but surely becoming more habitable. This retreat of ice must, in turn, affect the temperature of the air-currents generated within the Arctic Circle, thus modifying climates in lands subjected to their influence. Within 15 degrees of the North Pole are found remains of forests formed prior to the Ice Age; hence, when the earth's axis has reached a minimum tilt in A. D. 2296, northern Canada and lands near the Pole, as well as the rich undeveloped region of Siberia, will more and more be opened up to colonization."

Another scientist who also has investigated the manifold phenomena of the hidden forces that are gradually making winters warmer is Isabel M. Lewis, M. A., of the United States Naval Observatory.

"Seasonal changes," writes this American authority in Science and Invention, "arise from the fact that the earth's axis of rotation is inclined to the plane of the earth's orbit or ecliptic. If the plane of the earth's equator coincided with the plane of the earth's orbit, so that the axis of rotation would be perpendicular to the plane of the orbit, days and nights would be equal in length all over the world and there would be no seasonal changes. There would be, of course, a gradual decrease in temperature from equator to poles, but the temperature at any one point on the earth's surface would be practically uniform throughout the year, while the change in temperature with latitude would be greater than it is at present. The effect of the inclination of the earth's axis of rotation from a position perpendicular to its orbit is to lessen the extremes of temperature between the equator and the poles and to equalize the temperature of the globe.

"The less the obliquity of the ecliptic, which is the angle between the earth's equator and the ecliptic or plane of the earth's orbit and therefore the angle as well between the earth's axis and the perpendicular to the ecliptic, the less marked would be the seasonal changes. The winters are in that case warmer and the summers cooler than they would be if the inclination were greater. If the obliquity became less the sun would travel not quite so far south of the equator in the winter, and as a result its rays would be less slanting and more intense in the northern hemisphere, while in the summer it would come not quite so far north and therefore its rays would be more slanting and so less intense. It would follow that the winters would be warmer and the summers cooler and the seasonal changes less marked. If, on the contrary, the obliquity of the ecliptic should increase the winters would become colder and the summers hotter and the seasonal changes would be more extreme.

"Now the only external forces that can change the tilt of the earth's axis or the obliquity of the ecliptic are the gravitational attractions of the sun, moon and planets for the earth. No changes taking place within the earth itself would possibly be great enough to shift appreciably the position of the axis of rotation. The change in the inclination of the earth's axis due to the attraction of the other members of the solar system can be found and it is known that the obliquity of the ecliptic is decreasing from this cause at present at the rate of half a second of arc a year. In the last two thousand years it has decreased twenty-four minutes of arc, less than half a degree, and it will continue to decrease in value for the next fifteen thousand years until it reaches its minimum value of 22¼ degrees when it will begin to increase slowly once more. The maximum value of 25 degrees will be reached only after the lapse of many centuries and no known forces can cause it to exceed this amount. It will, so far as is known, continue to oscillate slowly between these narrow limits indefinitely."

Although winters are growing slightly warmer as a result of this decrease in the obliquity of the ecliptic, Miss Lewis points out other changes that are taking place gradually in the form and position of the earth's orbit that are quite as effective in producing climatic changes of long period.

"The earth's orbit," she goes on to explain, "is not a perfect circle, but elliptical in shape, with the sun at one focus, instead of at the centre of the ellipse. The greater the eccentricity of the ellipse, which is the ratio that the distance from the centre to the focus bears to the semi-major axis, the greater is the variation in the distance of the planet from the sun in different parts of its orbit. When the planet is nearest to the sun it is said to be in perihelion and when it is farthest from the sun it is said to be in aphelion. According to the laws of motion the planet also moves most rapidly when it is in perihelion and most slowly when it is in aphelion. If the eccentricity of a planetary orbit is high the amount of heat that it receives from the sun, when in perihelion, is much greater than the amount of heat received when it is in aphelion, since the heat received from the sun varies inversely as the square of its distance. This difference in the amount of heat that a planet receives from the sun in different positions in its orbit may be so great when the eccentricity of the orbit is high, that the effect is similar to seasonal changes of temperature produced by the tilt of the planet's axis of rotation.

"If the perihelion and aphelion were fixed in position with respect to the solstitial points and equinoxes, climatic changes, due to a high eccentricity of the earth's orbit, would always be of the same kind and would always act in the same direction. For instance, if the earth were always in perihelion in winter the winters would get continually warmer and warmer as the eccentricity of the orbit increased, and the summers would grow continually colder. This state of affairs would persist for ages so long as the eccentricity remained high. It can be shown, however, that combined with a high eccentricity of the orbit there is an oscillation of climatic effects in long periods, due to the fact that both the line connecting perihelion and aphelion, and the line of the equinoxes, are in slow revolution in the plane of the earth's orbit. As a result the earth will be nearest the sun in winter for a number of centuries."

A ROMANTIC superstition has earned for Norfolk island, in the Pacific ocean, the nickname of "Honeymoon Island." It is believed that if the first month of married life is spent there, the couple concerned will enjoy long life, health, wealth and happiness. Without this legend it would be an ideal place for a honeymoon, for it has been called the most beautiful spot on earth.

This earthly paradise started its career as a convict station! The history of those early days is a tale of horror. Ruins of the famous "silent cells" are still to be seen.

These cells, made of concrete, four feet thick, were just large enough to enable a man to stand up or lie down. On the walls can be seen the prayers carved by convicts. Known as "the tombs," the silent cells provided the worst form of punishment, and those confined in them rarely came out sane.

Hardly a day passed without a murder taking place, and the convicts became worse than savages. Some even became cannibals. How many executions took place in the island will never be known. The convict settlement was eventually abandoned and for a year the island was deserted except for a caretaker.

Finally a shipload of settlers arrived from the island of Pitcairn. These were the descendants of the mutineers of the Bounty, a British warship. They had intermarried with Tahitian women, who are famed for their beauty.

There are only eight families on the island. Money is very scarce, twenty-five dollars being all that is handled in the course of a year. The islanders, however, are entirely self-supporting, and have everything they need, as well as a number of luxuries. The island has its own government, which is presided over by a Governor sent out from Australia.

Why LETTUCE Is a HEALTH FOOD

AN extended study and research into the question of so-called health foods has resulted in the decision that it would be of the utmost benefit to the general health if the consumption of lettuce the year around were increased about a thousand times the present consumption. In a bulletin issued by the North Carolina State Board of Health the following reasons are enumerated for eating lettuce every day that lettuce can be had:

(1) Lettuce is one of Nature's toothbrushes.
(2) Lettuce is rich in vitimines.
(3) Lettuce is unquestionably superior to any known medicine which may be taken internally as a source of available iron for men, although certain iron solutions administered by injection into the blood or into the muscles may be superior in certain illnesses.

(4) Lettuce serves as a physiological stimulus not alone to appetite and digestion in the stomach, but to the more important process of intestinal digestion, and may be considered a preventive of colitis.

(5) Lettuce gives a wholesome bulk to the residue in the intestine, and this tends to counteract the evils of ultra-refined concentrated diet.

(6) Lettuce is among the lowest of all foods in fuel or nutritive value from the caloric point of view, yielding only 90 calories per pound. (About equivalent to two crackers or half a glass of milk.) This feature should commend lettuce to all overstocked persons.

(7) Lettuce freely used in the diet opposes acidosis and tends to keep the system normally alkaline.

The popular notion that lettuce is sedative or soporific is a myth propagated by the romanticists who used to write books on "dietetics" as an avocation. Lettuce will no more soothe the nervous system nor put one asleep than will peanuts or ham gravy.

A variety, or kind of lettuce called "iceberg" is so uniformly crisp and palatable that even persons indifferent to ordinary lettuce find it an attractive relish.

RESTORING the "DEAD" to LIFE

A MEANS of restoring the apparently dead to life, by what is called the "Katsu resuscitation" process, has been known to the Japanese for thousands of years. Its secret has been jealously guarded through the years, and Capt. S. L. McLaglen, the jiu-jitsu champion of the world, declares that he believes he is the only white man who has learned it and the first to make it generally known. Capt. McLaglen says that he learned the secret in 1907, when he met a Japanese in a jiu-jitsu combat for the championship of the world. The Japanese, although defeated, became very friendly and told his opponent about Katsu and taught him all he knew. Later, from various sources in the East, Capt. McLaglen gradually picked up point after point, testing the theories by experimenting first on monkeys and then on African natives.

"As a result of what I have learned," Capt. McLaglen declares, "I am now in a position to say quite confidently that a person who has died from shock is not actually dead until decomposition has set in. In simple language, the apparently dead can be restored to life."

The secret science of Katsu is applied on certain nerve centres, pressure on which stimulates the nerves and causes a reaction of the heart. The nerves affected are those of the pectoral arch, where the thinness of the tissues and other matter leaves the nerves most exposed. Two other centres which are affected simultaneously are the pneumogastric centre and the auditory nerves of the brain.

Over and over again, often after the heart's action has actually stopped, this method of resuscitation has, according to Capt. McLaglen, proved effective.

The first case in which he tried his knowledge successfully was in Santiago, Chile, where a man was "knocked out" in a boxing contest. The doctors failed to restore the man and to all appearances he was dead. Katsu treatment was applied and in about 30 seconds he had recovered.

A negro at Dar-es-Salaam, a port on the east coast of Africa, was felled by a log and a doctor pronounced him to be dead. Capt. McLaglen applied the Japanese treatment and before many minutes, apart from a dislocated shoulder, the negro was as "right as rain." Had the treatment not been applied the negro would have remained "dead." He would have been buried alive!

ANIMALS That HAVE Real SPORTS

HOW is it that no animal is more playful than a lamb and none so sedate as a sheep? The lambs play games by an instinct which, if they were to grow up in a wild state, would give invaluable training in being active and sure-footed, against the day when they must flee from their foes.

Sheep fall into habits of inactivity through finding that no danger ever does threaten their peaceful days under their shepherd's care.

All lambs like to play at steeple-chasing over feeding troughs, one leading a rabble of ten or twenty on a mad race. Follow-my-leader is their favorite sport. They also go jumping, one after another, through a gap or over a dyke. And they revel in king-of-the-castle, one lamb defending some hillock against all-comers, who try to butt him off.

The love of running organised races is found among many animals—from colts, fawns, to pigs. Fawns delight in a kind of "touch," racing across forest rides and back.

The fox teaches its cubs the lessons of life through play. There is no prettier sight in the woods than to see fox cubs learning to be strong and agile by chasing each other around a tree trunk. They are trained to obey instantly the vixen's warnings. The writer has often seen all the cubs of a litter scamper as one to cover on the vixen throwing her head into the air and uttering a peculiar bark.

Some birds are given to play, like rooks which, flying in flocks, go through wonderful flying tricks—soaring, diving and turning—as if for the love of flying in competition, and for no other reason.

Mocking birds and parrots are full of playful mischief. The parrot delights to make a fool of a dog by calling him with his master's voice or whistle, or suddenly ordering him to lie down.

WHEN Your MUSCLES Go On STRIKE

WHEN the brain calls upon any particular group of muscles to perform the same action over and over again they are apt to show their dissatisfaction by declaring a strike.

A typical case in point is "tennis elbow," from which complaint most ardent devotees of the game have suffered at some time or other.

The symptoms vary from mere stiffness of the elbow joint to severe cramp, culminating in some instances in temporary inability to use the arm for any purpose whatever. Sometimes, too, there is a painful swelling of the forearm below the elbow point.

A kindred complaint is "tennis leg," which affects in a somewhat similar manner the muscles of the calves and the knee-joints. Another example where the leg muscles are the victims is afforded by "riders' sprain," a complaint to which polo players are found to be peculiarly liable.

"Golf arm," is akin to tennis elbow, the symptoms being much the same. It is due, according to a writer in a well-known medical journal, "to the repeated sudden and whip-like contractions of the triceps bruising the musculo-spinal nerve."

The pain in severe cases is excruciating, and it is not easily alleviated. Embrocations will not allay it, and the only hope of a permanent cure is for the patient to give up golf for a lengthy period.

Then, again, there is a complaint which is called "bowler's side," brought about through straining the abdominal muscles; and even fly fishing is liable to bring on a somewhat similar affection called "angler's elbow."

How ALCOHOL Is MADE from TREES

ALCOHOL from wood that is not wood alcohol—here is another discovery to add to the woes of the already harassed prohibitionist. The paradox is described by E. C. Sherrard of the Forest Products Laboratory, Madison, Wis., in the Journal of Industrial and Engineering Chemistry under the title "Ethyl Alcohol from Western Larch."

Discussing experiments in connection with the wood, Dr. Sherrard says:

"In one experiment the minimum total yield was 35.95 gal. of 95 per cent. ethyl alcohol per ton of dry wood, while the maximum was 42.9 gal. The average yield from this was 39.9 gal., by far the largest yield of alcohol obtained from any wood. In another experiment the average yield was 33 gal. of 95 per cent. ethyl alcohol per ton of dry wood. This lower yield is no doubt due to the greater acid-forming tendency of the sugars in the wood other than galactose, with a consequent inhibition of the yeast in the fermentation of the latter sugar. Even in this case the yield was almost 10 gal. greater than from any of the wood previously studied.

"The fact that galactose from western larch can be fermented readily with the production of ethyl alcohol is particularly interesting from the standpoint of the paper maker, since by an extraction of his chips with water before pulping a quantity of sugar is obtainable that is easily con-prescribed for this troublesome ailment.

Fighting DISEASE With Aid of DYES

THE microscopic stain is an essential weapon in the conquest of disease. The pathologist makes from the blood of a sick man what he calls a "culture." He wants to find out what is wrong with the patient, so he puts a drop of the "culture" under a microscope, and he sees a myriad queer bacilli twisting about on the slide of glass. But how is he to distinguish one germ from another?

That is where the microscopic stain comes in. A drop of a certain stain upon the slide will dye a certain bacillus and, in most cases, leave the other things alone. Thionine blue, for example, dyes the plague "bug" blue. Basic magenta picks out the bacterium of cholera or of influenza and colors it red.

The bacillus of tuberculosis comes up magenta upon being stained with basic magenta and dipped in methylene blue. So with anthrax, diphtheria, dysentery, typhoid, malaria. Each is shown up by one stain or another.

In the case of leprosy, say, a big nodule may be cut off the victim's back, embedded in paraffin or frozen into a block of gelatine, and the thinnest of sections, perhaps not more than one-hundredth of an inch thick, sliced off with a microtome and dyed, when the most terrifying of all bacilli may be brought out in red.

Again, should someone be suspected of having died of beri-beri, a nerve is dissected, dyed with a drop of methylene blue, and examined under the microscope, when it may be seen to have undergone the peculiar change known scientificially as Wallerian degeneration.

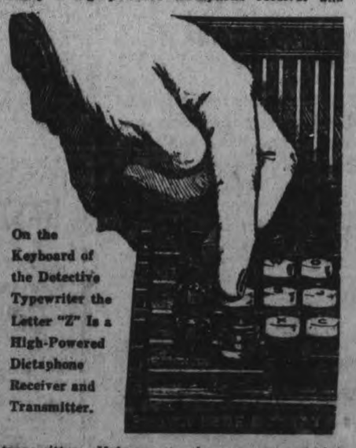
But these stains—thionine, methylene, magenta, gentian, violet—are not just the dyes known by the same names to commerce. Color users require a certain standardized strength to give the same shade without fail. A color has therefore to be diluted down with what the dyer calls an adulterant, that is to say, a diluent, generally some salt or other.

Commercial dyestuffs are not, then, pure products, if by that term one means a dyestuff and nothing more. Microscopic stains have to be purified out of them. Before the war the world's microscopic stains were made by a German firm, who bought the crude material from the manufacturer and refined it down for pathological use.

It has been found that a gramme of dyestuff makes a pint of microscopic stain, and, seeing that only one drop of stain is used at a time, as small a quantity of dyestuffs as two ounces would keep a particularly busy pathologist going for the rest of his life—and leave some over.

Eavesdropping Typewriter for Divorce Detectives

THE little button which is substituted for the letter "Z" on the typewriter keyboard, as shown in the accompanying drawing, is really a high-powered dictaphone receiver and transmitter. Unknown to the occupants of the room, it can pick up and transmit the conversation of those present to listeners who may be stationed at some distant point. The device is being used freely by London police and is also being employed by "divorce detectives."



On the Keyboard of the Detective Typewriter the Letter "Z" Is a High-Powered Dictaphone Receiver and Transmitter.

Armistice Day Tribute Made Possible By Keeping 7,000 Watches on Time

The stoppage of every train on the Grand Trunk Railway System for a period of two minutes on Armistice Day was arranged without danger to the travelling public. All arrangements for this two minute halt were closely supervised by the Train Despatching and Time Service Departments, and the cessation was made possible by the assurance that every man engaged in the operation of trains carried a watch synchronized with standard time.

IN the Grand Trunk, the importance of an efficient and up-to-date time service has long been recognized. The basic principle of safe operation is time. In recent years a large amount of money has been spent by railroads in the United States and Canada on what is known as "Safety First," and the time service department, although it can lay claim to be the pioneer "safety first department," is probably the least known of any of the railway departments."

Before being accepted for service on the Grand Trunk all trainmasters, road foremen of locomotives, locomotive foremen, supervisors of track, supervisors of bridges and buildings, conductors, engineers, firemen, motormen, train baggageman, brakemen, yardmasters, yard foremen, switchmen and any employees engaged in construction work, train service, etc., have to provide themselves with one of the standard watches listed by the time service department.

The minimum standard now required for service on the Grand Trunk is a watch adjusted to five positions, and in such state of repair as will enable it to run within a variation of thirty seconds per week. Twice a month employees under time service regulations are required to have their watches compared with standard time by the watch inspectors, who record the employee's name, occupation and variation of his watch, and send the information to the time service department on special forms. These forms are then checked off, and the men who fail to visit the watch inspector are disciplined, and those carrying watches not running within the prescribed variation are notified to have their watches attended to.

Some idea of the interest taken in this work by the officials and employees on the Grand Trunk may be gathered by the fact that out of nearly seven thousand employees under time service regulations handled twice a month, only 2.1 per cent. failed in this duty each period last year, one hundred and forty-five thousand watches being inspected and reported by the Watch Inspectors during the year. The employees are not allowed to set their own watches, and it is to safeguard this that the lever set watch is required. The usual type of watch sold to the average citizen is pendant set, and such watches can be set by simply pulling out the pendant, whereas in the lever set type it takes a jeweler to set the second hand in its proper relation to the minute hand.

Among the number of serious wrecks due to lack of proper Time Service regulations, that is before the year 1890, one serious wreck at least on a prominent American road with considerable loss of life can be charged to the pendant set watch, as the engineer had set his watch some hours before, and had failed to press down the pendant, resulting in his watch being awry.

Years ago, when operating conditions on railroads were less strenuous and trains did not travel at such fast speeds, it was not uncommon for the only time piece on a train to be an alarm clock hung up beside the engineer at his seat. Frequently ,if the train crew were not sure of the time, they would go on a siding and send the fireman to the nearest farmhouse to find out the time.

On the Grand Trunk, Time Signals are transmitted over the telegraph wires every day from McGill University Observatory, starting at 10.58 a.m., and finishing at 11.00 a.m., during which time no telegraph operators are permitted to break in, that is, all telegraph business is suspended. The master clock at McGill is checked daily by astronomic readings, and its beat is put on the telegraph wires breaking in at 10.58 and beating fifty seconds except the fiftieth second when the wires remain open for ten seconds. The Signals again start to beat from 10.59 to 10.59 plus fifty seconds, when there is another pause of ten seconds, the line closing at 11.00 o'clock a.m. These Time Signals are sent to every part of the System at the same time by means of time repeaters cut in at all terminal and divisional points. All important official Watch Inspectors of the Railway also receive this time daily through a wire connected from the Railway circuits to their stores and correct their standard clocks with which they check the watches of the employees and adjust the clocks of the Company.

A DENIAL DAY

LAUSANNE, Dec. 2.—(Canadian Press).—This was denial day at Lausanne. Nearly every delegation to the Near East conference refuted some rumor or report, most of the stories denied being contained in despatches printed by Paris newspapers.)

The Bulgarians denied charges this week that they were co-operating with Turks in harassing the Greek army or the border of Western Thrace. The British denied that disposition of the Mosulou fields in Mesopotamia is or has been under consideration here.

Even the United States delegation joind in the chorus issuing a written statement that there was no truth in reported printed in Paris newspapers that Ambassador Child had said the conference would probably adjourn shortly.

MOTORIST DROVE ON AFTER A COLLISION.

On Thursday about five o'clock, Stanley Green, a small boy who resides on the Norwood road near Armour road, was driving to the store when an automobile crashed into the buggy. The boy was thrown over the dashboard and his face badly bruised. The buggy was damaged, but this or the fact that the boy was thrown out did not concern the motorist, who drove on without stopping.

CONFESSES ROBBING BANK BY NEW TRICK.

NEW YORK, December 2. — Max W. Hensel, 32 years of age, for two years manager of the Harlem Branch of the Corn Exchange Bank, was indicted here by the Grand Jury on a charge of Grand Larceny following a confession he made to Walter E. Frew, the president of the bank, and Assistant District Attorney Harold W. Hastings that he had stolen from that institution $51,912.48 during a period of several years. He was arraigned before Judge Rosalsky in General Sessions and released in $5000 bail which he furnished. Pleading was adjourned for one week.

Mr. Frew said that Hansel's peculations were covered by bonds. Hansel who received about $6000 a year in salary and bonus, made restitution to the extent of $24,000, turning over his automobile, life insurance, his home in Larchmont, valued at $17,000, and jewels belonging to Mrs. Hensel. Hensel did not use the money for speculation, according to Leslie Lockhart of 51 Chambers St., his attorney, but spent the money on his home and wife.

Hensel's confession followed his transfer to another branch, the District Attorney said. Until the time he voluntarily confessed he had been regarded by his superiors as a trusted executive whose rise in the banking profession had been very rapid. The confession was first made to Mr. Lockhart and then to Mr. Frew.

As a result of Hensel's revelation as to how he concealed his shortage, a method which the District Attorney said was a new one. banks have been informed in order that future attempts to accomplish the scheme might be frustrated. According to Assistant District Attorney Hastings when a depositor would purchase securities through Hensel's branch, he would appropriate it, and debit the amount against a depositor who had an inactive account, making out a charge ticket.

In order to conceal the debit against the customer on the bank's books, Hensel said that he saw to it that the deposit book of the customer did not show any of the debits. By this expedient, it was explained at the District Attorney's office it was possible to deceive even the bank examiners who found the amount of money in the bank tallied with what the books of the bank showed.

Hastings quoted Hensel as saying that he would plead guilty and take his medicine. He asked to be admitted to bail in order that he might assist in straightening out the bank's affairs, Mr. Hastings said. According to his confession Hensel first resorted to his method to cover up a mistake for which he had previously been censured by his superiors. After that he found it was so easy to deceive the bank that he continued the practice, Mr. Hastings said.

Lockhart, attorney for Hastings, said that his client had been under great mental stress recently and had been under examination by Dr. Smith W. Jelliffe, alienist and insanity expert. Whether or not the appointment of a lunacy commission would be asked depended on the conclusion reached by Dr. Jelliffe, Lockhart said.

WANT PETERBOROUGH IN PRO. BASEBALL LEAGUE.

OTTAWA, Dec. 2.—Big changes are mooted in the Eastern Canada Baseball circuit next year . Hull is a strong probability for the circuit, replacing Captain De Madeleine. Joe Page, Billy Innes and Ubald Rose were in town yesterday and had a conference with the Ottawa management.

It was announced that Hull would probably be included in the circuit next season, and that Sunday baseball would be played in the latter town. President Page is said to have a scheme to include Peterboro, Ont., in the circuit, with another western city. This would make a fairly compact six club league.

SPECIA SERVICES AT TRINITY CHURCH.

Special services will be held tomorrow in Trinity Methodist Church for their anniversary Sunday. The speaker for the days will be the Rev. Frank Langford of Toronto, General Secretary of the Religious Education Department of the Metho dist church in Canada. Special music has been arranged for at both services.

In the afternoon Rev. Langford will address the children in the Sunday School, Reid street Hall at 3 o'clock where a special programme has been arranged.

The children of the junior department of the Sunday School are requested to meet at the church at 10.30 in the morning.

PASSING FADS IN FURNITURE

Styles in Wood as Frequent as in Clothes, Says Head of State Association

DETROIT, Dec. 1.—"Styles are as prevalent in woods used in furniture, house finishing, and innumerable other things, as they are in clothes," said E. O. Barden of Boyne City, president of the Michigan Hardwood Manufacturers' Association, which has been holding a meeting at the Hotel Statler.

"This is illustrated by the merely passing popularity of certain kinds. I won't say that the change is due entirely to the independent whims of the purchasing public, for advertising campaigns of the lumber dealers, as well as of the makers of furniture, play conspicuous parts.

"Take the use of birch, for example. Only a few years ago it was a despised wood although few would take a finer Only a few years ago it was a despised finish, and fewer still could be made to masquerade as something entirely different. Birch can be finished up as mahogany until it will almost defy detection. But it could not be sold.

Campaign Starts

"Then a dignified campaign was started, the wood was advertised and carefully pushed to the fore with the result that now a scarcity of birch exists. The time was when birdseye maple was held in high esteem for the better class of cabinet work, but it slowly went out of fashion, possibly because the supply grew less and less until it is virtually negligible.

"One of our aims as hardwood manufacturers is to bring about reforestation in Michigan. Of course we realize that efforts are being made to restore the pine forests, and that we heartily approve, but our activities as an organization are concentrated on the hard, deciduous woods—birch, maple, elm and beech in particular. A bill will be introduced in the next legislature embodying some of our ideas.

"But before any reforestation scheme can be successful a change must be made in our tax laws. As these are constituted there is no inducement for the owner of a large tract of timberland to reforest, but on the contrary every incentive for him to break up his holdings and dispose of them.

Would Lower Taxes

"The laws should reduce to a minimum taxes on land undergoing hardwood reforestation for the reason that for 30, 40, or perhaps 50 years there will not be any revenue from the premises. The same legal exception, for a different period, ought to be made to private parties reforesting with faster growing trees.

"The owner of a tract of land which has been timbered puts out seedlings; these have to be cared for in a way, and meanwhile the land lies unproductive in revenue. Years pile on years with plantings from one to another until the reservation is filled with saplings and young trees, eventually the first plantings have reached the point in their growth where they may be timbered. From then on the tract is a perpetual source of revenue, because for every tree felled another is planted, and each year available trees are coming along.

"When the productive period is reached taxes may well be changed, and be based, perhaps, on the number of trees felled annually, for there ought to be special tax laws for private forest reservations. They would do more to promote independent activities in reforestation than any other one thing. In fact, owners of forest tracts must be relieved of the unequal taxation that exists if they are to do what they and the public at large expects them to do,—help in restoring forests to the Middle West on land that is better adapted to tree growing than to crop growing."

HOW TO RESTORE LOVED ONES BACK TO ROBUST HEALTH

If a convention of all men and women who have sick relatives and friends could be called in some Canadian city, there would be a marvellous change in the health of Canadian people within a few weeks. It is certain that medicine bottles and pill boxes would go flying out sick-room windows.

It would be proved from letters of thousands and thousands of men and women, in all walks of life, that Internal Bathing is nature's own method of curing nature's maladies, and that it is the surest, safest, speediest road back to robust health.

A Winnipeg clergyman writes: "My wife is naturally sensitive about having her name appear in public print, yet she is anxious that others should know what the J.B.L. Cascade has done for her. It has really given her a new lease of life. For years she had been doctoring for constipation, which became worse each year. Since using the J.B.L. Cascade first, about four years ago, she has not been sick a day, and has become robust and strong again. Should any person wish this letter confirmed, you are at liberty to give my name in private."

The J.B.L. Cascade is shown and explained at the Warne Drug Co., Ltd., who will give you free on request an interesting and helpful booklet by Dr. C. A. Tyrrell, "The What, the Why, the Way of Internal Bathing." It contains a surprising amount of information that the average man and woman knows little about. Write or 'phone for it today, or send to Tyrrell's Hygienic Institute, 163 College St., Toronto.

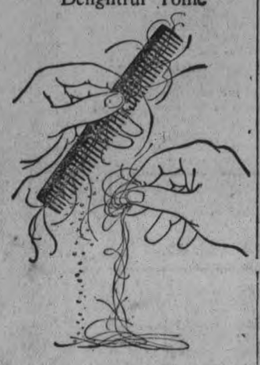
A SIN TO LET HAIR FALL OUT

35c "Danderine" Saves Your Hair—Ends Dandruff! Delightful Tonic



Hurry! It's your duty! Each day you see a little more hair falling out and you are making no effort to avoid baldness. What a pity. Falling hair means your hair is weak, sick,—possibly dandruff is strangling it, or the hair root pores in the scalp are not firm and tight, thus wasting the hair-growing oils.

Danderine almost instantly stops falling hair of men or women and cleans every particle of dandruff away, then the hair takes on new life, vigor and strength to grow strong, thick, and long.

Danderine is delightful — not sticky or greasy. Go to any drug-store now and get a bottle. Use it. Have healthy, heavy, beautiful hair and lots of it.

THEATRES AT BERLIN CLOSED BY A STRIKE

MATINEES IN CAFE

BERLIN, Dec. 1. — Associated Press. — Leading ladies and popular ingenues of Berlin's theatrical world, clad in silks, satins and furs, are pacing up and down in front of certain of the city's principal playhouse as pickets in sympathy with the strike of stage artists which became effective recently.

Virtually all of the forty to fifty legitimate theatres in Berlin have shut down and a number of the cafes restaurants and hotels have placed quarters at the disposal of the strikers for matinees and productions being arranged. The performers will give their services free but they solicit the monetary and moral support of the public for their cause.

This is the first time in the history of Berlin that a large strike of actors has occurred. Already during the last month the public have lived through strikes by coal handlers and pawn brokers while the underground railway services have been tied up since last Thursday owing to a walkout of the employees.

The actors came to their strike decision so suddenly that many of the theatre owners and directors had to keep the Saturday night crowds impatiently waiting for a time while the artists met behind the scenes and decided whether to don make up.

In some instances the directors drafted emergency casts which included themselves, dramatists, and even cashiers, several playing double roles.

The actors association held a huge mass meeting at which a number of the prominent members made large pecuniary contributions to aid in continuing the strike; one gave the proceeds from the sale of his automobile. It was announced that the funds available total well over 25,000,000 marks and that needy artists will receive a minimum of 1000 marks daily during the suspension of their work.

The directors announce an agreement not to re-engage any of the strikers for five years. A minimum wage is the centre of the controversy the owners being ready to pay 55,000 marks for November as the minimum provided the sum for December is fixed at 85,000. The actors are dissatisfied with the December rate and do not want the December rate fixed at the present time on account of the uncertain costs of living.

Why the Internal Bath?

Good health is becoming more and more a simple question of common-sense.

You probably know that more drugs are used in an effort to relieve Constipation than all other human ills combined.

Perhaps you also know, if not your Physician will tell you, that the great majority of human ills, simple and serious, can be traced directly to this cause.

This for the reason that accumulated waste in the lower intestine (or colon) is extremely noxious (poisonous), and as the blood circulates it takes up this poison and distributes it throughout the system, producing auto-intoxication, which is nothing but self-poisoning.

This pulls down our powers of resistance and makes us susceptible to any serious ailment that may be prevalent at the time. It is particularly the most fruitful cause of colds; it is directly the cause for appendicitis, and in persons of middle age hastens materially a tendency toward hardening of the arteries.

And it is nothing but this auto-intoxication which makes us blue, irritable, nervous and lacking in courage and efficiency long before any serious trouble appears.

Unfortunately we seldom know when we really are auto-intoxicated until its advanced stages. But fortunately a normal, natural method is in reach whereby we can assure ourselves of being always free from the cause of this enfeebling and dangerous condition.

And now for the common-sense!

If drugs would do the work, they might be desirable aside from the shock they are to the system—

But they never do more than half the work at best, and if persisted in they cease to be effective at all.

How much more sensible, then, to administer directly, by the proper scientific method, Nature's cleanser, warm water, and thoroughly cleanse the colon its entire length at reasonable intervals, keeping it sweet and pure—

And the joy of it—

The effect on your physical condition is little short of marvellous. Your eyes take on a new sparkle, your step a new vigor. Nature is working without a handicap and your nerves relax, your appetite improves and your sleep is restful and refreshing. You almost feel re-made.

To really understand the Internal Bath and all that it accomplishes, one should read the very interesting booklet by Dr. Chas. A. Tyrrell, the inventor of the "J. B. L. Cascade." Dr. Tyrrell's own life was saved and prolonged by Internal Bathing, and he wrote on the subject like the eminent authority that he was. The booklet, which is entitled "The What, the Why, and the Way of Internal Bathing," will interest every man and woman. All that is necessary to secure this booklet is to write to Tyrrell's Hygienic Institute at 113 Tyrrell Building, 163 College Street, and mention having read this article in The Examiner. The booklet will be mailed to you free of all cost or obligation, or it can be obtained by presenting this coupon to the Warne Drug Co., Peterborough, Ont.

THE FALL WEATHER HARD ON LITTLE ONES

Canadian fall weather is extremely hard on little ones. One day is warm and bright, and the next wet and cold. These sudden changes bring on colds, cramps and colic, and unless baby's little stomach is kept right the result may be serious. There is nothing to equal Baby's Own Tablets in keeping the little ones well. They sweeten the stomach, regulate the bowels, break up colds and make baby thrive. The tablets are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from the Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

"DINTY" MOORE RAID CROWDS BROADWAY

NEW YORK, Dec. 2.—Five detectives under the direction of Inspector James Bolan, just at the beginning of the dinner hour last night, raided "Dinty" Moore's restaurant, at 216 West Forty-sixth street, two doors from Broadway, where they seized alleged intoxicants valued at $10,000 and made two arrests. The news that Moore's, a popular theatrical rendezvous, was receiving a visit from the police rapidly spread along the Rialto, and before detectives had completed their work a dense crowd gathered. It was necessary to call the reserves from the West Forty-seventh Street Station to clear the street.

The search warrant for the raid was issued by Supreme Court Justice McAvoy. Detective Thomas Sheehan alleged that he purchased a pint of "Canadian ale" from Charles Cusacko, a waiter, which upon examination he found to be whiskey. As the warrant included the five stories of the building housing the restaurant, the detectives made a thorough search of the premises.

The first and second floors were filled with diners when the police entered and there was consternation and a rapid movement among many, according to the police, to get rid of liquids. The alleged liquors were found on the fourth floor above the living quarters of James Moore, the proprietor. Moore told the police that the goods seized had been purchased before the Volstead Act went into effect. Moore and Cusacko were arrested and released in $500 bail each on a charge of violating the Mullan-Gage Act.

The alleged liquor was carried to the West Forty-seventh Street Station, four trips being necessary. The police said the seizure included eighteen cases of Black and White whiskey, 200 bottles of wine and 200 bottles of champagne.

A STRANGE MYSTERY CAUSES QUITE A STIR

Brothers in British Columbia are Victims of Persistent Button Thiefs.

NANAIMO, Dec. 1.—(Canadian Press).—A strange mystery is causing quite a stir in the district near Cassidy's Ranch, six miles south of here. William and Edward Cassidy, brothers, living together on the farm, a few weeks ago discovered that all the buttons had been cut off of their store clothes. Despite careful watch this happened fourteen times.

Once when Edward planned to attend a dance in the neighborhood on the next evening, he carefully tied up the best suit and hid it behind the stove. The next evening the buttons were gone, and the dance arrangement was cancelled.

Then a brother-in-law, Mr. Mainwaring, visited the boys with the intention of attending a dance at Granby Mine, nearby. His dress suit was mysteriously stripped of its buttons, and another social engagement had to be abandoned.

This was the last straw. The provincial police were called in. Constable Bradner prepared to spend several days at the ranch, systematically running down clues.

He did not find anything tending to indicate the criminal agency, but he did find, on awakening bright and early one morning, that he could not make the necessary connections on his clothing because of a total absence of buttons.

The police are still working on the case. Meantime, special locks on all doors have put at least a temporary stop to the button thefts.

WHAT IS SHIP SUBSIDY?

Here's Answer

WASHINGTON, Dec. 1.. The most bitter fight in Congress since the League of Nations battle will be waged over the administration's ship subsidy bill, on which President Harding has demanded early action.

Just what does this bill provide?

It is submitted as a measure "to promote an American Merchant Marine." Simply stated, it provides six primary methods of assistance to vessel interests:

1. The sale of government-owned vessels to private individuals or corporations. These vessels are to be operated under the American flag, on terms permitting payments to be extended over 15 years, with interest at 4 per cent on unpaid balances.

2. Government loans, up to $125,000,000, for new vessel construction or equipment. Loans may be made up to two-thirds total cost of such vessels, and to bear interest at rate of 2 per cent.

3. Reduction of taxes on incomes and profits of individuals or corporations, earned by the operation of American vessels in foreign trade, and exemption from taxes of earnings or profits reinvested in new ship construction.

Aids U. S. Shipping

4. Monopoly to American shipping, wherever possible, in carrying out-bound foreign mails.

5. Requirements that one-half of all immigrants coming to America shall have passage on American-owned vessels.

6. Direct cash payments by the government, on the basis of gross tonnage and mileage of vessels operated between American and foreign ports.

Supporters of the measure maintain that the cost to the government under its provisions would be less than the sum the government is now losing on its war-built merchant fleet. President Harding placed this loss at $50,000,000 a year.

They also declare the measure would stimulate private interest in the development of American shipping to the point where American ships would transport American products to the markets of the world, thereby keeping in American pockets the profits from such transportation.

Further, they contend, an adequate American merchant marine would be an invaluable asset in time of war for the transportation of supplies or troops.

Opponents' Arguments

Opponents of the measure say the subsidy will constitute a gift of untold millions to a comparatively few groups of shipping interests; that it will not stimulate a truly great merchant marine, but will go only to lines operating ships over established routes; that it is unAmerican in principle, because it seeks to sustain, out of the public purse, a service which the administration says cannot be maintained in open competition with other nations; that the special favors provided in tax emption and low rates of interests, injustice is done all other groups which must pay taxes and borrow money.

They also argue that, in addition to the direct cost to the government of the tonnage-mile subsidy, estimated by shipping board officials at $30,000,000 yearly, the lost taxes and other gratuities would add additional millions which never could be accurately figured.

BRING SPECIMENS OF NORTHERN WILD GAME

Lady Yule and Daughter of England Return Laden to England.

VANCOUVER, Dec. 1.—(Canadian Press).—Bringing specimens of mountain goat, caribou and moose shot by themselves in the wild district of Cassiar, at the extreme northern boundary of British Columbia, Lady Yule and her daughter of Hamstead House, St. Albans, Herts, England, recently returned to Vancouver.

They achieved the distinction of being the first women to undertake a big game hunt in the northern wilderness on their own account.

Without previous experience in camping or in the use of the rifle, this titled woman and her daughter, seeking some real thrills and adventures, stepped from a luxurious environment in the heart of England, traveled thousands of miles by ocean and rail, and entering the hinterland by way of Skagway, Alaska, made their way with a pack train 200 miles into a wilderness of mountains, valleys and streams to the very centre of the northern game paradise.

The journey provided a test of indomitable grit and endurance. Part of the journey was made on horseback and part on foot. They travelled over high mountains, through swamps and across swift rivers. It was hazardous going all the way and the crowning feature of the achievement is that it was accomplished in the fall of the year, with the snow on the ground part of the time and the weather bitterly cold.

The success of the trip was due to Mr. A. Bryan Williams of Vancouver, who acted as guide. So enamored were both women with their experiences that they have decided to make another trip into the far-famed country.

BLACK BEAR BUCKS THE FOOTBALL LINE

Bruin Brings Entire Aggregation to a Stop at Cumberland,

CUMBERLAND, B.C.—Dec. 1.—(Canadian Press).—A big black bear bucked the line against the Cumberland football team near here recently, and brought the entire aggregation to a sudden stop. The players were returning in an automobile from a match at Ladysmith when the bear appeared in the middle of the road. Angered by the headlights' glare, bruin lowered his head and executed a spectacular centre-rush. Injured by the impact, the animal fled to the woods. He left behind a broken bumper, bent axle, battered mudguard, and a bewildered football team.

"Wasps," says a naturalist, "really are quite gentle and make no attempt to sting persons who are quiet in their movements."

Do You Remember My Pictures? Charlie Chaplin

WIN $2500.00 IN PRIZES

NAME THE PICTURES THESE SCENES ARE FROM

CHARLIE CHAPLIN'S Picture Plays have made millions laugh. He is particularly well known and appreciated in Canada. But whether or not you have seen all the famous Charlie Chaplin films that are being shown throughout the country, are you clever enough to find the names of the pictures from which the scenes at the right are taken? If you can you may share in the winning of $2500.00 in cash and prizes.

HOW TO SOLVE IT.

The object of this contest is to bring to your mind a few of the most popular of the famous Charlie Chaplin picture plays. The 5 scenes at the right are taken right out of five of his great pictures. In order to help you name them correctly the artist has put into these scenes the names of the plays themselves in jumbled letters. Unscramble these letters, put them into their right order and you will have their names. In case you are not familiar with the popular Charlie Chaplin picture plays that are appearing in Canada now, the names at the left will help you:

THIS GREAT CONTEST IS ABSOLUTELY FREE. SEND YOUR ANSWER TO-DAY.

This great contest is nothing more nor less than a great advertising and introduction campaign. It is absolutely free of expense. It is being conducted by the Continental Publishing Co., Limited, one of the largest and best known publishing houses in Canada, and has the endorsement of the great Charlie Chaplin Studios.

CHARLIE CHAPLIN HIMSELF IS HONORARY JUDGE!

Frankly this contest is intended to further advertise and introduce EVERYWOMAN'S WORLD, Canada's Greatest Magazine, but you do not have to buy anything, subscribe to anything or spend a cent of your money in order to enter and win a prize.

HOW TO SEND YOUR ANSWERS.

Write the names of the five pictures you think these scenes are from, using one side of the paper only. Put your full name and address (stating Miss, Mrs. Mr. or Master) in the lower right hand corner. Use a separate sheet for anything else you wish to write.

Mr. Chaplin as Honorary Judge, and three independent judges, having no connection with this company, will award the prizes, and the answer gaining 250 points will win First prize. You will get 20 points for each picture you name correctly. 40 points will be awarded for the general neatness, punctuation, spelling, etc., of your answer, 10 points for handwriting and 100 points for fulfilling a simple condition of the contest. This condition is only that you assist in this great advertising campaign by showing a copy of EVERYWOMAN'S WORLD, Canada's Greatest Magazine (which we will kindly you post paid) to just four friends or neighbours who will appreciate this really worth while Canadian publication and want it to come to them every month. The contest will close at 6 p. m. June 30th 1923, immediately after which the answers will be judged and prizes awarded. We reserve the right to alter the qualifying conditions from time to time as may appear necessary, though of course any such change will not affect anyone who has already qualified their entry. Don't delay sending your answer. This announcement may not appear in this paper again. Address Charlie Chaplin Contest Editor, Continental Publishing Co., Ltd., Dept. 48 Toronto, Ont.

GLORY ENDS; SHE IS MRS. FELTON AGAIN

Woman Senator Makes Entry and Graceful Exit.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 1.—Women's brief representation in the Senate ended here with a dramatic speech by Mrs. W. H. Felton, of Georgia, the first woman Senator, followed by her retirement from the public stage. Now she is back at home.

Every wish of the feminine political pathfinder—to be sworn in and placed legally on the Senate rolls, to answer a Senate roll call, and to make a brief address—had been gratified before she left the capitol.

"Indeed, I am the happiest woman in the United States," she said, amid the applause of Senators and spectators, in the first address ever made by a woman in the Senate. Immediately afterward, her successor, Walter F. George, whose gracious delay in presenting his election credentials had made reception of the woman Senator possible, was administered the oath and Mrs. Felton became a former Senator. Appointed Oct. 3, on the death of Senator Thomas E. Watson, and sworn in Tuesday, her actual Senate service was 22 hours and 25 minutes.

A resolution to pay Mrs. Felton salary and mileage was introduced later by Senator Harris, Democrat, Georgia. It proposed to pay from the Senate contingent fund $287.67 as salary from Nov. 8 to 21, inclusive, and $280 as mileage from Georgia. Mrs. Felton already had drawn her pay from the date of her appointment until Nov. 7, election day. The resolution went into the appropriations committee.

SHOVELING COAL FROM THE BEDS OF RIVERS FREE

How Many Lucky Pennsylvanians Are Solving Their Fuel Problems This Winter.

NEAR THE SHORE

HARRISBURG Pa., Dec. 2.—(Associated Press)—The coal problem this winter is one only of strong arm muscles and a vehicle—wheelbarrow, horse and wagon, or motor truck—for some Pennsylvanians whose homes are on the banks of streams which flow from the hard coal regions.

River-coal—so-called because it is found in the beds of these rivers—is the solution. The coal, in the form of small particles, finer than the grade konwn commercially as buckwheat, has been used for years, largely by manufacturing plants, but the fear of shortage this year has increased household consumption, and many persons living along the streams in which it is found are gathering their own supply with the use of a shovel and a cart or automobile for transportation.

The coal is mainly the product of culm or refuse banks in the vicinity of mines further up the streams. It is found in the Lehigh, Schuylkill and Susquehanna rivers down which it has been washed in the years since anthracite mining was begun in Pennsylvania. In many sections of these river beds several feet thick have existed, but commercial dredging and pumping operations combined with greater conservation on the part of mining companies in reducing the supply.

Householders who have gathered their own winter fuel from the rivers have found the coal frequently in eddies near the shore, where it has been necessary only to shovel it out. One man, living next the Susquehanna in the vicinity of Harrisburg, has obtained a complete winter supply at only the cost of transportation. Commercially the coal sells about $3 a ton. Forced draft is required for its use in household furnaces, and when so used it produces, it is said, as much or more heat than the grades commonly sold for household use.

More than a half-million tons of river coal, valued at nearly $700,000 were recovered from the Schuylkill, Susquehanna and Lehigh rivers in commercial operations during, 1921 state reports show.

GILSON PIPELESS FURNACE

Let Me Show You This New and Better Furnace

IT will cost you less than any other efficient heating system. And I'm convinced. I can show you many features of superiority.

I'm enthusiastic about this Gilson Pipeless Furnace. It can be installed in any home, old or new, in less than a day. Only a small cellar is needed.

Instead of using dusty stoves that only heat one or two rooms and waste a lot of fuel, have the whole house heated coolly with moist, warm air. The Gilson Pipeless Furnace will soon pay for itself in the fuel it saves.

Get in touch with me and I'll show you for how little money you can have your home heated properly by this modern heating system.

CONVICTION

established that the bottle found by the fence was the one given to Puffer. From the time the bottle, whether the original one or not, reached Puffer, the circumstances are satisfactorily shown. Puffer gave it to his swife, his wife gave it to Stewart, Stewart sent it to the analyst in Toronto, who reports that the liquid in question consisted of fifty-one per cent. spirits.

Weak Link in Chain.

But I am not satisfied that this bottle with the contents so analyzed was the one Nightingale found by the fence, on account of the weak link in the chain of evidence, a chain is no stronger than its weakest link, and I am further not satisfied that the bottle found by Nightingale by the fence was the one thrown over there by Scriver, or that the bottle found on the road was ever in the car of Scriver, as alleged in the conviction. The bottle is a small one of very ordinary size and shape, with no distinguishing marks. A man should be proved, not presumed guilty, and the onus of doing so is on the Crown, and the bottle was not found on the appellant so as to shift the onus on him. It was strongly urged that onus was on the accused to clear himself, not on the Crown to prove him guilty, under the provisions of the Ontario Temperance Act. This is not correct, the liquor not having been shown to have been in the accused's possession. Guilt must be proved, and a man must not be guessed into jail even under existing legislation. In any event the possession of a teaspoonful of liquid, half spirits, would seem too minor an offence to justify the punishment inflicted, and I would greatly reduce the fine if the conviction stood. I, however, find the offence not proved and adjudge accordingly. The conviction will be set aside. I make no order as to costs.

I desire to add that the evidence was not taken down by a stenographer: a memorandum of it was made by the Magistrate himself in long hand, which may or may not have been complete. I, however, am bound by it and not permitted in an appeal under this Act to take any evidence do novo as would be done in other appeals. I therefore cannot go beyond the record, and the record as presented to me presents the weakness referred to and relied upon in this direction. Order accordingly.

PUT CANADA'S HOUSE IN ORDER

prairie farmer has been somewhat improved this fall by the large quantity of grain produced, although prices were disappointing. In many cases the cost of production was so close to the selling price of the grain that there was little profit left for the farmer. The territory adjacent to the United States border from Lethbridge, Alberta, on the west, into Manitoba on the east had an abundant crop, and, for the most part, it was marketed early. This was a timely relief to that district as it had not harvested a real crop for several years. The sections around Regina, Weyburn and Moose Jaw also yielded a splendid cop, but it was light in some other districts, owing to lack of moisture.

Mountains of Coal.

Canada's West has immense resources of coal, oil and other minerals. It has been estimated, Mr. Harstone said, that Alberta has coal enough to supply Ontario for hundreds of years. Vast bituminous deposits, mountains of coal, are found in Alberta and lignite in Saskatchewan. If the Government could assist in establishing a low freight rate on coal (in train-loads) to the East, Ontario's fuel problem would be solved for the future, and, in addition, one of Canada's geat natural resources would be developed, giving employment to many people.

VOICE OF THE PEOPLE

THE LOST SHEEP.

"If so be that he find it."—Matt. 18:12, 13.

I was reading the other day some lines entitled "The Ways of Sheep," and on reading it knew it to be very true from what I myself have observed. One sheep shall we say gets scared of something and perhaps that very something is the shepherd's dog, who has not learned well the way to round up sheep and instead of helping his master he scatters the sheep and gives his master no end of trouble and worry, while he himself gets severely rebuked and slinks away shame-facedly. In the first place one sheep makes a drive through a hedge, where under ordinary circumstances he would not risk tearing his wool to get through; in panic another follows and another, till every last sheep in the field is through the hedge on the other side. Some job now the shepherd has got on his hands to get them back; no use depending on that foolish dog; even though the poor fellow means well, the shepherd must go after them himself.

We have all heard the story of the Good Shepherd, and who has not felt the tears start at the singing of the "Ninety and Nine." Sankey's beautiful sacred song? Spurgeon in a wonderful sermon of his on "One Lost Sheep," says that it is not often we find an "if" in reference to Christ's work, but here is one—"if so be that he find it." This does not show weakness in the Shepherd, but the desperate danger of the sheep; he also says that in the Greek the word "lost" is a very strong word, meaning that which is destroyed," not non-existant, but destroyed as to usefulness, as to happiness to itself, as to working out the intent for which it was created.

Ninety and nine sheep to the Saviour is not one hundred. Oh, no! says Spuurgeon, one a missing, and he must go to find it; the hireling might say, oh, we have nearly the hundred, why bother about the odd one? As, why, indeed? Because it is His, not merely by creation but by purchase, and the price paid not in silver and gold, but in blood. Again we find Spurgeon saying, Dear friends, see Jesus takes such an interest in one stray soul, you must not think it little that you should be called to care for a single soul.

Our cultured teachers, says he weary of the hundrum work of bringing individual souls into light; they pine to do it wholesale, and so we have to listen to great swelling words about the upliting of the units and their great minds dwell upon "the solidity of the race," but, continues he, if ever the wanderers are to be brought in it will have to be done by bringing them in one by one.

Yes, Spurgeon is right; we must get back to the Master's way; if we love Him we must not run here and there and bark and scare the sheep, like the dog before mentioned, but seek to learn humbly just how He wants us to act, so that we do not scatter His sheep, but dutifully and lovingly help Him to bring them into the fold, remembering how often we have blundered and hindered instead of helping. —M. B.

ENTERTAINING NIGHT AT ST. JAMES' S.S. HALL.

Young People's League Heard to Advantage in Playlette and Concert.

The annual entertainment of St. James' Young Peoples' League was held last night in the Sunday school room before a capacity house. The opening part was in the form of a miscellaneous programme rendered by well known local talent, the second part consisting of a playette entitled "Mr. Editor," presented by members of the League.

Overture, Sutiday school orchestra; Chairman's address, Rev. J. F. Chapman; vocal solo, Miss R. Young; piano solo, Mr. L. Unitt; vocal solo, Mrs. E. Kitney; cornet solo, Mr. C. Gallagher; vocal solo, Mr. W. Farr; reading, Miss I. Breckenridge; violin solo, Master A. Spencer; vocal solo, Miss T. Pearson.

"Mr. Editor" was appropriately staged and presented in a manner which reflected credit on the following cast:

Mr. Arthur Baxter, an editor, Lewis Parks; Polly Melvin, a would-be contributor, Margaret Bennett; Jimmy Smart, an office boy, Elmer McLaren; Mr. Penn Wright, wholesale vendor of literature, William Prest; Mr. Bud Flowers, a poet, Edwin Rowe; Mrs. Chatterton Gayley, who uses her pen, Jean Hamilton; Mr. Hotter, not to be lightly rejected, Sherman Rowe; Joe, the head Porter, Alvin Davis; Bill, the assistant porter, Percy Van Nest.

A COUNTER-REVOLT IN WESTERN GREECE.

British Flag Is Raised on Island of Corfu, It Is Reported.

ROME, Dec. 2.—(Canadian Press).—A serious counter-revolutionary outbreak has occurred in Patras and Missolonghi on the Gulf of Palas in Western Greee, and on the island of Corfu, where the British flag is reported to have been raised as a gesult of indignation over Greek executions, says, a messake received here from Athens to-day.

Louey With a Bankroll of $136 Comes Home Not Dead, Just Fled School for 30 Months

PATERSON, N. J., Dec. 2.—After having been given up for dead for two and a half years, Louis Niefeld, 15 years old, returned here with "a nice little bank-roll" and the explanation that he had gone away because he "couldn't stand school any longer."

Louis' parents lived in Hamilton avenue when he disappeared, and it was there that he first went today. A new tenant of his former home informed him that his family had moved to 305 Van Houten street and offered to call Mrs. Niefeld on the telephone.

"Hello, Mom," said Louis when his mother came to the telephone. "This is Louey. I'm back again."

In June, 1920, Louis went hunting and failed to return. It was supposed that he had been drowned in the Passaic River, and funeral services were held over an empty coffin.

"Well," Louis told his parents after a joyous reunion, "you know, I couldn't stand school any longer. Some fellows are regular bookworms, but a man doesn't have to have an education to make money, and I knew that I was one of that kind. So I thought I'd beat it. Of course, I didn't think of the misery I'd cause at home or I wouldn't have done it.

"I went to New York City for a little while and then to Newark, N. Y., where I've been ever since. It didn't do me any harm, because here's a nice little bank roll Louey brought home to you."

The 'nice little bank roll' amounted to $136.

HARDING A CANDIDATE.

PALO ALTO, Calif., Dec. 2.—(Canadian Press).—The Republican Presidential candidate in 1924, "obviously will be Warren G. Harding," Secretary of Commerce Herbert C. Hoover said in an interview at his home here yesterday.

"Moreover, by that time, 1924,' Mr. Hoover said, "the public will be highly appreciative of the sanity and progress of the policies that have brought this country through the reconstruction period."

HEART PALPITATED And Was Short of Breath

Through one cause or another a large majority of people are troubled, more or less, with some form of heart trouble.

Many people may be unaware of having anything wrong with their heart till some little excitement, over work or worry starts it to palpitate and throb, skip beats, beat fast for a time and then so slow as to seem almost to stop, then it causes great anxiety and alarm.

To all such sufferers

MILBURN'S HEART AND NERVE PILLS

will give prompt and permanent relief. Mrs. Alice Bishop, 15 Hawthorne Ave., Hamilton, Ont., writes: —"I take great pleasure in recommending Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills to all persons troubled as I had been.

I suffered from palpitation of the heart and shortness of breath; my heart would skip beats, and in the night, at times, I would have to sit up to get my breath. I could not go up stairs without my heart fluttering, and my nerves were all unstrung, but since using your famous Pills I have felt like a different person."

A Stubborn Cough Loosens Right Up

Here is a home-made syrup which millions of people have found to be the most dependable means of breaking up stubborn coughs. It is cheap and simple, but very prompt in action. Under its healing, soothing influence, chest soreness goes, phlegm loosens, breathing becomes easier, tickling in throat stops and you get a good night's restful sleep. The usual throat and chest colds are conquered by it in 24 hours or less. Nothing better for bronchitis, hoarseness, croup, throat tickle, bronchial asthma or winter coughs.

To make this splendid cough syrup, pour 2½ ounces of Pinex into a 16-oz. bottle and fill the bottle with plain granulated sugar syrup and shake thoroughly. If you prefer, use clarified molasses, honey, or corn syrup, instead of sugar syrup. Either way, you get 16 ounces—a family supply—of much better cough syrup than you could buy ready-made for $2.50. Keeps perfectly and children love its pleasant taste.

Pinex is a special and highly concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine extract, known the world over for its prompt healing effect upon the membranes.

To avoid disappointment, ask your druggist for "2½ ounces of Pinex" with full directions, and don't accept anything else. Guaranteed to give absolute satisfaction or money promptly refunded. The Pinex Co., Toronto, Ont.

DEATH IN GRAVEL PIT ACCIDENTAL

Coroner's Jury So Finds in Case of Cave-in at Little Britain.

LITTLE BRITAIN, Dec. 2.— A verdict of "accidental death, with no blame attached to anybody," was the result of the deliberations of the coroner's jury here in connection with the death in a gravel pit recently of Sidney Seeley.

In all cases of deaths in pits or mines, an inquest is necessary and the Department of Mines called the inquest in this case. Coroner Dr. Blanchard was in charge. The only witness who had actually been present at the time of the fatality was E. L. Sackville, of Little Britain. He had been working with Seeley at the time and he stated in his evidence that he had heard a crack. He turned and said, "We had better get out. This thing is going to fall." They both turned and ran, and it is thought that the victim must have fallen. When found, his body was stretched straight out, leaving the impression that he had tripped. Other witnesses were Clarence Weslick, Oakwood, Richard Osborne, of Oakwood and Dr. Hall of Little Britain.

The members of the jury were: Isaac McKee, Nelson Weldon, Albert Henderson, William Yeo, Richard Robertson, Morley Goard and Les. Tremeer. Constable Conquergood of Lindsay, was present and Mr. R. V. Mark representing the Crown. Mr. Sutherland, of Toronto, represented the Department of Mines.

RUSS. RED OFFICIALS TIRED OF LONG HOURS

Night Work is Gradually Disapearing From the New Economic Programme.

MOSCOW, Dec. 1.— (Associated Press).—Night work, which was so popular among the soviet commissars and various government chiefs when communism was at its height, is gradually disappearing as part of the program of the new economic policy. The work of the various officials has been distributed in part to others, and it is no longer necessary for them to labor fifteen and eighteen hours out of every twenty-four.

Nikolai Lenine the premier, since his return to office after a six months' rest in the country made necessary by illness, occasionally works in the evenings, but not all the night as formerly. George Tchitcherin, commissar of foreign affairs, who in the old days never finished work until five or six o'clock in the morning, also works in the evenings seven days a week, but he usually finishes along toward midnight.

Generally speaking, official office hours nowadays are from ten or eleven o'clock in the morning to nine or ten o'clock at night, with a few hours off in the late afternoon for dinner.

Suffered From Pimples and Blotches For Fifteen Years

When the blood becomes impure it is only natural that pimples, blotches boils or some other blood trouble will manifest itself by breaking out of the system.

There is only one way to get rid of these obnoxious skin troubles and that is by giving the impure blood a thorough cleansing by the use of a good blood purifier, such as

Burdock Blood Bitters

This remarkable remedy has been on the market for over forty years; is the best obtainable, and will do all we claim for it as a blood cleanser.

Mr. Albert R. De Witte, Lake Valley, Sask., writes: "I have suffered very much from pimples and unsightly blotches for the past fifteen years, and was so bad that I hated to go out anywhere. I tried many different medicines, but none seemed to help. A friend told me to use Burdock Blood Bitters. I have used three and a half bottles, and now I have a clear, rosy complexion."

DEBASED CURRENCY IS USELESS IN TEACHING

Austrian Money Loses Quality of Appealing to the Child's Mind

VIENNA, Dec. 1. — (Associated Press).—A curious effect of the debased Austrian currency is disclosed in the necessity of revising the system of instruction in decimal numbers in the schools.

As in all other countries, the simplest method for such instruction used to be in terms of money, appealing directly and understandingly to the child mind. Thus it was easy to formulate lessons to the effect that one heller represented one one hundredth of a crown, and so on.

Now one heller represents a variable sum; with no comparative stability, and the school authorities are trying to find another basis or symbol for primary instruction.

Furthermore, children today never hear of hellers except in school. The lowest purchasing unit is 100 crowns, and it takes three such units to buy a box of matches.

When the Spaniards came to America they were astonished to find the natives of Mexico already using the cross as a religious symbol.

MONEY HIDING IN THE HOME IS DANGEROUS

Swiss Miller Misses Cash Secreted in a Bag of Flour.

GENEVA, Switzerland, Dec. 1.—(Associated Press).—A miller who hid bank notes to the value of four thousand francs in a sack of flour during the recent scare caused by the proposal to levy a tax on capital, is now scouring the canton of Argovie in an attempt to recover his funds.

The sack of flour in question was by error included in a delivery with other sacks, and sold by the retailer to some housewife who, thus far, has not reported any unexpected prize in her package.

A good many Swiss during the money scare drew their money out of banks and confided it to improvised depositories which in some cases proved to be unsafe. One man, following the example of the farmer of Lorient, France, put a thousand franc note in a gun barrel and then forgot it. He shot the money away, a few days later, when firing at a rabbit.

WAYSIDE SHRINES ARE LOOTED BY THIEVES

Series of Robberies is Occuring All Over Austria These Days.

VIENNA, Dec. 1.—(Associated Press)—A series of robberies of wayside shrines, private chapels, cross road monuments, and other medieval statuary, is occurring all over Austria. The thefts are so skilfully planned that only carvings and statues of high artistic or historic value are taken, leading the police to believe that they are directed by experts.

Austria is rich in these relics. In remote and lonely places all over the country are rare and wonderful monuments, often dating from the Middle Ages, and some even said to be of Roman origin. In the Tyrol and Styria particularly, on high passes or on the sites of ancient churches, are to be found reliefs, carvings, statuary or tablets almost priceless to the antiquarian, and these are the loot of this latest gang of plunderers. In one private chapel last week three statues of great value were removed without clue to the thieves. As such things have no general public appeal or sale, it is evident that the depredations are planned by other than common robbers.

HEARD WIFE HUGGED, KISSED HIRED MAN.

Neighbours Testify 'Friendship' Caused General Gossip.

PONTIAC, Mich., December 1. — The attention Mrs. Hattie Johnson, a prominent Holly matron, was said to have lavished on her husband's former hired man, Edward Lotz, now now a farm hand at Grand Blanc, caused general gossip in the vicinity of the Johnson home in Groveland Township in the spring of 1921, several neighbors testified yesterday in the divorce suit Mrs. Johnson is bringing against Clark Johnson.

Johnson is 60 and his wife 43. Lotz who appears to be about Mrs. Johnson's age, was an interested spectator in court.

Mrs. Johnson, questioned regarding her acquaintance with Lotz, denied that she ever hugged and kissed him, as the Johnson answer and cross-bill charged. She said Lotz was "merely a friend," but admitted going with him to the home of his parents at Brown City one day last summer and getting back to Holly the folowing morning. She said she spent the night in a depot at Flint, waiting for a train.

Johnson had witnesses by whom he hopes to prove that Mrs. Johnson was enamoured of Lotz and that she left home July 15th, 1921, because the hired man had been discharged There is a six year old daughter of whom both the father and mother want the custody.

SUFFRAGIST PROSPECTS IN BRAZIL PROMISING

Carrie Chapman Call Will Find Campaign Well Under Way.

RIO DE JANIERO, Dec. 1.—(Associated Press)— Mrs. Carrie Chapman Catt, the famous American woman suffrage leader who may visit this country to assist the local organizations in their fight for the vote, will find the campaign well under way upon her arrival. At the moment the battle is centered about a bill which is under discussion in the Chamber of Deputies. It the bill become a law, which is said to be more likely this year than at any previous time in Brazil's history the women of this land will be on the same political footing as the men.

Publicists and the press have taken up the fight and all the arguments that preceded the granting of the vote to the women of England, America Norway and the score of other countries where equal suffrage is now a matter of course, are being put forth here with the same, if not a greater degree of enthusiasm, as in the other countries.

Even the opponents of the idea admit that eventually the women will have their way. They are opposing the bill merely to preserve mans' present advantage as long as may be possible.

Help burned Ontario over the Winter/

MEN and women of Ontario—it is time that we should all realize the terrible completeness of the fire calamity that devastated Northern Ontario in the early days of October. Fires and calamities we have had before, but never such complete destruction as this.

Over 1,200 square miles laid desolate, town after town nothing but a bleak expanse of ruins, hundreds of farms swept bare, thousands of your fellow citizens "cleaned out" and thrown abruptly back into man's primeval struggle against nature and her grim forces: fire, hunger, ice and the stark northern cold.

Give 1,800 families a fighting chance to get on their feet. Temporary relief must go on. We must not fail the North.

Winter—the relentless foe

Coming as this terrible fire did, in the autumn, with the harvests in, with the townspeople already preparing for the rigors of winter—the complete destruction wrought is the harder to overcome.

Thousands of people at first had literally no place to lay their head, little to wear and nothing to eat. They had to be taken care of at first, somehow, and then, desperately as the days went by, and the cold grew more intense, rough but serviceable standard shacks, 16' x 20', have been replacing tents, old street cars, packing boxes and sheet iron—a regular food supply has been established, and rough clothing is being distributed.

What can a man do with his house a blackened hole in the ground, his barn a charred heap, his work shop a twisted pile of rubbish—and a northern blizzard raging over all?

Temporary Relief Until Spring

In the name of humanity we must see these fellow citizens through until Spring opens up the land and general business activities are resumed. Money must be forthcoming from the citizens of Ontario, from municipalities, industries, societies, public bodies, lodges, churches, etc.—not for rehabilitation or re-establishment, but for the supply of bare necessities, "temporary relief" in fact, to the stricken North.

The Brighter Side of the Picture

Everywhere throughout the fire swept district one hears only a strong, manly note of confidence, of resolution to go forward, to "stick to the country" if body and soul can be held together, to make good once more, to restore the hundreds of burned farms, to rebuild the eight or ten destroyed towns—And it will be done if the stream of temporary relief from Old Ontario does not dry up!

All for One—One for All

Here is a portion of our Province in ruins, and for the sake of the whole Province as well as for its own sake, this section must be restored to prosperity and happiness. We need the North, we need its vigorous, pioneering spirit so one and all, let's "give a hand into the saddle"—and do it NOW.

Money is needed. The Relief Committee can buy in large quantities, get big discounts, and often free gifts of merchandise from the many manufacturers who are generously co-operating with the Committee. The exact needs are now known.

The Northern Ontario Fire Relief Committee has been enlarged and now is thoroughly representative of the Province of Ontario. The Provincial Government is co-operating to the fullest extent and is doing everything that a Government can properly do to assist in temporarily relieving the fire sufferers.

To give immediate relief the Committee must secure actual cash without delay. If each municipality or county would devise some means of raising an amount equal to one half mill on the total assesment the relief can be continued. The raising of relief funds could be undertaken by public spirited citizens, clubs, churches or councils and provides a most deserving cause for Christmas giving. Now it is up to every community in Ontario to help a neighbouring district in its hour of trial. Make cheques payable to—

BABSON SEES BOOM: AUTOMOBILES FIRST.

Says Cars, Not Clothes, Will Dictate Social Status.

DETROIT, Dec. 1.—Business conditions are improving and will continue to improve, especially in the automobile industry, according to Roger W. Babson, statistician, who addressed business men in the Cass Technical High School here, under the auspices of the Board of Commerce.

Of seven vital factors, Mr. Babson said, four are distinctly favorable for business—"Fundamental conditions," in which he ineludes religion; plenteous crops; the money situation and the mercantile situation.

Three factors he finds unfavorable—the condition of labor; the foreign situation, and the 20 per cent. to 30 per cent. surplus in manufacturing capacity in the United States.

Mr. Babson predicted that the prices of commodities would remain about as they are while the prices of stocks and bonds would rise.

In reply to a question regarding the clothing industry, Mr. Babson said: "People buy what they think will gain them social position. This used to be clothes but I predict that in the next two years it will be automobiles. There will be more demand for automobiles than for clothing during the next year or two."

"The crying need of the hour," he said, "is that we get behind the retailer and help him."

Mr. Babson closed his talk with the general request to business men to "stop thinking of themselves and start thinking of the other fellow."

Girl Loses Prize, Sues Show

Miss Hyatt, of Battle Creek, Says Her Neck and Calf Measure the Same as Venus De Milo's — Asks $100,000 For Alleged False Judging.

NEW YORK, Dec. 1.—The supreme court, its usual repose swept away, blushed and blanched in turn last night because of a delicate little problem that Ann Hyatt, a Battle Creek, Mich., gymnasium directress, put up to its austere intellects Wednesday.

After losing in the physical culture show and beauty contest held in Madison Square Garden a month ago Miss Hyatt filed suit for $100,000 damages against promoters of the show. Dorothy Knapp, winner of the Atlantic City Bathing beauty contest last summer and model for James Montgomery Flagg, was awarded first place at the Garden by four sculptors and an art critic, who comprised the judges' committee.

All the supreme court is asked to do in the suit is to decide whether the Michigan young woman or Miss Knapp more closely duplicate the form of the Venus de Milo hip and thigh, neck and calf, head to heel.

The neck and calf of the Venus are the same size, 13½ inches each, one of the sculptors announced when Miss Hyatt was ruled out. Miss Hyatt's calf measured 14½ inches, the beauty judges said, and her neck only 13.

She denies it. She says her only measurements differing from the Venus de Milo are the hips and thighs—she has half an inch more around the hips, and an inch around each thigh more than "Venus," and declares Miss Knapp is farther than that from the classic specifications.

These are only a few of the points the supreme court must examine to decide upon Miss Hyatt's claim fo $100,000 damages. The complaint is further complicated by her charges that Miss Knapp was allowed to enter the contest three days after the entries were closed, and agreed to accept $300 as first prize instead of the $1,000 promised in the advertising.

Summons were served on the promoters of the show and its judges, as well as on Miss Knapp.

The process server was a husky by the name of McCue, but he said he had a tough time of it when he pushed his way into an executive meeting of the officers of the MacFadden publication, Inc., publishers of Physical Culture magazine and promoters of the beauty contest.

They threw him into the hall with a grand physical slam. he complained to counsel for Miss Hyatt.

Miss Hyatt says she lost a 50-week stage contract at $2,000 a week, which depended on her winning the title of American Venus.

ANTS FLEE BEFORE TARTIC BARRAGE.

A small amount of moistened tartar emetic and powdered sugar in equa lparts will drive ants away if placed near their haunts. The mixture should not be thrown out when no longer required, but should be set aside for another emergency. Add a little water and the mixture can be used as before. Care should be taken to keep it out of the reach of little children.

PHYSICIAN DEMANDS $3,600 FOR SERVICES

Mrs. Konkle, following the advice of Dr. Page, underwent an operation for stomach trouble in December, 1921. His services include professional visits to her while she was in the hospital after the operation. Konkle testified that Dr. Page asked $100 for his services, and he paid that bill, receiving a receipt "in full settlement." He also testified that he paid $1,490 "for nursing and boarding" at the hospital for his wife. Mrs. Konkle denied that Dr. Page rendered her any service while she was at the hospital. He did not perform the operation.

Replying to questions by counsel for Dr. Page, Konkle denied that he ever represented himself to Dr. Page as a janitor of an apartment house or gave the physician the impression that he was in poverty. Dr. Page said that Konkle declared he worked as a janitor of an apartment house and had an income of $1,000 a year from his "apartment house business." The physician later discovered that Konkle was part owner of three apartment houses. Konkle testified that his equity in the apartment houses was $25,000. He admitted that he collected the rents from the three buildings, which totaled $61,000 a year. Counsel for both sides will sum up today.

COLLEGE GIRLS: LOOK! HE DOESN'T LIKE YOU!

He Says the Meanest Things—Read 'Em Yourself.

NEW YORK, Dec. 1.—The campaign committee of Adelphi College, Brooklyn, which has been asking subscriptions for a new building, has become thoroughly convinced that Alonzo B. See, of Brooklyn, president of an elevator company, does not care to contribute to their fund.

"If I had my way," Mr. See wrote in answer to a request for a contribution, "I would burn all the women's colleges in the country. The young women of our country do not need to be educated. The education they need is to leave off smoking cigarettes, stop using slang, stop their swaggering, give up their bold and brazen manners, their paint, their powder, their lip sticks and their high heeled shoes, and to cease to dress indecently.

"Of all the fool things in the world, the college for women is the worst. When they graduate, they can not write a decent hand; they know nothing of the English language; they have had their minds twisted with psychology, logic and philosophy, and a lot of other stuff.

"Nothing could be better for the girls now in colleges than to be taken out, and put to hard manual labor for a year or so, so there might be put into their heads a little trace of sense."

RUTH CAMERON SAYS SOME PEOPLE TIRE HER

A Timely Talk on Grouchers, Play Grounds and Boy Scouts.

Ruth Cameron in the Hamilton Spectator says some people make her tired. And then she continues: (Of course, I know I probably have the same effect on some people.)

The particular some people I am thinking of to-day are the people who find some small evil in some big good, and go about planning the good because of that inevitable modicum of evil.

I won't blame you if you refuse to believe what I am going to say next. It is true, but so incredible, that I am hardly sure I believe it myself.

A man once wrote me asking me to say something in condemnation of the scout movement!

Yes, actually!

Behind a Million Ears.

Asked me to condemn the movement that has made millions of boys wash behind their ears when no argument on mothers' or fathers' part could push the water line back that far.

Asked me to condemn the movement that has made millions of boys believe that cleanliness of mind and body and speech, instead of the reverse, is manly.

Asked me to condemn the movement that has taught boys all the fine helpful joys of woodcraft.

Asked me to condemn the movement that has stood for manners and chivalry and good citizenship and honor and integrity, and yet managed not to frighten away with fear or piety or priggishness that shyest of all creatures where such things are concerned—the growing boy.

I don't believe there are many people in the world—no rulers, nor inventors, nor statesmen—whose labors will bear any more good for the human race than the labors and visions of those who founded the boy scout movement.

That's my condemnation of the boy scout movement.

Play Grounds, Too!

And just the other day I was asked to write against playgrounds because the writer who lived next door to one had seen some unfortunate things take place for lack of proper supervision. If there had been no playgrounds she would doubtless not have seen whatever it was that took place because it would have taken place on a vacant lot or a dark alley. And probably such things would have taken place ten times as often because where there is a lack of healthy happy normal amusements such as the palyground supplies, the void is filled in some less desirable way.

Just Want To Be Different.

I suspect that in this particular case the fact that she lived next door to the playground supplied some of her normal indignation.

But in most of the cases where people shut their eyes to a big, good and inveigh against a minor evil I should say it was a case of moral antigmatism. Or perhaps just of wanting to be different and not approve of things others approve of.

Some people make me tired.

And even if I do have the same effect on them I don't seem to care very much.

WRITES IN DEFENCE POOR DUMB ANIMALS

Takes Exception to Farmer's Method of Killing a Wolf.

Dear Jeanette:—

In defence of poor dumb animals, I wish to voice a sincere protest against the way in which some poor trapped creatures are made to suffer. I read of an instance where a farmer had killed a wolf with his bare hands. Oh he was very brave all right (I don't think). This man visited his trap and discovered he had caught a wolf, nipped by one leg. Then to the delight of his friends he accepts their challenge to go in and fight this wolf to a finish with his bare hands.

Just imagine this man circling around this poor wolf (who hasn't got a chance from the start.) Suddenly this man springs through the air and lands on the animal's back, and the "fight" was on. Finally he succeeds in choking the animal to death. What chance did the poor wolf have to defend himself? It certainly must have torn its trapped leg to pieces before it was finally killed, as they must have fought some considerable time before it was over, as this man apparently was exhausted at the finish. Most likely this man's friends engaged the attention of this poor wolf while he sneaked up behind it. I can't see where he was so very brave. H.I.P.

HOW TO DECORATE THE WALLS AND CEILINGS

Beauty of a Room Depends Largely Upon Wise Choice of Finish.

Much of the beauty of a room depends upon the wise choice and correct application of the finish of the ceiling, walls and floor.

As the vertical surfaces of the walls are in direct line of vision, and so are more conspicious than either ceiling or floor, they should be treated with a special regard for beauty, and at the same time should form an unobstructive background.

The commonly used finishes for walls and ceilings are Alabastine and Muresco, flat paint, gloss paint, enamel and paper. All are capable of producing artistic results, and each has its special advantages.

The floor, walls and ceiling together constitute the background of a room; these must not be too intense in hue, too conspicuous in pattern or wrong in color, so that the furniture will show up against a carefully subdued background.

The three divisions of the background should follow nature's order, from dark below to light above, the walls representing the middle value.

Soft tones of cream, buff, gray or tan are the safest choice, or a gray green for a very sunny room. Blue and blue gray are cold, depressing colors; they are hard to handle successfully, and the home decorator should employ them only in combination with tan, yellow, orange putty or taupe colors and then use great discrimination.

In deciding whether to have the walls plain or figured, the function of the room must be considered. In a living room, where the family requirements often result in overcrowding, plain walls are imperative. This is also the case in small rooms whose wall space are badly cut up with doors and windows and in such rooms it will be advisable to finish the woodwork in the same tone and often the same color, as the woodwork is really part of the background and a strong contrast is undesirable.

In large rooms plain walls are apt to prove monotonous and panels or patterns will be advisable, especially if there are no pictures to be hung. The pattern should not be too obvious, but just prominent enough to suggest a pleasing irregularity of surface which can be obtained in many of the modern two-toned wall papers. In a bedroom the use of striking wall papers will destroy the atmosphere of restfulness so necessary; there are many striped and all-over patterns in delicate pastel tints which would form a sufficiently unobstructive background.

A WISH AND A REALITY.

I wish I were a sylph, a fairy creature;
A dainty lady, winsome and petite,
A woman whom at birth the waiting angels
Had laid all gifts and graces at her feet.

I wish that I were gifted, and a genius
That I could sway the multitude with speech,
That from my pen flowed words of rarest wisdom,
That all my aims in life were in my reach.

To have my every want anticipated,
To have my home in noiseless working gear,
To feel that life had nothing more to offer,
And that the future had no cloud or fear.

But what are wishes? But a vain illusion!
I'm forty-five, and slow, and far from thin.
I cook and bake and scrub and mend unaided,
And now I go to drag the washing in. M. A. T.

Partnership of Mind and Body

MRS. THEODORE PARSONS

By Marian Hale

"The most important partnership in the world is that which every person forms for himself between his mind and body," says Mrs. Theodore Parsons, lecturer, teacher and author of a new book, "Making the Body Think".

"Neither physical nor mental education is adequate in itself, but the two must be correlated, so that mind and body co-operate and each contributes to the welfare of the other," she continues

"The book-worm who will not leave his books to take proper exercise, and the athlete who develops his muscles at the expense of his brain—neither of these types represents the efficient individual.

Lack Co-ordination

"When I started to teach dramatic art in one of our largest colleges I discovered that many of the girls who came to me to learn to act could not express themselves because they lacked the power of co-ordinating brain and muscle.

"Many did not know how to stand, sit, breathe or walk — how could they learn to act?

"So I evolved a system of scientific physical and mental exercises and in 16 years of work with my pupils I have demonstrated to myself and to the medical profession that the motor area of the brain is strengthened and educated by specific muscle exercises just as other areas of the brain are developed through mental work.

Waste of Energy

"To exercise merely for the sake of muscle is a waste of energy. Scientific exercise stimulates higher glandular efficiency and higher brain power."

The exercises Mrs. Parsons teaches have been demonstrated by women of 87 as well as girls of 16 before leading women's clubs through out the country.

"My method," she explained, "is to teach correct standing, walking and the finely poised movements of the body, including every possible complex motor expression; then to teach the influence of the mind upon the body. One of the gaps in our educational system is the lack of this very thing."

Secret of Youth

This gap, however, Mrs. Parsons hopes to bridge, for she plans a school of her own which will combine dramatic art and physical expression.

"The whole secret of keeping young, graceful, slender and beautiful is to keep the body fluid and release it from the immobility and in activity which ruin its expressiveness as well as its beauty."

Mrs. Parsons' first book, "Scientific Brain and Body Building," created something of a sensation when it appeared several years ago.

EAT VEGETABLES IF KIDNEYS HURT YOU

Take a Glass of Salts if your Back hurts or Bladder Bothers

The American men and women must guard constantly against Kidney trouble, because we eat often too much red meat and all our food is rich. Our blood is filled with uric acid which the kidneys strive to filter out; they weaken from overwork become sluggish, the eliminative tissues clog and result is kidney trouble, bladder weakness and a general decline in health.

When your kidneys feel like lumps of lead; your back hurts or the urine is cloudy, full of sediment, or you are obliged to seek relief two or three times during the night; if you suffer with sick headache, or dizzy nervous spells, acid stomach, or if you have rheumatism when the weather is bad, get from your pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys may then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to flush and stimulate clogged kidneys; to neutralize the acids in the urine so it no longer is a source of irritation, thus often ending bladder disorders.

Jad Salts is inexpensive; cannot injure, make a delightful effervescent lithia water beverage and belongs in every home, because nobody can make a mistake by having a good kidney flushing any time.

COUPLE WED AT SEA, MR. BRYAN ASSISTING.

Indiana Girl Goes to La Libertad to Meet Lover, But Insists on American Marriage.

BALTIMORE, Md., Dec. 2.—Romance was added to the voyage of passengers on the Pacific Mail liner Ecuador, which arrived here from the West Coast, when a marriage was performed aboard by Captain Thomas Fleming, as the vessel glided over the sunny seas off Central American coast.

The bride, Miss Helen D. Hitch of Indiana, was given in marriage to Godfrey J. Huber of Cincinnati by Willam Jennings Bryan, former Secretary of State who was a passenger aboard the vessel.

Miss Hitch boarded the Ecuador in San Francisco. Huber was employed in La Libertad by the Export and Import Board of Trade and was unable to come to this country for the wedding. So when the vessel reached San Salvador he was waiting at the pier.

The bride-to-be objected to being married on foreign soil. She would under no flag but that of the United States. Captain Fleming suggested that the Ecuador was American territory and the marriage could be performed there. So, as the vessel sailed from San Salvador, it was decided that the marriage would be held aboard her.

However, more problems confronted the couple. There was no marriage license. Then it was decided to seek the advice of William Jennings Bryan. He was ex-Secretary of State and should know whether a marriage could be performed without a license A conference was called and Mr. Bryan handed down the decision that a license was not necessary and that the marriage could proceed. Mr. Bryan was then appointed to give the bride away.

Early on the morning of Nov 11 Captan Fleming had his initial experience of tying the knot of matrimony. Afterward a banquet was given in honor of the newlyweds.

The romance had its beginning when the couple attended the University of Illinois.

Mr. Bryan boarded the Ecuador at Los Angeles, where, with Mrs. Bryan, he had been visiting his son and daughter. Passengers say that he livened up the voyage greatly, making short speeches at many of the dinners. He also showed his great love for grape jjuice. At many of the banquets held aboard the Ecuador certain beverages that Mr. Bryan had helped to make taboo in this country were served. Beside Mr. Bryan, however, there was a large bottle of grape juice. He left the vessel at Havana.

BETTER BROADCASTING.

This promise is made in view of a contemplated investigation of broadcasting throughout the country. The Chamber of Commerce is co-operating with Government officials and other interests involved in this general inquiry into the transmission of radio programs.

The aim is to bring about a systematic control of all broadcasting stations so that only the best in the form of lectures and concerts will be transmitted. At the same time, the stations are to be put on a schedule, especially in congested territory, so that they will not interfere with one another.

The result, is is expected, will be easier reception of broadcast programs and a greater appreciation of the concerts and lectures. The various firms conducting broadcasting stations have promised their co-operation toward the fulfillment of this purpose.

THE HALF-SPEED MAN

What It Means When You Feel Run Down and Out of Sorts.

You know what it means to feel "all out of sorts." Most people have felt this way at some time. Nerves out of order, irritable, languid, depressed. An aching head, appetite bad and digestion weak. With some people this condition comes and goes; with others it is chronic—they can't shake it off. It interferes with business, spoils recreation and robs life of all its joys. These men and women are only able to work at half-speed. The trouble is caused by poor, watery blood. You can improve your condition to-day by taking Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. These pills enrich and stimulate the blood, strengthen the nerves, and give you fresh vigour. Here is proof. Mr. William F. Bell, Bracebridge, Ont., says: "I have been recommending Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for a number of years, because of the benefit I got from their use. I was in a terribly run down condition. I was scarcely able to do anything all winter. To make things worse I took the mumps and caught cold, and as a result was confined to bed for six weeks, part of the time in a terrible fever. Of course I was doctoring, but instead of getting better I was growing weaker. At this time my father-in-law urged me to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills but I had lost faith in all medicine and refused. However, he had such faith in them that he bought me six boxes, and of course I could not refuse to take them. Now I am glad I did not I had not taken them long before I began to have faith in the pills my self. There was no doubt I was improving. Day by day my strength came back and I gained in weight from 115 to 146 pounds. Therefore, I feel that I cannot speak too highly of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills and I hope my experience will convince some other sufferer of the value of this medicine"

You can get these pills through any dealer in medicine or by mail postpaid at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

AUTO NOTES.

Seventy per cent. of the cars produced sell at less than $1,000 each.

Ten per cent. of the cars produced in the last year were trucks.

Thirty per cent. of the automobiles produced this year were enclosed cars.

Cars of seven nations will be exhibited at the New York motor salon, between December 3 and 9.

Forty per cent. of automobiles stolen in 28 "index" cities in 1921 have not been recovered.

Law regulating slow driving is being planned for passage in Oregon.

Canadian customs officials report a 600 per cent increase of motor traffic into Canada

OVERBLOUSE.

The overblouse, with its tight hip band, is growing steadily in favor. While velvet is favored for the moment, certain of the shops are anticipating spring by showing very smart blouses in white crepe de chine and the better qualities of china silk. The overblouse it is asserted, will be the accepted thing for sports wear.

FUEL FROM CORN COBS

Corn cobs may become a new source for automobile fuel. Dr. Frederick B. La Forge and Gerald H. Haines of the Bureau of Chemistry of the U. S. Department of Agriculture, are credited with having perfected a method of obtaining fur-fural from corn cobs, to be used as motor fuel and for other purposes.

ARE DRINKING LESS THAN BEFORE WAR.

Champagnes and Wines Find No Ready Sales in London.

LONDON, Dec. 2.—(Associated Press)—London markets have been flooded recently by large shipments of champagnes and wines from France and Spain which, however, find no ready sale here. The wine shops of England are already overstocked with pre-war vintages which the merchants are unable to dispose of. Most of these stocks were purchased during the war, or just after, and at high prices, with the result that the dealers are unwilling to lose their profit in order to get rid of the stocks.

Light wines, which includes clarets, sauternes and barsacs, are selling for an average of four shillings six pence (about one dollar) a quart, as compared with two and three shillings before the war, and the heavier wines are bringing more than double their former prices. Champagnes cost about one pound sterling a quart at the present time, but vary widely according to the vintage.

The new stock being offered by the wine growing nations may be purchased at prices which are even lower than those which prevailed before the war.

Consumption of wine in the British Isles, to increase the difficulties of the dealers, has dropped to almost half of what it was in 1913. Hotels and restaurants complain of the slump, and wine lists noawadays contain only the most popular brands, and these are called for only sparingly.

The troubles of the wine brokers, however, do not extend to the whiskey manufacturers. Despite the loss of a considerable export trade to the United States, the distilleries have increased their output and a ready market awaits the product. In many of the more popular brands the retail dealers are unable to keep a supply on hand, and the mail order business of the distiller had doubled within the last two years.

The price of whiskey is higher than ever before, twelve shillings ($2.50) a quart being asked for the best grades.

Fashion Hints

FOR THE WEEK END.

A little sewing case of leather, which may be readily tucked into the traveling bag, makes a worthwhile gift for the woman who is popular at week-end parties.

FOR DANCING.

Shimmering satin crepes will continue to be used for dancing frocks throughout the winter. Favored colors for evening are flame, geranium, peach, lemon yellow and almond green. White also is in high favor.

BOUDOIR CAP.

A perky little boudoir cap may be fashioned easily of organdie with an upstanding cuff across the front of silvercloth.

YOUTHFUL APRON

For the youngster who likes to borrow a bit of pie crust and perform her own experiments in the kitchen, black sateen will make a serviceable apron. Flowers cut from bright-colored chintz are appliqued to form diminutive pockets.

HANDKERCHIEF COLLARS

The handkerchief collar, which first found favor in Paris, continues to add charm to many fetching blouses. It is of white bordered crepe de chine or in many instances it may look for all the world like a carelessly knotted gay bandanna.

FULL SKIRTS.

Jennie Lanvin is making many very long, very full skirted gowns. One of her most lovely models is of white taffeta with five ruffles on the bottom of the skirt, each one edged with black velvet. A huge taffeta flower with black velvet leaves makes the corsage.

FOR SPORTS WEAR.

Smart sport blouses are made of striped or figured Shantung with mannish turnover collars and turnback cuffs. The patterns are usually dark on a white background, giving a clear contrast.

CORNS

Lift Off with Fingers

Doesn't hurt a bit. Drop a little "Freezone" on an aching corn, instantly that corn stops hurting, then shortly you lift it right off with fingers. Truly!

Your druggist sells a tiny bottle of "Freezone" for a few cents, sufficient to remove every hard corn, soft corn, or corn between the toes and the calluses, without soreness or irritation.

RECIPES

OYSTER SOUP.

(By Bertha E. Shapleigh, of Columbia University.)

One quart or 4 dozen oysters, one slice of lemon, one sprig parsley, half-cup celery, quarter-cup flour, three tablespoons lard or butter, one teaspoon salt, one-eighth teaspoon pepper, few gratings of nutmeg, and two cups rich milk or cream.

Pick over, to free from shell, the oysters, and then chop them finely. Add one cup of cold water and cook twenty minutes, having kettle closely covered. Strain through a fine strainer and cook with the onion, celery, parsley, and flour, which have cooked in the lard, until slightly brown. When thickened add salt, pepper, nutmeg, and cream. Bring to boiling point, season more to the taste, and serve.

BERWICK SPONGE CAKE.

By Bertha E. Shapleigh
Of Columbia University.

The following recipe is from a collection of recipes in the possession of an elderly woman who has lived her life in Berwick, Me.

She says this recipe is reliable or to quote her: 'It never fails if directions are followed."

Beat three eggs, whites and yolks together, two minutes. Add one and half cups sugar. Beat five minutes.

Mix two level teaspoons cream tartar with one cup flour. Beat into cake two minutes.

Dissolve one level teaspoon soda in one-half cup cold water. Add to cake mixture and beat one minute.

Finally add another cup of flour mixed with one-half teaspoon salt and beat one minute.

Then add the juice and grated rind of half a lemon. Bake 30 minutes in moderately hot oven.

NUT AND FRUIT SALAD

By Bertha E. Shapleigh
Of Columbia University

3 tart apples.
1 cup pineapple dice
1 cup celery
1 cup Brazil nuts
2 canned pimientos
1 head lettuce
1-2 cup mayonnaise or cooked dressing
1-2 cup cream, beaten until stiff

Pare, core and cut apples in small, thin slices. Clean and cut the celery in thin slices.

Slice the nuts and cut the pimientos in small dice.

Mix all with a little mayonnaise. Season to taste, adding a small amount of lemon juice if needed.

Wash and dry the lettuce leaves and arrange in salad bowl. Place the fruits and nuts in center.

Garnish top with the remainder of mayonnaise mixed with the stiffly beaten cream. If desired the pimientos may be cut in strips and used to garnish the salad.

SOUTHERN SWEET POTATOES

By Bertha E. Shapleigh
Of Columbia University.

6 medium sized sweet potatoes
6 tablespoons butter
1-2 cup brown sugar
1-2 teaspoon salt
1-8 teaspoon cinanmon
1-4 cup cold water

Wash, pare and cut potatoes into strips lengthwise for French fried potatoes.

In a casserole or earthen baking dish place a layer of potatoes, cover with bits of butter and brown sugar; repeat until the potatoes, butter and sugar have been used.

Mix salt and cinnamon with the water and pour over the potatoes. Cover and bake slowly two hours, basting frequently with the liquid in dish.

CRANBERRIES

By Bertha E. Shapleigh
of Columbia University

1 quarte cranberries (2 pounds)
1 pint sugar 1 cup water

Pick over and wash cranberries; place in an enamel or porcelain kettle with sugar and water. Cover and cook 15 minutes. Turn into molds or mold and let cool.

Cranberires cooked in this way may be eaten without straining, the skins being very tender. This mixture always jellies.

For frozen cranberries strain the mixture, pour into freezer and freeze to a mush as you do ice cream. Served in glasses it makes a good accompaniment to chicken or turkey

IF YOU ARE WELL BRED

If a married woman you will not assume on your cards the honorary title of your husband, be he doctor, judge or general. A professional woman however, may use her own title. In this case, if married, she drops her husband's Christian name and signs herself thus: Ada M. Hudson, M. D.

New System of Fat Reduction

Here's a new way for all fat people to laugh together at that old bugaboo—Obesity. The saying that there is nothing new under the sun does not now apply to fat people any more. Here is something new for them—a new sensation, a new pleasure, a new and graceful figure, easily found by anyone who is passing beyond the limits of slimness. Everyone has heard of the Marmola Prescription; that harmless combination of fat-defying elements perfected by one of the foremost physicians. Now from the same high authority there comes another idea — the idea of condensing these same pure, harmless, ingredients into a pleasant little tablet. Taken after eating and at bedtime they help the stomach to dispose of all fatty foods, converting them into compact, solid flesh, muscle and energy, without dieting or exercise. Marmola Prescription Tablets regulate the entire system—do for you what bodily exertion and self denial can not do, and the fat, once routed, is gone for good. You can prove all this at a trifling cost. Marmola Prescription Tablets are sold by all druggists or sent postpaid by the Marmola Company, 4612 Woodward Avenue, Detroit, Mich. A case—sufficient to bring results—is but one dollar.

MARRIAGE A LA MODE

A Turkish marriage ceremony begins on Monday. On Thursday the bride and bridegroom have supper together. The hour of the meal, however, depends upon the shyness or the obstinacy of the bride, custom having decreed that the meal cannot be served until she shall have spoken to the bridgeroom.

Experienced matrons recommend coyness to oriental brides and the latters' husbands therefore frequently have to resort to strategy in order to hasten the supper hour.

SOFA PILLOWS.

Very attractive sofa pillows are made of black taffeta with Chinese embroideries or bits of old handwoven fabrics appliqued or in geometrical patterns.

She First Jailed, Then Married Her Fierce Cave-Man Lover

Imagine Being Forcibly Abducted at Pistol's Point by a Rejected Suitor, Rescued by Detectives and Then Changing Your Mind, Just Like Pretty Mabel Did!

Charles Lindsay Whose Stone-Age Love Tactics Cost Him His Liberty and Won Him the Girl He Attempted to Carry Off.

THE romance of Mabel Sandberg and Charlie Lindsay is as full of thrills as the Milky Way is full of stars. He wooed her with a gun. She had him arrested. He served seventeen months in the reformatory. When he got out Mabel kissed him. And then—but hear the whole story.

You wouldn't think Charlie was a caveman, just to look at him. He was an aviator in the war and all that, but he wears a two-button suit and a soft collar and a Panama hat, and he hasn't got a bit more eyebrows than the average young fellow of twenty-six. You never would imagine he had Neanderthal tendencies in courting.

You wouldn't think Mabel had advanced ideas about love, either. She doesn't appear to be the sort of girl who would keep a suitor waiting an entire year for his answer—in jail at that. Mabel is pretty enough not to resort to such drastic love tests to find out if a fellow really means what he says.

Nor would you suppose such dramatic things as six-shooter elopements could take place in peaceful Jamaica, Long Island. But it just goes to show you never can tell your man or your girl or your town. These Charlies can be rough as all get-out sometimes. These Mabels can switch their emotions like regular Cleopatras. And these Jamaicas frequently are as exciting as Paris on Armistice Day.

Here was Mabel, nineteen years old, a stenographer and a contractor's daughter, going to work mornings and staying home nights, and only now and then walking out with Charlie, who was a nice boy but by no means running first on the inside track to Mabel's heart.

And here was Charlie, with a good job and enough money saved to pay a month's rent and the first installment on the furniture; here was Charlie, heels over his Panama hat in love with Mabel, and sure, if she didn't marry him right away, life would be nothing but a total loss.

Charlie tried persuasion and Charlie tried pleading, but he didn't seem to have the right combination to Mabel's "yes." Charlie had heard that some women like a masterful man. So he went home and polished up the old revolver, and the next time he had a "date" with Mabel he stuck it in his hip-pocket. And when they had strolled a few blocks from Mabel's house Charlie stuck the gun in Mabel's face and said, "Marry me!"

Mabel has never said whether she was thrilled or peeved or scared by this sudden transformation of Charlie into a caveman. But presumably she was scared, because she trotted along with Charlie to the railroad station. And presumably she was peeved, because she took steps right there to smash Charlie's little plan to dodge over to Newark and make her Mrs. Lindsay.

"When Charlie, in his two-button suit and his Panama, walked out of prison, a man and a girl met him. The girl was Mabel, and she put her arms around Charlie's neck and said: 'I'm so sorry, dear!'"

Mabel didn't do anything so obvious and crude as to scream and cause a scene. She said, "Excuse me, Charlie, I can't get married without powdering my nose," and she slipped into the rest-room at the Jamaica station and dropped a nickel in the telephone slot and called up home.

"Charlie's kidnapping me," Mabel told her father. "Yes, he's got a gun and everything, and he's hauling me off to Newark." So Mabel's father dashed straight to the railroad station, missing the pair by a few minutes, and had the chief of police of Newark on the telephone a few seconds later and told him all about it.

When Charlie stepped off the train in Newark, congratulating himself on his discovery that the way to win a woman is to treat her rough, he stepped into the arms of two policemen. The policemen sent Mabel back home and took Charlie before a New Jersey judge on a charge of pistol-toting.

"Seventeen months for you," said the judge, and Charlie woke up from his cave-love dream in a cell at the Rahway Reformatory on the first day of a long, long "stretch."

All that was in January, 1921. Years passed, as they say in the best-sellers—or, if not years, then a year and five months. The record does not show just what Charlie's and Mabel's thoughts were during this period, but judging by after developments they were something like this:

Charlie: "The place to be a caveman is in the wilderness. What chance has a caveman got in New Jersey? Not a snowball's! I wish I could see Mabel—the little witch! She certainly put one over on me. If I ever get out of here and she'll have me I'll be tame for life."

Mabel: "Well, I guess I showed him he can't treat me any old way! I guess I—but I wish I hadn't! I didn't know they were going to send him to jail. I didn't know they gave 'em seventeen months for a little thing like trying to marry a girl with a pistol. He was so cute about it, too. I didn't know Charlie had that much gumption. He'd make a peach of a husband. I wish"——

So Mabel went to Daddy Sandberg and asked him to get Charlie out. And Daddy Sandberg, bewildered but willing to do anything to make Mabel happy, went over to Newark to see the chief of police and the judge. And the authorities just looked at Daddy Sandberg and said, in effect, "Where do you get that stuff? Jersey justice must take its course."

Mabel Sandberg, Now the Bride of Charles Lindsay, Her Cave-Man Lover, After Waiting Seventeen Months to Prove to Him She Was Sorry.

So Jersey justice did take its course and Charlie served his time. He languished inside and Mabel languished outside, and if there is anything in this "absence makes the heart grow fonder" hokum, it certainly was true in the case of Mabel and Charlie.

Charlie didn't get bitter and bitterer, as some chaps might have done if their girls had sent them to jail for wanting to marry them a bit too violently. He grew fonder of Mabel all the time. And Mabel didn't go off and forget Charlie, as many girls do when their sweeties are away for a week-end, let alone for a year and five months. She grew fonder and fonder-er of Charlie. We come now to the dramatic climax when Charlie was released from his Jersey prison.

The Long Island police were "laying" for Charlie. Perhaps they told themselves that these New Jersey fellows couldn't enforce the law a bit better than they could. Perhaps they were a bit grumpy because Charlie had got away with his stuff in Jamaica, but couldn't do it on the other side of Manhattan Island.

When Charlie, in his two-button suit and his Panama, walked out of prison, a man and a girl met him. The girl was Mabel, and she put her arms around Charlie's neck and said, "I'm so sorry, dear!" The man was a policeman, and he simply tapped Charlie on the shoulder and said, "Come along with me, young feller."

"What's this?" demanded Charlie.

"You're charged with abduction," said the policeman. "The charge was made a long time ago, but it still holds good. We've just been waitin' for you to get out, young feller."

"But I made this charge and I want to take it back now," protested Mabel. "I was mad then, but I'm not mad any more!"

"Tell it to the judge," said the policeman.

And to the court they all went—Mabel and Charlie and the policeman and Mabel's father, who was still more or less bewildered and willing to do whatever Mabel wanted—prosecute if Mabel said so, or withdraw the charge if Mabel said so, and give the couple his blessing.

Charlie put his arm around Mabel's waist when they got into court. He admitted he had abducted Mabel back there in 1921, and if Mabel said so he'd go to jail for seven more years. But he didn't feel like a caveman now. He just wanted Mabel—that was all. And Mabel put her arms around Charlie and she said, "Judge, I wasn't sure I loved him then, but I love him now and I think we'll get married in about two weeks if Charlie doesn't have to go to jail again."

So the judge told Charlie to check his gun and lose the ticket and take good care of Mabel ever after. And that's what he's going to do, declares Charlie. They were married in Newark by the Rev. M. F. Fitzgerald, a Methodist minister, and went to Florida on a honeymoon.

"She was worth waiting for—even in jail," says Charlie.

"You crazy old caveman!" says Mabel.

Major-Minor League War May Develop Over Draft

Some Interesting Things Are Expected to Happen When the Baseball Ma gnates Get Together—Ban Johnson is After Com missioner Landis' Hide.

By HENRY L. FARRELL.
(United Press Sports Editor)

NEW YORK, Dec. 2.—(United Press)—Once again the draft will be one of the big issues when the major league owners and the minor league magnates get together in their annual winter sessions.

Naturally the major league owners want to get the pick for $7,500 at the close of each season and obviously the little fellows want to get $175,-000 if their product is high class.

That is the whole argument in the draft.

The Pacific Coast League, the American Association and the International League have been able to defeat all the moves made by the majors to force them to agree to a modified form of the draft.

As far as the Pacific Coast League is concerned, it already has voted against any restoration of the draft. In the past two years, the Coast magnates have been paid close to a half-million dollars for players and they want to continue having an open market for their players.

The American Association is not as vitally interested, excepting in the moral effect that it might have in holding up the prestige of the minors. The association hasn't been developing players for several years.

Since Jack Dunn has agreed to and has started breaking up his powerful Baltimore Club, the International League may not desert the ranks of the anti-drafts, as was threatened last summer.

Peeved because of the slump in business caused by Baltimore's annual feat of running away with the pennant, the league met in special session and warned Dunn if he didn't berak up the team, they would vote to restore the draft.

Baltimore has sold Bentley to the Giants but the other stars are still in the fold and if Dunn doesn't show that he has plans for disposing of them, the International probably will pull away from the "Big Three."

Unless Commissioner Landis has developed plans for an amicable settlement of the controversy, a major-minor war may develop at the meetings.

Charley Ebbets, the owner of the Brooklyn club, who would like to have the price reduced to $7.50 instead of $750, wanted the majors to boycott the minors last year, but it was learned that some of the magnates feared they would have to class Ebbets' team as one of the minors and they wanted to retain his friendship.

Ban Johnson, the American League president, has been doing a lot of talking out in the west about bombs that he is going to throw, etc. Perhaps he has a piece of H. E. that will blast the minors out of their dugouts.

Johnson's campaign, however, seems to be against Commissioner Landis and if they ever do go to it in the opening it will be an interesting bout to watch.

Johnson, no doubt, could recruit some allies among the American League club owners if he went out "to get" Landis, but he wouldn't get much help among the National League magnates.

The American League boss is still said to be suffering form the wounds sustained when Commissioner Landis had the audacity to hold up the purse for the tiegame of the world's series and dispose of it without saying a word to him or John Heydler, the National League prexy.

BATTLING "SIKI" TO FIGHT AGAIN

French Federation Says He May Have His License Back After Nine Months' Good Behaviour.

PARIS, December 2 (Canadian Press). — Battling Siki, who won the world's light-heavyweight boxing championship from Georges Carpentier, but recently lost it, and also was denied the privilege of fighting by the ruling of the French Boxing Federation because of alleged unseemly conduct, may have a new license to box "afer nine months of good behaviour."

This information is contained in a letter sent by the Federation to Henry Pate, Under-Secretary of State for Physical Culture.

The letter was written in consequence of the debate in the Chamber of Deputies on Thursday, when the Senegalese Deputy, Diagne, attempted to have an appropriation for physical education reduced because of the action of the Federation in penalising Siki.

Diagne's motion was defeated by a vote of 408 to 136.

METAL AND LACE

The indubitable stiffness of metal cloth may be softened if the cloth is combined with chiffon, lace or embroidered net. Paris importations are showing such combinations in which the effect of the metal cloth is visible enchanced.

BOWLERS LOST BY A NARROW MARGIN.

In spite of a spectacular rally in the ninth inning which netted them four runs the Lawn Bowlers were not able to overcome the lead piled up by the Gunners and were defeated by a score of 9 to 8. in a Soft Ball game last evening. When Maynard, the last man, was retired Fox was on the runways with the run that might have tied the score—but close doesn't count—and the Gunners having scored one run in the eighth had just enough, so it was unnecessary for them to go to bat in their half of the ninth.

The players were:

Bowlers—Gilliam 2b, Curvin c, Ross. ss, Heindry ss, T. McArthur 1b, Martin 3b, Fox p, Maynard lf, J. McArthur rf.

Score by innings:

Gunners .. ....0 0 1 4 0 2 2 0 0—9

KIWANIANS LOST TO THE KNIGHTS.

Seven come eleven. Kiwanis took seven but Caseys rolled eleven in the Soft Ball game at the Armoury last night. For the first six innings the Kiwanians went out with surprising regularity almost as fast as they went to bat, while the K. of C. nine romped home with all of their eleven tallies.

In the last three frames the Kiwanis team came on strong. They held their opponents scoreless and almost started to look dangerous when they scored three runs in the eighth and followed that exhibition with four more in the ninth. However, their rally was nipped short before they got within striking distance of victory.

The players were:

K. of C.—Primeau ss, M. Sheehy 1b, O'Hern c, Rose ss, Murphy p, R. Sheehy 3b, Wolfe 2b, Rutherford rf, Sharpe lf.

Score by innings:

WILL PRESENT THE ROAD RACE PRIZES.

Dr. A. W. McPherson.

Dr. A. W. McPherson, president of the P.A.A.A. will present the prizes for the Examiner Road race and the City Track Championships at the Capitol Theatre on Monday evening. Instead of presenting the prizes between the acts as was originally intended they will be given out immediately after the show and patrons will be asked to wait a few miuutes for the occasion.

The prize winners are requested to be at the theatre not later than 7:45 and the committee will make arrangements to have them seated in a convenient place.

Two of the cups for the City Championship events have not yet been returned and the holders are asked to turn them in at the Y.M.C.A. not later than this evening.

PADDOCK'S TIME IS UNDER DISPUTE

A. A. U. Has Thrown Out the "Miracle Records" As Impossible.

A "ten second" sprinter, one who covers one hundred yards in ten seconds, negogiates ten yards in one second, and two yards in one-fifth of a second.

Upon this basis, the A.A.U. has rightfully thrown out the miracle records attributed to the Pacific Coast flier, Charley Paddock, hailed as the "world's fastest human." Paddock is credited with doing 75 yards in 7 3-5 seconds and 80 yards in 7 4-5 seconds. The 7 3-5 mark is mighty fast, but not impossible. The 7 4-5 stuff looks ridiculous, as it credits Paddock with having covered five yards in one-fifth of a second. A man running a hundred in 9 3-5 seconds is doing better than two yards in a fifth of a second in the last great effort of his race, but to have obtained that speed between 75 and 80 yards is open to read doubt. In the race in which Paddock is quoted as having made the record marks claimed, he only defeated Kirskey by a few inches, and no one in the West believes Kirskey to be better than a ten second performer.

In view of the dispute over the timing in the race, it is unfortunate that Paddock, who is undoubtedly a great sprinter, was among the missing at the United States championships at Newark last fall. Since the timing on the Coast has been questioned, and since the records in Hawaii have been seriously attacked, it might be better for Paddock's future if he had gone to Newark and cleared up the mystery as to his real speed.

Analysis of fractional times purported to have been snapped during his record breaking races indicates "somebody lied," or was very badly mistaken.

The maxim that nobody could renounce his nationality was the common law of most countries until very recently, the necessity which arose n the United States of assim ilating aliens, when the tide of immigration set in her direction, having led finally to a general recognition of naturalization.

BELLEVILLE CHAMPIONS GUESTS OF HONOR AT AN ENJOYABLE BANQUET

Grand Trunks Receive the Johnston Cup and Other Gifts and Are Overwhelmed With Congratulations—O.B.A.A. Greetings Presented.

A SPLENDID SUCCESS.

The Belleville Grand Trunk team, champions of the Central Ontario Baseball League, and runners up for the senior championship of the province, were the guests of honor at a most enjoyable banquet tendered to them by the Belleville Amateur Athletic Association, at the Hotel Quinte, Belleville, last night. All the Central Ontario League Clubs were represented, and the gathering was featured by the presence of Mr. M. B. Dulmage of Guelph, the popular secretary of the O.B.A.A., whose talk on baseball matters was one of the most enjoyable items on a most interesting programme. The Belleville team were showered with congratulations and also with gifts, being presented during the evening with the Johnston Cup, the Central Ontario League pennant, the medals presented by the Spalding Company, free skating tickets from the Belleville Arena, and handsome club bags the latter presentation coming from the citizens of Belleville. It was a notable occasion and a splendid spirit of sportsmanship was in evidence.

Mr. Morley P. Duff, the president of the Belleville Club, was a very efficient toast master.

Rev. D. C. Ramsay, after the many good things provided had been done ample justice to, gracefully extended a hearty welcome, on behalf of the Belleville club, to the representatives of the Central Ontario and O. B.A.A. executive in attendance. In doing so he pointed out the wonderful interest taken in baseball during the past summer.

Mr. G. O. Patterson, representing the Bowmanville club, the babies of the Central League, as he termed them, made a neat reply on behalf of the attending representatives.

In the absence of the donor, Mr. Arthur Johnston of Peterboro, the honor of presenting the Johnston Cup, emblematic of the Central Ontario championship, devolved upon Mr. Jake Solomon, of Peterboro, who was greeted with "He's a Jolly Good Fellow," and three cheers and a tiger when he rose to speak.

Mr. Solomon expressed the hearty congratulations of the Peterboro club to Belleville upon having won the trophy twice in the four years existenee of the league. Peterboro and Belleville were deadly rivals on the diamond, but off the field they were friends, and they respected each other. In presenting the cup to Manager Walter Gerow, the Belleville manager, the speaker warned Belleville to look out for Peterboro next year.

Trainmaster North replied on behalf of the Belleville team, expressing apreciation of the attendance of so many of the represcntatives of the Central League to do honor to the champions.

The League Pennant

Mr. M. J. Dedman of Lindsay, the vice-president of the Central League presented the Belleville team with a handsome League pennant. In doing so he said that while he would prefer seeing it flying from a Lindsay flagpole he had much pleasure in congratulating Belleville upon their showing. The pennant was clean, as had been the Belleville team during the season.

Catcher Billy Mills, the Belleville captain, received the pennant on behalf of the champions, and took advantage of the opportunity to warn Peterboro they would have a hard job getting it away next year.

Mr. E. Barnes, of Cobourg, then presented the Spalding medals to the following players: W. Gerow, W. Mills, J. H. Williams, Ray Mallen, Harry Mills, A. Meagher, Vernon Weir, J. K. Williams, S. Hagerman, W. Ross, J. Casey and A. Weir.

O.B.A.A. Greetings.

Secretary Mark Dulmage, of the O.B.A.A., who was given a great reception, extended his heartiest congratulations, not only as an O.B. A.A. official, but as an old Belleville boy, to the Grand Trunk team. The series with Galt, he said, had been wonderful baseball, and it was only a case of the breaks going against them that had decided the issue against Belleville.

The O.B.A.A. regarded the Central Ontario League as one of the bulwarks of the organization, and he urged the teams to get behind the O.B.A.A. residence rule and see that it was adopted. Mr. Dulmage made a strong plea for the development of the home players, and declared that importation of baseball talent was a profitless transaction. The teams that won the Junior, Intermediate and Senior series of the O.B.A.A. this year were, he pointed out, without exception, composed of home brew players, and that was a strong argument in favor of encouraging the home talent. He urged the teams to pay attention to the development of their Junior teams, and declared that the time was not far off when the O.B.A.A. would insist that every club operating a Senior team would be compelled to also carry a Junior team.

Secretary Dulmage urged the players to remember that the honor of playing on a winning team and of playing within the spirit of the rules, was worth more than the few paltry dollars made by players who wanted money for their services. The "amateur" who accepted money was dishonest, and if dishonest in support, would very likely be dishonest in other things. The O. B. A. A. were determined to drive the pretended amateur out of amateur baseball, and if a player thought he ought to be paid for playing ball he had better quit the game or get into professional baseball.

It was a straightforward and helpful address that made a deep impression upon everybody who heard it.

Congratulations were heaped upon the Belleville club by representatives of the different clubs present. Messrs. A. E. Wilson for Bowmanville, W. Henderson for Leaside, Ford Moynes for Lindsay and F. D. Craig for Peterborough, bringing greetings from their respective organizations.

Mack Robertson, Gordon Moffatt and that prince of rooters Norman (Slats) Kerr, added words of appreciation on behalf of the Belleville fans and Mayor Charles Hanna expressed the thanks of the citizens to the Belleville team, at the same time presenting them with skating tickets and club bags.

During the evening a male quartette was heard to great advantage, Mr. Chas. Dolan recited his "Connie at the Bat" version of the famous "Casey" baseball tragedy, and Mr. Sandy Burrows led in community singing.

For Peterborough people, the remark of Chairman Duff, thanking the citizens of Peterborough for the splendid support given the Belleville team in their game with the Hillcrests was of particular inferest.

Last night's banquet was a fitting climax to the Belleville club's successful season and the committee in charge are to be congratulated.

MEXICO OBJECTS TO A CERTAIN CLASS FILMS

"Mexican Bad Man" in Pictures To Be Barred From Country.

MEXICO CITY, Dec. 1 (Associated Press)—The Mexican "bad man" as he is usually depicted in motion pictures made in the United States, is to be barred from this country by presidental orders.

The wide-sombreroed villain, adorned with no less than six guns and as many knives, who commits all sorts of atrocities and is excused because he is a Mexican bandit, is not typical of Mexico, but is an insult, according to officials here. It has therefore been decided to bar all films of this offending nature, and picture houses showing those already in the country will be subjected to a heavy fine.

CUBAN WOMEN AGAIN SEEKING FRANCHISE

Removal of Ward Males From Constitutions Is All That Is Asked.

HAVANA, Cuba, Dec. 1.—(Associated Press)—Removal of one word "males" from the Cuban constitution is all that The National Suffragist Party asks of congress.

Stating it has waited until after the elections of November to make its request, the organization has addressed a petition to President Zayas asking him to include in his first message to the new congress a recommendation that the offeding word be blotted out by constitutional amendment. Such action would admit women to the polls.

At the one special and two regular sessions of congress held since President Zayas took office in May or 1921, the equal suffrage issue has been successfully dodged.

CONCERT BY RADIO

Texas Numbers Plainy Audible to Select Audience in the Capital.

MEXICO CITY, Dec. 1.—(Associated Press)—Newspaper reports that a concert given recently in San Antonio, Texas, was plainly audible to a select gathering in Mexico City by means of the radio telephone, have created a great local interest in this newest means of communication.

Numerous inquiries have been made at government departments and of merchants as to the cost and delivery of the necessary apparatus to equip private plants. Hitherto there has been but scant interest in Mexico in radio, although for several months a local newspaper has maintained a plant which picks up many press messages, particularly those furnished ships at sea by the United States navy department.

Of the 855 officers of the regular United States army retired for disability since the World War, only 54 suffered wounds in battle.

JESS WILLARD FAILS TO MAKE GOOD SHOWING

Former Champ Unable to Make the Grade in His Attempted Come Back.

MUCH OVERWEIGHT.

By JACK JUNGMEYER.

LOS ANGELES, Dec. 2.—Jess Willard, seeking to recover the crown that Dempsey hooked, asked the public to judge, after a few months' training, whether he deserved another chance at his conquerror.

The public has judged—that part to which he appealed, at least.

The occasion was his first arena exhibition, in Hollywood stadium of the Ameriacn Legion, a few night ago, when he boxed a charity bout.

And the verdict was a good-natured thumbs down.

A pitiable giant garnished with grins and pathetic yearning for the glory of yesteryear, plodding the long, long trail to fighting fitness, but failing to show come-back requisite of championship.

So ringsiders and sports writers saw and estimated Willard in action against his sparring adversaries, Tom Kennedy and Joe Bonds.

What Ring Experts Say

Said a veteran sporting editor, friend of the big Kanasn: "Any promoter who matches Jess with Dempsey ought to be hanged—it would be a crime."

Said another ring critic: "If Jess came in to Jack with his hands down as he did here Dempsey would break every rib in his body before he could get 'em up."

Still another: "It was expected that Jess Willard, clamoring for a return match, would at least go about his business with some show of something, earnestness for example. He did not show one characteristic of the ex-champion, let alone a championhsip prospect.

Can't Make the Grade.

There are whispers that Jess himself has about concluded that he can't make the grade. He has trained seriously for several months and has stripped off some 30 pounds of fat, still hovering in the neighborhood of 250. But he packs considerable overweight which seems to elude all training rigors—apparently nature's irreducible minimum for a man of his years, 39, frame and poundage.

In clownish bravado he presented that fulsome tummy to be hammered at by his sparring fellows. They whacked away at it with dull thuds while Jess giggled. He was slow and looked soft. His capers suggested a pretense at sprightliness which you expected him to relax in the privacy of his dressing room.

EIGHTEEN PITCHERS ON M'GRAW'S LIST

"Jawn" Already Has a Sizeable Bunch and is After Several Others.

By HENRY L. FARRELL)

NEW YORK, Dec. 2.—John McGraw has had a lot of experience last season juggling Giant pitchers around, but he is not anxious to do his tricks again next season.

On the reserve list of players, certified to National League headquarters the Giants have eighteen pitchers, none of wihch are youngsters just picked up from the bushes. Strings are out for several more but they cannot be acquired until room is made for them.

Dave Robertson, utility outfielder and pinch hitter, probably will get his papers to help get the squad down to legal size.

All of the veteran pitchers will be retained next season and McGraw expects big Jack Scott to be one of his leaders. Scott was said to have been hurt on a barnstorming trip, but the Giants office denies that it was serious enough to affect his work next season.

The Yankees have a bunch of star pitchers, if they act that way, but a few more will be added. The club has first call on Jakey May, the Vernon start southpaw who burnt up the Pacific Coast League last season. May was up once before, but the scouts say he is all ready for another trial. The Vernon club thinks so much of him that they want $75,000 in players for him.

The Yankees wouldn't mind having Ed. Rommell, the great Athletic pitcher—so would every other club. While Connie Mack persists that he is building up a team and not conducting a market, it is understood that such attractive offers have been made by the Yanks, the Tigers and the White Sox that Mack might trade if he could get something good in the deal.

Reports that the Yanks were going to get Dicky Kerr for use next season from the White Sox were spiked when Commissioner Landis announced that Kerr would not be re-instated for another year. When his time is up, it is very likely that Kerr will be traded, as both Comiskey and Gleason, the White Sox bosses, are considerably peeved at him.

Every club in the two major leagues can use pitchers or players, and it is probable that the coming meeting of the minor leagues in Louisville will see even more spirited buying and trading than marked the session last year, in Buffalo.

Both New York Clubs will be represented at the meeting. John McGraw and James Tierney will be there for the Giants, and Colonel Bill Huston and Ed. Barrow will try to let nothing get by the Yanks.

Rules of English Soccer Framed Sixty Years Ago

First International Game Was Played Just Fifty Years Ago Between England and Scotland at Glasgow—Had Rapid Growth.

LONDON, Dec. 2.— (Canadian Press)—For the English Soccer enthusiast who has a fondness for delving into the history of the game, the seven day period extending between November 24 and December 1 receives much attention, as a great deal of the history of Association Football is written around dates that fall within this period.

It was on November 24, 1862 that the committee of the newly formed Football Asosciation met to consider the so-called Cambridge Laws, which, it was claimed "embraced the true principles of the game with the greatest simplicity." A week later, on December 1, these laws were "officially" passed, and despite modifications in the laws from time to time, the principles as first outilned have remained to the present day, November 30, 1872, marked the occasion of the first international match played under Association Football rules, England and Scotland playing at Partick, Glasgow, on that date. Seven years later the first English-Welsh international was played, while in 1828 England and Ireland played its first international.

The growth of Association football, even in its early days, was very rapid and within five years the game had become so securely established that an inter-county match was attempted. This in turn, gave way to the more pretentious "international" and last Thursday marked the fiftieth anniversary of the international match.

Added interest in the first international is given through the fact that one of England's representatives in that game, J. C. Clegg, is now, half a century later, the foremost figure in Association Football. He has for the past thirty years been chairman o fthe Football Association Council and much of the remarkable success which has attended football government during the past three or four decades is largely attributed to the foresight of Mr. Clegg. At the October ,1922, meeting of the Football Association, at which Mr. Clegg presided, he was the recipient of hearty congragulations from all quarters on the completion of his half century's connection with football affairs.

The first international match of the present season was played on October 21 when England defeated Ireland by two to nothing. This made the thirty-seventh international match between the two countries, of which England has won 30, Ireland 2 and five were drawn. The total goals scored during these matches were: England 157, Ireland 26.

Since 1900 England has won 13 of the 19 games played, Ireland winning in Belfast in 1913 and at Middlesborough in the following year. The match at Middlesborough in 1905, at Belfast 1910, 1919 and 1920 resulted in draws.

RESIDENCE RULE DISCUSSED BY CENTRAL MOGULS.

Port Hope and Cobourg Strongly Oppose Adoption of January 1st Rule

The Central Ontario Baseball League Executive met at Belleville yesterday afternoon and discussed a number of matters in conection with next season in order to facilitate matters for the annual meeting of the League which it was decided yesterday should be held in Cobourg on the second Wednesday in March.

Vice-President M. J. Dedman of Lindsay, was in the chair in the absence of the president, and the others present were Secretary J. Nott, Oshawa; J. J. Solomon, Peterboro; Ford Moynes, Lindsay; Sandy Lockington, Port Hope; G. O. Patterson and A. E. Wilson, Bowmanville; W. Henderson, Leaside; E. Barnes and Allison, Cobourg; M. P. Duff, Belleville, and F. D. Craig, Peterboro.

The chief item before the meeting was the question of the residence rule, which in 1922 in the Central League was May 15th. The O.B.A. A. is likely to post a rule at the next annual meeting to compel all leagues affiliated with the Ontario body to accept January 1st as the residence rule, and it was over this point that most of the discussion yesterday was based. No action was taken for a resolution had already been passed at a previous executive meeting recommending to the annual meeting of the Central Ontario League the adoption of the January 1st rule and this resolution was allowed to stand so that the annual meeting of the League will have to settle the question.

Considerable difference of opinion developed. Cobourg and Port Hope were strongly against the January 1st rule, claiming that it would give the smaller towns no chance to compete with Belleville, Oshawa and Peterboro.

On the other hand, Bowmanville the smallest town in the circuit, stoutly championed the January 1st residence rule as a step in the right direction. Belleville and Peterboro also expressed themselves as favoring the change and Leeside were non-committal, claiming that their club would not be affected which ever way the decision went.

The change will likely be adopted at the annual meeting of the Central League, and of course it will have to be if the O.B.A.A. adopts the policy that all affiliated leagues must abide by the O.B.A.A. residence rule.

Leaside presents a difficult problem. Practically all the Leaside players live in Toronto and work at Leaside and the T.A.B.A. strongly object to Toronto players being allowed to play in a league outside of Toronto. The general feeling of the Central Ontario League is that the Leaside team are a source of strength to the League and that so long as their players are bonafide employees of the Leaside plants, as as they were last summer, the Central Ontario League will be quite satisfied to accept their entry and to put their case strongly before the O.B.A.A. executive. There is no living accommodation at Leaside for the players and they necessarily have to live in Toronto. It would be manifestly unfair to bar them from competition in the Central League by reason of a technicality in the residence rule.

TRAINING QUARTERS.

NEW YORK, December 2 (Canadian Press). — The Brooklyn National League Baseball Club announced yesterday that it had selected Clearwater, Florida, for 1923 spring training quarters.

An exhibition schedule, including games with the Washington and Cleveland American League Clubs, both of which also will train in Florida, is being arranged.

LADIES' CURLING CLUB HOLD ANNUAL ELECTION.

The Peterborough Ladies' Curling Club held a meeting yesterday afternoon at the home of Miss Morrow, Weller street. The report for last year was read and the skips selected.

The following officers were elected.

President—Mrs. Harry Cressman.
Vice-Pres.—Mrs. Walter Oke.
Secretary—Mrs. R. H. Turner.
Treasurer—Miss Reinhardt.

The following skips were chosen: Mrs. W. H. Hill, Miss Morrow, Miss Gladman, Mrs. Fisk, Mrs. Jamieson and Mrs. Waddell.

Following the meeting the ladies enjoyed a very pleasant social half hour.

FOR GIRL HOCKEYISTS.

All girls interested in hockey are invited to meet at the local Y.W.C.A. at 5.30 on Monday evening.

Blinded by the "living screen" of caterpillars hanging by their suspension threads, a motorist recently lost control of his car and ran over a bank.

Preserved better than many an Egyptian mummy, a shrunken body of an Indian chief who died nearly 400 years ago has been brought to the United States by a Peruvian engineer.

GIRLS' LEAGUE IS ORGANISED.

Seven Teams Entered and Others to Join Basketball Series at Y.W.C.A.

Seven team were represented at a meeting held last night at the Y. W. C. A. to organize a Ladies' Basketball League. Several other entries are expected.

It was decided that registration of teams and players must be made not later than Friday, December 8th, and that the maximum number of players to be signed by a team be ten. Substitute players will be permitted, provided twenty-four hours' notice is given by the team interested. In the event of a team being unable to present a complete line-up, the game must be defaulted. A blanket form certificate will be used for signing players, and these certificates must be registered at the Y.W.C.A. All players must be bona fide employees or members of the organization or institution for which they wish to play.

Membership with the Y. W. C. A. will constitute the players' entrance fee. All playing equipment will be provided by the Y. W. C. A., and players will, of course, enjoy all the privileegs of the institution.

Miss Littlefield, physical directress, will assist in coaching the teams. It is proposed to play the League games on Saturday evenings.

Organization will be completed at a meeting to be held at the Y. W. C. A. next Friday night at nine o'clock. All teams interested in the League should be represented at this meeting.

Representatives from the Ladies' Soft Ball League and the Peterborough A. A. A. assisted with the organization meeting last night, and Mr. F. Gandy presided.

An effort will be made to procure a trophy for competition in the League.

The teams represented were: De Laval, Y.W.C.A., United Club, Bonner-Worth, Quaker Oats, Western Clock and C.G.E.

BETTER TO BREAK A BANK OR TWO.

STRATFORD, Dec. 2.—(Canadian Press).—A threat that unless banks adopted a more lenient attitude towards the Farmers' Co-operative enterprise at next year's consideration of the Bank Act it might lead to a revision of that measure, was made by Hon. Manning Doherty, Ontario Minister of Agriculture, while speaking to dairymen here yesterday.

Citing the position of the Niagara Peninsula Growers as an example, he said this company had found itself with an overdraft of $25,000. When the organization was formed the bank promised credit to any amount, but when the overdraft had reached $25,000 it closed down on the company and gave it three days to settle.

"In my opinion, it is better to break a bank or two than that one of these co-operative organizations should fail."

MUTT AND JEFF.

The announcement that Mutt and Jeff, the famous Bud Fisher comics, are soon headed this way, should be welcome news to the millions of admirers and friends of these ubiquitous and irrestibly funny jesters. They are to appear in a brand new play with music by Nat Leroy entitled, "Mutt and Jeff's Honeymoon" The offering is in two acts and six scenes and will be the attraction at the Grand theatre tonight. The story is that of two husbands who find that martial life is not all it is cracked up to be and seek some way to escape the perpetual strife that seems to be their lot ever since they took to themselves a wife. The husbands, as might be expected, are interpreted by Mutt and Jeff. The latter endeavors to help out his pal. Of course, though he means well, his method of procedure is rather crude with the result that there are numerous complications and trials which have to be thoroughly and decisively corrected before the final curtain. The production is of the elaborate, pretentious sort, embodying any amount of novelties, humor, fun, laughter, melodies and surprises.

WHEN "SHERLOCK HOLMES" TOOK STAGE BY STORM

Just 23 Years Ago That William Gillette's Play, Now Done on the Screen by John Barrymore, Captivated Public.

The screening of "Sherlock Holmes" at the Grand theatre, for three days starting Monday with John Barrymore starred in the role of the famous detective, calls to mind, at least to the minds of those whose memories go back for nearly a generation, the first stage presntation of the play, which took place on November 6, 1899, saw the first performance of the play, "Sherlock Holmes," at the Garrick Theatre in New York, with William Gillette in the role no assumed by Mr. Barrymore in the cinema production.

The stage adaptation, taken chiefly from that one of the Holmes yarns called "A Scandal in Bohemia," but with much wholly new material added, was made by Mr. Gillette himself in collaboration with Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, creator of this famous fiction character.

The occasion was a momentous one in theatrical circles. It had been widely discussed beforehand, not only becaues of Mr. Gillette's connection as both playwright and star, but also because of the universal popularity which Sherlock Holmes had already attained among the reading public. His was a fascinating character and his name had already become almost a household word. Here at last he was materializing into flesh and blood, in the person of William Gillette.

The play was received with tremendous enthusiasm by critics and public alike. In support of Mr. Gillette in the important roles appeared Bruce McRae as Dr. Watson; Katherine Florence as "Alice Faulkner; George Wessels as Moriarty; Ralph Delmore as Larabee; Judith Beroide as Madge Larabee and Reuben Fax as Forman Wells.

The extraordinary success that greeted the play in this country was reepated two years later when it was presented in Londn at the Lyceum Theatre, opening there on September 9, 1901. In 1905 it was revived in London at Duke of York's Theatre, meeting with the same phenomenal success it had achieved during the previous run at London.

In December 1910 it was revived in America by Charles Froham, first in Boston, then at the Empire Theatre in New York. The third revival was in 1915, when Mr. Froham again presented it at the Empire. The supporting cast upon this occasion included Edward Fielding, Helen Freeman, Joseph Brennan, Edward Mordant, Marion Abbott, and Stewatr Robbins.

In the cast of the screen version of "Sherlock Holmes" headed by the inimitable Mr. Barrymore, are many well known stage and screen stars. Roland Young appears as Dr. Watson and Carol Dempster as Alice Faulkner. Among the others are Gustave von Seyffertitz, Hedda Hopper, William H. Powell, Anders Randolf, Louis Wolheim, Reginald Denny, Albert Bruning, Percival Knight, Lumsden Hare and David Torrence.

AT THE ROYAL.

TOM MIX IN A NEW THRILLER COMING MONDAY.

And the star that will use them is Tom Mix from William Fox's famous fold. For action, aim and accuracy "Just Tony," based on Max Brand's novel, "Alcatraz," will surpass much of his past work, and that's saying a saddle-bag full.

This new vehicle for the stalwart, stimulating star will prove entertainment of the highest order. For many years it has been Mix's most arduous endeavor to feature his sprightly steed, "Tony," in a film-play, and Mr. Fox has finally consented. So Tom went about his performance in front of a camera with an enthusiasm born of an inspiration for love of the animal which has accompanied him through much of his life and most of his hazardous episodes on the Western plateau.

Aside from its stirring incidents and absorbing detail, the story contains an unusual scenic background that adds charm to the narrative.

Capitol Entertainment

NOVEL SCREEN THRILL

The elaborate court of King James I of England, a reproduction of historic Jamestown, Virginia, in 1620; a fight between a pirate ship and a victim vessel, colorful properties and costumes galore, these are the big features of "To Have and To Hold" a romantic screen story produced by George Fitzmaurice which will be on view at the Capitol Theater for three days beginning Monday next.

"To Have and To Hold" is a production of exceptional brilliance. Heading the cast are such noted players as Betty Compson, Bert Lytell, recently a star of his own right, Theodore Roberts and Theodore Kosloff.

The story starts in 1615 in the great throne room of Hampton Court Palace. King James I. is being entertained with special performances by William Shakespeare and his players. Shakespeare himself is shown by Director Fitzmaurice; also such equally historic personages as Ben Johnson and the Duke of Buckingham. Colorful costumes are a feature of this sequence, the gorgeous hoop-skirted, be-ruffled gowns of Betty Compson being specially notable.

The adaptation by Ouida Bergere of Mary Johnston's story swerves to Jamestown, then to a desert island off Florida then aboard a pirate vessel, in a manner that makes "To Have and To Hold" remarkable for action as well as color and costumes. Bert Lytell and Theodore Kosloff are the principals in a series of thrilling duels.

"To Have and To Hold" is considered one of the most thrilling and romantic stories ever written. The picture, which is a Paramount production, is a truly notable contribution to the cinema art.

MILLION DOLLAR SUIT.

BURLINGTON, Vt., Dec. 2. — (Canadian Press).—Arguments were begun yesterday in the County Court in the trial of the suit for a million dollars brought by Mrs. Dorrit Stevens Woodhouse against her husband's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Lorenzo E. Woodhouse, for alienation of his affections. Each side was allotted six hours to place its arguments before the jury which has been hearing evidence for four weeks.

SHIP SUBSIDY BILL.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 2.—(Canadian Press).—So close and doubtful is the Senate situation on the Ship Subsidy Bill that Republican leaders have undertaken a new canvass to find out whether the measure, if voted on, could command a majority. Tactics of the Opposition will be to prevent a vote before March 4, but if they become convinced there is a majority against the bill they will let it go to a vote and beat it.

THE NORTHERN PIG AND HIS PASTURE.

FARGO, N.D., Dec. 2.—(Canadian Press).—A hog doesn't root from pure perversity, just because he wants to give his front yard the appearance of no man's land between the trenches. He is merely seeking in his blind piggish way to satisfy his aspirations for some ingredient, necessary to his physical well being, which is lacking from his daily diet.

This and many more things concerning pigs will be brought out in the principal North Dakota Experiment station exhibit "The Northern Pig and His Pasture," to be exhibited at the national Grain and Hay Show, Chicago, Dec. 2-9, according to H. L. Walster, agronomist of the state agricultural college here.

The main aim of the exhibit will be to show that the farmers of various districts commonly supposed to raise nothing but wheat, can produce hogs, "and let them do all the harvesting," according to Mr. Walster.

Colored enlarged pictures and graphic diagrams will show how the hog may feed himself by the "hogging off" of Canadian field peas and Dakota white flint corn and also the value of alfalfa as hog pasture if supplemented by a grain ration. With such food the hog finds it unnecessary to root, the agronomist says. Results of five years' experiment along this line will be shown.

The whole exhibit will be a "dramatization of 'The Northern Pig from Birth to Market'," a bulletin recently written by J. H. Shepperd. In this bulletin Mr. Shepperd emphasizes the need for understanding and kind treatment of the animals.

None of the pigs in the nursery rhyme had more definite personalities than those at the college, according to the bulletin. If they misbehave, "thump their ears," it advises. This does not hurt them but they do not like it, according to the bulletin. But "don't frighten a hog, and humor the brood sow," are two principles which are insisted upon.

This consideration is in line with the policy of the agricultural college here throughout. "Treat a cow as you would a lady," says a motto in the office of the dairying department.

WIND IS CAUSE SEVERAL FIRES

Fire Department Responded to Eight Calls Last Evening.

The Fire Department responded to ten fire alarms yesterday afternoon and evening. Eight of the calls were chimney fires, one a factory fire and the other a short circuit. The evening's programme ran as follows:

8.23 p.m.—A chimney fire at 5 Dunlop Street, corner of Auburn.

8.32 p.m.—A chimney fire at 374½ Water Street.

11.30 p.m.—A chimney fire at 605 Rubidge Street.

The feature of the evening was the fire at the Aerated Water Factory at 355 Burnham Street. The fire was caused from defective stove pipes which started a fire on the ground floor at the eastern end of the building. The flames quickly ate their way through the floor to the cellar and through to the ceiling to the loft above. On the arrival of the firemen the building was filled with extremely dense smoke, and it was with difficulty that the firemen penetrated the smoke to reach the flames. The men lost no time in gaining entrance, and after a strenuous battle with the dense smoke and intense heat, succeeded in extinguishing the flames.

The total loss was approximately $500 to the building and $500 to the stock.

The chimney fires were caused by the windstorm. The wind would force the smoke and flames down the chimneys, and the result was the above list of fires.

DENTIST WILL CARRY $40 WEEKLY ALIMONY DIRECT TO HIS WIFE

WHITE PLAINS, N. Y.,—Dec. 1.—Supreme Court Justice Joseph Morschauser has granted a trial separation of six months to Mrs. Sarah C. Potter of Mount Vernon from Dr. Howard M. Potter, a surgeon dentist of 133 West Seventy-second Street, Manhattan, it was announced today.

After some testimony had been given by Mrs. Potter in her suit for a separation upon the grounds of cruel and inhuman treatment, Justice Morschauser suggested the couple try to become reconciled within the next six months.

Dr. Potter, through his attorney, said he would try to win back his wife's love and affection through meditation and prayer, in order to try and carry out this plan. The dentist when he pays his wife $40 a week alimony is going to carry the check direct to her and try to make amends for his past bad conduct. The Potters have been married only about two years and have a daughter. Mrs. Potter in her testimony said she and her husband had frequent quarrels, that he complained about her cooking, slapped her and called her a "slob" and several other names. The plaintiff, who is 25 years old, admitted that when she married the dentist her father and mother did not attend the wedding because she said they were opposed to her marriage. She also admitted that her parents had called Dr. Potter a "gold digger."

THREATENS BY MAIL TO BOMB CITY HALL

Writer Says He Caused Wall Street Explosion and Might Cut Brooklyn Bridge in Two

NEW YORK, Dec. 1.—A man who said he caused the Wall Street explosion wrote to Borough President Riegelmann of Brooklyn yesterday threatening to blow up "Brooklyn City Hall" and kill every one in it. Also he said he might cut Brooklyn Bridge in two pieces. His letter reads:

"When I did blow up Wall Street and it killed twenty-eight people two years ago, I done a rotten job.

"I got a new kind of explosive—a better soup, with which I did blow up a few railroads the last few months, working for the unions, Patterson.

"When I blast City Hall, Brooklyn, I intend to kill everybody in the building. May be after I will cut Brooklyn Bridge in two pieces. I love to kill."

There being no City Hall in Brooklyn, Mr. Rieglmann caused the letter to be forwarded to Peter Chieffo, custodian of City Hall, Manhattan. Chieffo at once sent it to Lieutenant James Gegan, head of the bomb squad, who is investigating.

The letter was written on cheap note paper, evidently by a person of very little education. It was signed "H. Strachan, 281 Fulton Street, Brooklyn." There is an "H. Strachan" at that address, a sign painter, but according to the police, he is an entirely reputable person and could not possibly have had anything to do with such a communication. The theory is that some one just happened to jick the name of Strachan, perhaps from having seen it on the front of his shop.

ADDRESS ON INSURANCE BY DR. G. L. MACDOUGALL.

Court Peterborough of the Canadian Order of Foresters, held an interesting meeting last evening. The speaker of the evening was Dr. G. L. MacDougall, Court Physician, on 'Insurance.'

It is the intention of the lodge to devote one evening each week to subjects of interest to lodge members. Refreshments were served at the close of the meeting last evening.

WIFE FAINTED IN TESTIFYING

States Brother of Her Husband Made Love to Her.

DENVER, Dec. 1.—While testifying in a divorce suit in which she is charged with infatuation with her husband's younger brother, Mrs. Inez Ross, a striking young blonde, plunged from the witness stand in a faint.

The startling interruption to one of the most sensational divorce cases heard in Denver in weeks came after the wife had appeared little affected by the lurid testimony attacking her character.

Says They Blasphemed

She declared her husband, Paul, and his brothers "couldn't talk English."

"All they used was blasbhemy," she testified. "I hadn't been in my husband's house any time at all when Eugene began to make advances to me. He told me I was the first woman who ever repulsed him. One morning there was a row at the breakfast table and a sugar bowl came hurtling my way. Then Eugene knocked me down and began kicking me around on the floor, while my husband looked on.

"I screamed, and Claude, who was on the porch, came in and pulled Eugene away from me."

It was at this point that the young bride broke down, sobbing, and then fainted and rolled from the witness stand to the floor. Frantic efforts were made to resuscitate her. She was revived, finally, and began sobbing again quietly. She was led into the judge's chambers and the court adjourned.

Claude, described by the wife as a sort of "Sir Galahad" in the disrupted household, is the one with whom Mrs. Ross is alleged to have had improper relations.

Claude limped into court on a crutch, and testified there was "nothing out of the ordinary" in his relations with his sister-in-law.

It has been brought out that all three of the Ross brothers have been divorced. Paul is now seeking his second decree.

HINT YOUTH SET MURDER SCENE; DRANK POISON.

No Trace of Woman in Los Angeles Mystery — A Luncheon For Two.

LOS ANGELES, Cal., Dec. 2.—Police announced to-day that V. E. Boge, who died of poisoning in a hotel here, had himself purchased the drug in a local store, had signed the record and that they believed he was a suicide. His motive was unknown, they said.

The police said that they were convinced no woman was in the room with Boge, and that the luncheon for two found partially consumed on a table in his hotel room was, in their belief, an attempt on Boge's part to cloak his death as an element of mystery.

Staggered Into Hall.

Boge registered yesterday at a leading hotel. He added the words "and wife" to his signature, and told the room clerk his wife would arrive later. Then he ordered lunch for two served in his room and a few minutes later staggered into the corridor and told a houseman that he believed he had been poisoned. Writhing a short time, he died.

First investigation showed the lunch for two, with poison in the bottom of a nearly empty coffee cup. That and the manner of his registration caused a cry of murder to go out and a search to be made for the woman believed to have accompanied him.

Boge Was Unmarried.

Boge, information from Portland, Ore., indicated, was 20 and unmarried. His home was in Hillsboro, Ore. He had come to Los Angeles, it was learned, to take a position. The firm for which he had expected to work said that he had not reported.

Butterfly Sleeves, Bertha Collars, on New Dancing Frocks

The modern college girl may wear—and does—flat-heeled shoes, wool-jersey dresses, plain-tailored suits, sweaters and skirts, but there is one article in her wardrobe that is exempt from all utilitarian rules.

That's her dancing frock, of course. Here are two she'd like for the winter parties and hops.

Tiny butterfly wings of sleeves decorate one of them and a new neckline helps to make it as modish as posible.

The other has a deep Bertha collar of lace as costly as one's purse can buy. Both rejoice in the dash-in swing of skirts cut to droop on each side.

MRS. PANKHURST AROUSES ROTARY WITH ADDRESS

Double Standard of Morality Must Be Wiped Out She Declare in Endorsing Social Hygiene

GIVE CHILD A CHANCE

Members of the Peterborough Rotary Club heard an impressive and straightforward address upon a subject of vital importance at their luncheon at the Empress Hotel today, when Mrs. Emmeline Pankhurst explained the aims and objects of the Canadian Social Hygiene Council and urged the co-operation of Rotarians on behalf of the local branch of the organization. It was an eloquent and frank talk upon a topic that is too frequently ignored by Canadians, and the members of the club were deeply impressed by her able exposition.

Mrs. Pankhurst outlined the principal object of the Hygiene Council as a crusade to create a race of citizens worthy of their heritage, a heritage won for them by the heroism of the pioneer residents of Canada, and preserved for them by the sacrifices of the Great War. The movement aimed at securing for each child the triple birthrights that should be his, a physical, mental and moral birth-rate, and could only succeed when the double standard of morality was wiped out of existence.

The eloquent speaker startled her hearers by declaring that last year over 29,000 Canadian infants died within their first year. Canada, she said, was concerned with its immigration problems, realizing that immigrants of the right calibre were needed to develop the resources of this country, and yet each year over 20,000 young Canadians died. We had not yet got to the stage when we paid as much attention to the preservation of human beings as we did to the preservation and repairing of machinery.

In frank language, Mrs. Pankhurst discussed the terrible effects of the double standard, the awful results of the false theory that young men must sow their wild oats. The ravages caused by the spread of venereal diseases were pointed out by the speaker, who, in a few vivid sentences, showed the extent to which the scourge had developed in Canada and pleaded with the Rotary club to lend its support to the Hygiene Council and to appoint a representative on the Executive of the local branch.

The situation had resolved itself, she declared in conclusion, when either the women would have to level their standard down to that accepted as are right for men and that would mean the destruction of the race, or the men would have to level their standard up to that of the women. On all other respects the two sexes were equal, and there could no longer be two standards of morality.

There was a ninety-five per cent. attendance of the Rotary members, with President John Crane in the chair, and among the visitors present were: Mrs. W. R. Morris, Dr. MacDougall, acting head of the local branch of the Canadian Hygiene Council; Dr. T. N. Greer, Rev. Robt. Pogue, Rev. Mr. Langford, Trinity Church; E. A. Peck, W. R. Richardson and Rotarian Adjutant Buntin, Ottawa.

Rotarian Dr. A. W. McPherson, in moving a hearty vote of thanks to Mrs. Pankhurst, as a medical man, endorsed the work of the Hygiene Council. The preservation of child life was one of the greatest problems of the day, he said, not only in Canada but throughout the world.

Rotarians Dr. Buchanan and J. H. Seels were appointed a committee to arrange for a good representation from the Peterborough Club at the district meeting in Toronto next Monday, and Rotarian Ald. Jas. Hamilton was named as convenor of a committee to draw up a programme of Christmas activities.

Government Asked Participate in a Partnership Plan

NEW YORK, Dec. 4.—(Canadian Press.)— Canadian Government will be asked to participate in plan, in partnership with the British government, for aiding of immigrants who desire to go to the Canadian west under Salvation Army's immigration scheme. This was disclosed by Commissioner David Lamb, International Secretary of the Army, who is in New York en route to Canada, in an interview with representative of the Canadian Press.

The plan does not involve any radical step in connection with Canada's immigration policy, or one which will necessitate large expenditure.

The new feature of the Army's immigration work this year is the establishment of a system of training in England for prospective farm helpers. This plan is designed primarily for "blind alley boys," youths who are engaged in occupations which gives no promise of steady employment.

A CONFERENCE OPENED TO-DAY

International Postal Conference Between Canada and the United States Got Away to a Good Start.

OTTAWA, December 4 (Canadian Press.) — With expressions of welcome and goodwill, the first International Postal Conference between Canada and the United States opened at Parliament Buildings at eleven o'clock this morning.

On behalf of Canada, the Right Hon. W. L. Mackenzie-King, Premier, and the Hon. Charles Murphy, Postmaster-General, extended greetings to the Hon. Hubert Work, the Postmaster-General of the United States, and officials accompanying him, and Dr. Work, on behalf of the United States, replied.

The Hon. Charles Murphy, Postmaster-General of Canada, in his opening address, said:

"As it is my good fortune to share with the Prime Minister the privilege of extending a cordial welcome on behalf of the Canadian Government to Postmaster-General Work and his associates from the United States, I desire to express, not only my appreciation of that privilege, but also my appreciation of the honour that has been paid us by the representatives of our great and friendly neighbour in coming to the capital of the Dominion to take part in this first International Postal Conference—a conference whose objects intimately affect all the inhabitants of the North American Continent.

"Possibly, the full measure of our obligations for the courtesy shown us would not be apparent if I did not mention that it was the late Postmaster-General of the United States who first suggested the holding of this conference, and who, at the same time, left it for Canada to decide where it would be held.

"It has long been the custom among a certain class of public speakers to assert that the link which binds in friendship the American and the Canadian people is the link of a common origin, a common language, and common ideals. That may sound pleasant to the ear; but it is not a correct statement. The real link that binds these two nations is the Postal Service common to both. And that link has endured since the year 1763, when Benjamin Franklin opened post offices at Quebec, Three Rivers, and Montreal, and established the first postal service between Montreal and New York by way of Lake Champlain and Lake George.

A Musician Refugee In Fire's Wake

Some of the Vicissitudes of Wm. Jones, F.R.C.M. of Lancashire, Eng. and Englehart, New Ontario

When William Jones, a Fellow of the Royal College of Music, diced with chance a few years ago, closed his organ in Lancashire, and disbanded his class of piano students to follow the lure of a fertile farm and independence in the clay belt of Northern Ontario, his urging ambition played him a trick that finally overwhelmed him among the nearly 1800 families who were caught in the bush fires of two months ago.

Eventually he landed up at Englehart, the destiny of his dreams. Whether t e reality of the prospect appeared as fair and attractive as had been the visions of his adventure, he gravitated into the nearby country, a musician, misfitted as a pioneer. This phase of his experience, as he told it to The Examiner a few weeks ago, is obscure, but if he made no impression as a homesteader, his musical abilities were soon recognized. At that stage his once bright "back to the land" prospects must have rapidly faded. Men told him he was wasting his talents. Musicians, especially Fellows of the Royal College of Music, were scarce in the north country. In Englehart and the district around it, parents desired to give their children music lessons, and a church organ was available.

So William Jones forsook the rough work of pioneering, abandoned those remote dreams of broad acres and bulging barns, and presently was doing well in Englehart as an organist and music teacher with a store and studio in a business block near the station. But the fate that had guided him back to his vocation and to accumulating prosperity, deserted him last summer when half the block, including the studio, was destroyed by fire that started in a Chinese laundry.

Meanwhile Jones, and this is no pseudonym, was living on the edge of the town. He indicated the place, pointing toward a background of spruce beyond a clearing about half a mile from the station. A farmer named Skinner, probably a former resident of Otonabee township, had been burning off the scrub growth on that side of the town. About the end of September, some of Jones's neighbors had protested to the municipal authorities that these fires were too near, but the town's fire department looked over the situation, and decided that there was no danger.

And then came October 4th, with the terrific wind that caught up Skinner's fires and blew them through the brush and across the clearing. Sheets of flame flung by the gale licked up twenty houses on that side of Englehart, and the whole town escaped destruction only by the sudden veering of the wind.

"I lost everything but a two manual organ," Jones lamented. "I managed to get it out somehow, but my music library is gone. Before I came out I was offered £125 for it."

When first seen by The Examiner this F.R.C.M., who said he won his degree in 1897, was coming out of a small shed near the charred open cellars of the misshapen business block. His sack coat was buttoned to the top with collar turned up, a winter cap was drawn down over his ears, and he had a hand saw ineptly tucked under one arm.

Asked as to whether he knew anything about the fire in the block, he said: "I should say I do, but that's not half," and he proceeded with his sorrow. "I have just finished a shack the government gave me the stuff for, and we've got a few things in it."

Perhaps in proof of his musicianship William Jones said he had a medal which he had won in a class of forty-seven candidates in open competition. It was the only remnant of the treasures he had brought from St. Ellen's, in Lancashire, England. Time didn't allow a visit, to his refugee quarters of the standard dimensions, 16 feet by 20 feet, to see his prize, and the conditions under which he faced the winter. His head was unbowed as he looked toward the future, but he was inclined to complain that the farmers were receiving special consideration from the Relief Committee.

More than half the victims of the fires were farmers who have peculiar needs for their cattle and other livestock. Extra provision is being made for them, but how is the committe to provide for a separate class represented by the only Fellow of the Royal College of Music who was caught in the calamity of October 4th? Shall William Jones with his wife and four children be left to fight it out alone, apart from ordinary relief, or shall he with the others receive a generous measure of assistance in the scheme of rehabilitation which this rich province of Ontario should undertake?

THE UTILITIES COMMISSIONERS CLAIM A SAVING FOR THE CITY

Difference Between the Old Rate Charged by the Peterborough Light and Power Company and the Present Rate Charged by the Hydro Commission

Editor of The Examiner.

Sir,—Last year, 1921, the Utilities Commission furnished 2,027,611 K.W.H. of power to domestic consumers, 1,964,887 K.W.H. to commercial consumers, and 4,772 H.P. for power. The rates for these services charged by the Peterborough Light and Power Company when the city took over the light and power business were 7 cents per K.W.H. for domestic use, 10 cents per K.W.H. for commercial purposes, and $20.00 per H.P. for power. In 1921 the Utilities Commission received for domestic services $59,506.10 ;for commercial use, $35,364.67; and for power $76,195.98.

The cost of doing business of all kinds—the cost of material and labour—had increased considerably between 1914 and 1921. Yet the following comparison of what the people would have paid at the Peterborough Light and Power Company's rates and what they did pay in 1921 will show that despite the increased cost of material and labour, the people saved much money:

Received by the Commission	59,506.10
Saving to the People		$ 82,425.97
Commercial light, 1,964,887 K.W.H. at 10c	$196,488.70
Received by the Commission	35,364.67
Saving to the People		161,124.03
Power, 4,772 H.P. at $20.00	$ 95,440.00
Received by the Commission	76,195.98
Saving to the People		19,244.02
Total Saving to the People in 1921		$262,794.02

This is an amount saved by the people of Peterborough in one year equal to over 17 mills on the dollar on the whole assessment for municipal purposes of that year.

Taking the five years, from 1917 to 1921 inclusive, the saving to the people on light and power has been:

1917	$ 74,101.30
1918	122,825.97
1919	150,726.04
1920	205,355.71
1921	262,794.02
Total Saving in Five Years	$815,803.04

—Yours truly,
ROBERT HICKS, Chairman Utilities Commission.
E. F. MASON, Commissioner.
W. H. BRADBURN, Commissioner.

LANARK ELECTORS GO TO THE POLLS TO-DAY

PERTH, Dec. 4. — (Canadian Press.)—After weeks of verbal bombardment by greater and lesser spokesmen of both Liberal and Conservative parties, the electors of Lanark are to-day writing their verdict. Usually it has been more or less a walk-over for the Conservatives in Lanark, but at the close of their campaign Saturday night both sides expressed confidence regarding the result. Neither side has been overlooking any chance of securing votes and house to house work has been vigorously carried out. Heavy vote is looked for though in some of the rural polling areas there is a tendency toward apathy on the part of farmers who are disappointed because their candidate withdrew from the contest.

LABORITES MUST BE ALLOWED FREE HAND

LONDON, Dec. 4. — (Canadian Press.)—Ramsay Macdonald, Laborite leader, in a letter to the Scottish Communist paper, "Forward," expresses the hope that men sent by Scotland to Parliament may be allowed to do their work without interference from those who sent them. He adds that he will not have "unemployed agitation controlled by men who act independently of Parliamentary advice and then expect us to fall into any mess they produce."

SMOULDERING WOOD GAVE FIREMEN RUN

Two more fires are added to the list of fires for this month. At. 11.47 p.m., Saturday, the brigade was called to the Sons of England Hall, where a piece of smouldering wood had been placed in a pail, which had been set under an enclosed stairway. The smoke issuing forth from the stairway was noticed by some men coming into the hall and they sent in the alarm before any fire was started.

The second alarm was received at 7.21 p.m., Sunday from box 23, to a chimney fire at 403 George street.

TRANSFER ASSETS OF BIRMINGHAM MOTORS TO NEW ORGANIZATION

Vest Interests in Syndicate to Be Followed by a New Company in Montreal Capitalized at $2,000,000.

SOME SHAREHOLDERS AGREE TO PROJECT

The local shareholders of Birmingham stock held another meeting last Saturday evening in the Chamber of Commerce, when the committee appointed at the previous meeting made their report through Mr. T. A. DeForge, who briefly outlined what had been done during the past week in regard to protecting the interests of shareholders.

Mr. DeForge had succeeded in arranging that T. R. Dubois should be in attendance and present to this meeting the only plan he knew of to aid shareholders in recovering their losses, or part thereof, in the Birmingham Motors, Limited, of Canada, now declared bankrupt.

A New Company.

Mr. Dubois is an engineer who has been working for sometime on a new light four-cylinder car, and he has succeeded in drawing up a definite plan in Montreal whereby these cars can be manufactured and marketed. All we need, he told the meeting, is to buy the assets of Birmingham Motors, Limited, of Canada, which consist of the present stock, patents and manufacturing rights, such being most essential to the new company he projected. His reasons for this proposed new company establishing itself in Montreal are that it is the largest city in the Dominion, a huge banking centre and a comparatively easy place to raise money for a good proposition, business men being progressive in the manufacturing field and capable of making money for stockholders as well as for themselves. Mr. Dubois stated that he had already succeeded in getting in touch with five or six financial men in Montreal, and the plan proposed was to form a syndicate for building three or four cars for demonstration purposes, and to organize a company on a solid footing. This syndicate would raise $50,000 at first and then $200,000, and the company would then be capitalized at $2,000,000.

Buy Old Assets.

The syndicate would buy the assets of Birmingham Motors, Limited, build three or four cars and organize a sales organization to raise the second subscribed amount in view. The $200,000, comprised of two thousand interests of $100.00 each, would be deposited in a bank, to act as trustee of the company, and only honor cheques for money spent on the production of cars.

The business of the sales organization, continued Mr. Dubois, would be to raise the total amount required by the syndicate, to demonstrate the new cars and take orders for them, and then report to Montreal. When the company gets into manufacturing and delivering sold cars, 25 per cent. of the profits,

They told police plans for elopment were made while enroute to school Friday. Without funds, the couple jumped into a freight car and were carried to a Chicago terminal yard.

WELL FITTED FOR HIS NEW POSITION

Timothy Healey's Appointment Approved in London—Has a Sharp Tongue.

LONDON, December 4. Canadian Press.—The appointment of Michael Healy as the first Governor-General of the Irish Free State, is regarded as a certainly, as it is understood the post was offered him some time ago and that its final allotment depended only on his acceptance which it is said, he has now given. His apointment is regarded sympathetically here and is said to be satisfactory to the Irish government. His sharp tongue which goaded his opponents in the House of Commons has been forgotten and parliamentary writers stress his unquestioned cleverness and his long experience of parliamentary life.

LINDSAY SONGSTERS PRODUCE "BLUEBIRD"

Mr. Asa Huycke's Opera Will Be Sung Early in January.

"The Message of the Bluebird", will be produced in Lindsay by a Lindsay company during the first week of January. Mr. Asa Huycke is at present conducting rehearsals and reports surprising progress. Something of a competitive spirit seems to have appeared in the work and it is likely that the Lindsay musicians will endeavour to excel their Peterboro prototypes. Mrs. Walter Reesor is the Marion of the caste which was taken here by Mrs. Perrin, and Cleo is played by Mrs. Spratt, taking the role Mrs. Park had in the local production. Mr. "Kit" Picard will be the Count but otherwise the caste is composed of Lindsay talent, and Mr. Huycke is delighted with the enthusiasm and ability they have shown. It is expected that many persons from Peterboro will attend the Lindsay presentations not only to hear the music again but especially for the purposes of comparison.

They Made the "Queen" Flee With Rhyme, Rum, Reason

DETROIT, Dec. 4. — Vernon Johns, 94 Brady Street, was awakened at 5 a.m. by a knocking that was alternately measured and irregular.

He spoke tersely to his wife about the prerogatives of the Pilgrim Fathers who are said to have slept late on Thanksgiving morning, then donned his clothes, and went down to the front door.

Three men stood on the threshold.

"Three bottles, please," they chorused, "of liquor, raw and red. Our friends believe that it's sold here, at least that's what they said."

"Imogene," shouted Johns to his wife. "Come down here. I've just captured Byron, Keats and Shelley."

"Poets? No!" the chorus came, "we're merely musketeers. We want some wine that's very fine, likewise a case of beer."

At this juncture Mrs. Johns appeared at the top of the stairs.

"What is it, John," she asked. "Are these men friends of yours?"

"Friends. . . ."

"Ah! There's the queen. She'll bring us beer. Our friends were right. One buys it here."

Mrs. John screamed, and ran through the door to Brady Street. The visiting poets followed her, and Johns, plucking a curtain pole from the top of a parlor window, brought up the rear.

"Help!" screamed Mrs. Johns.

"Coming!" yelled Johns.

"Crack!" went the curtain pole.

Poet Number One staged a fade-out, and the other two tumbled to their knees, watching the shattered pole that moved back and forth above their heads like a sceptre. Then the patrol wagon arrived and policemen jumped out, note books in hand, and wrote:

"John F. Fitzgerald, 25 years old, 1,001 Jefferson Avenue East; fractured skull, Receiving Hospital.

"Frank Kane, 25 years old, 479 Willis Avenue West; held as a disorderly person.

"Bernard Lucey, 24 years old, 220 Puritan Avenue, Highland Park; same."

And——

"Vernon Johns, held for questioning until story can be investigated."

They Ask You This at Yale To Test Student Alertness

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Dec. 4.—Some of the 40 questions to which Yale students have to answer yes or no to determine their mental alertness were revealed the other day by students. An answer must be given within 15 seconds after a question is asked. If a student says "I don't know" to all questions, he would rank a "zero" but a "guess," showing no mental effort, would mean a minus mark on that answer.

Biological students quote, among others, these questions:

"Is water necessary as a solvent for nutrition?"

"Is it possible to have a balanced aquarium without light?"

In psychology the students were asked:

"Is psychology the science of prediction and control of behavior?"

"Is a synapta a connection between neurones?"

The civil engineers were asked to pronounce "true" or "false" statements like these:

"People who live along a highway should be taxed for its upkeep."

"The pay-as-you-go method is cheaper for the taxpayer in the end than the sinking fund method."

"Brick is the best pavement in the long run."

"The penetration test determines how far asphalt will sink into a stone foundation."

A question in physics was:

"If the distance between the earth and the moon were to be decreased by one-half would the attraction between the two be one-fourth as great"

Underground Chorus of 1200 Voices Is Possible Over 2,400 Wire Cable

"Unwept unhonored and unsung" might be an apt title for the picture above, which records an incident in the "pulling in" of the 1,200 pair cable on a Toronto downtown street the other day.

It is a far cry from the fence wire used by Dr. Bell in his early experiments at Brantford to the 2,400 wire cable, of which a cross section is shown at the right.

Sixty-foot poles with twenty cross arms, each carrying ten wires, did not improve the appearance of city streets. There were also electrical difficulties and dangers arising from other high tension wires nearby.

Out of these difficulties telephone cables evolved. The evolution of telephone cable is a story of difficulties sought and overcome rather than difficulties met and grappled with.

The first cable contained .5 pairs, or 50 wires, and as late as 1917 a 600 pair was considered to be the last word. Yet in five short years telephone engineers have doubled the limit.

To successfully operate with 2,400 wires in a cable less than 3" in diameter, each wire absolutely insulated from 2,399 others, and the whole air-tight and protected by a heavy lead sheath surely denotes engineering skill of a very high order.

Twelve hundred voices passing at one time through the small space of 3" without confusion is an interesting thought.

TRANSFER ASSETS, ETC.

which are about $200.00 on a car, will be put aside of the syndicate entirely. Then when the company has reached a production point of approximately twenty cars a week, or one thousand a year, considerable profit would be realized, with which the company could expand and subsequently put it on the market.

Board of Directors.

This new company would take advantage of the old company's mistakes, continued Mr. Dubois, and be controlled by a board of directors instead of by one individual person. Besides, of the whole capital subscribed to the company, capitalized at $2,000,000, there would be only a small percentage retained by those who form the company.

Local Interests.

After fully explaining all that had been planned in advance, Mr. Dubois presented the following proposition to the local shareholders in Birmingham Motors, Limited:

The new company are in need of ready cash, and as it takes money to make money, they are falling back on the old stockholders for part of the needed funds, and this in protection of the latters' own interests. Out of the first $50,000 required for the projected syndicate, which is divided into one thousand dollar interests, five interests of it has been set aside for the stockholders of Birmingham Motors Ltd. This small amount can easily be raised if those shareholders pay $1.50 on each share they hold, to guard their own money. Furthermore, all who pay this $1.50 on each of their shares would receive the equivalent amount of stock from the new company to what they held in the old company.

As the new company would be capitalised for a smaller amount than the old concern, the number of shares would consequently be smaller, though really equivalent to the same value. This plan would work on the ratio of two to three.

The new organisation's stock, emphasised the speaker, would be of greater value than Birmingham Motors Ltd. ever dreamed theirs would reach.

In regard to when the proposed new company would need the cash referred to, Mr. Dubois said the first $50,000 would be spent within the next sixty to ninety days, so that 50 per cent of the $5,000 should be supplied within the next ten days and the remainder in from thirty to sixty days. Any longer delay would prove useless to the company.

The shareholders of Birmingham Motors, Limited, present voted in favor of the $1.50 share proposition; the money raised to be held in hand by the secretary until the remaining local shareholders voice their opinion on the project.

The meeting was adjourned, to be resumed at the Public Library on Tuesday at 8 p.m.

Early Advertising Copy

Better service can be given advertisers who hand in their copy EARLY IN THE FORENOON or the evening before.

This is particularly true just now when Advertisers find it highly profitably to use the columns of The Daily Examiner, which goes into nearly every home in the city of Peterborough, and the outside villages and rural routes. Total circulation 7,500 copies.

NOTICE

The Council of the Corporation of the Township of North Monaghan has constructed as a local improvement a sidewolk on the North side of Mcill street, between Lock and Park streets and on the West side of Lock street northerly from McGill street, ane hundred and twenty-one feet.

The cost of the work is $1,938.56. The special rate per foot frontage is $1.04. The special assessment is to be in fifteen annual instalments.

The estimated lifetime of the work is fifteen years.

A Court of Revision will be held on the Fifteenth day of December, 1922, at Two o'clock in the afternoon in the Court House in the City of Peterborough for the purpose of hearing complaints against the proposed assessment or the inaccuracy of frontage measurement and any other complaint which persons interested may desire to make and which is by Law cognizable by the Court.

Dated the 29th day of November, 1922.

Mrs. Pankhurst Gave Stirring Address on Social Hygiene

Strong Appeal Was Made Before a Crowded House For Enlightenment on Conditions Which Are Sapping Strength of the Nation.

TO SPEAK TO-DAY.

Mrs. Emeline Pankhurst spoke before a crowded house at the Grand Opera House last evening, under the auspices of the local branch of the Canadian Social Hygiene Council, on the subject of "Social Hygiene."

In a brief introduction, Mrs. Pankhurst referred to her previous visit to Peterborough when she said she was accorded the most enthusiastic reception of all her way effort. Her present visit is part of a great crusade against those malignant diseases which seem to be the inevitable outcome of war's experience and one of the things that the great catastrophy had clearly shown was the great and pressing need for social reform.

The results of the medical examinations of the men of Canada who were drafted for military service showed the appalling number of fifteen per cent. of the total infected with a venereal disease. These were men she said who, through lack of training and lack of a knowledge of the fundamental and underlying facts of life had been rendered unfit to serve their country in either peace or war.

The result of these findings had been the gathering of a convention of army medical officers, provincial health authorities and men and women actively engaged in social service work, at Ottawa immediately after the war, where every means was discussed for the cure and prevention of these dread diseases. The result was that the federal government was persuaded to make the largest grant ever made for health purposes, to be used in stamping out the plague. This money was to be divided among the provinces on the condition that each province raise a sum equal to that granted it, the whole to be used for the cure and prevention of venereal diseases. Legislation was also passed making it compulsory to report such cases immediately they were discovered, thus giving the health authorities a chance to control them, at least equal to their opportunities when dealing with other communicable diseases.

It was found, however, that these laws were not enough, for a law which has not public opinion solidly behind it, is extremely difficult to enforce. In other words the public had to be educated in the matter of combating this menace and as a result the Canadian Social Hygiene Council came into being.

Its first name, the Canadian Council for Combating Venereal Diseases was deliberately chosen in order to bring the work forcibly before the public. In the past people have been playing the part of the ostrich and acting as if venereal diseases did not exist simply because they were kept under cover, while it is true of this evil as all others that "evil flourishes in darkness."

She told of some of the serious cases that had come under her direct observation, many of them being cases of innocent victims who had contracted the disease through the misdeeds of others. She told of the many little children she had seen, while a member of the Board of Guardians, who were condemned to go through life blind, deformed, crippled and in misery in payment of the sins of the generations before them. Fifty per cent. of the cases of blindness she said, could be traced to venereal diseases.

In giving some statistics of the ravages of the disease she said that in Canada 20,000 babies died every year before they were twelve months old, the great majority of whom died from the effects of venereal disease.

Mrs. Pankhurst will speak this evening at St. Paul's church at 8 o'clock. This meeting is intended primarily for the young people, but all will be welcome. To-morrow afternoon she will speak at the Library at 3.30 o'clock under the auspices of the Local Council of Women. This meeting is open to all ladies.

Andrew is Banished On Treason Charge

LONDON, December 4, Canadian Press. — Prince Andrew has been sentenced to perpetual banishment by the court martial sitting at Athens. In addition he will suffer degradation in the army.

The refusal of Prince Andrew to obey orders resulted in defeat for the Greeks in the campaign at the Sanagaris River, acording to General Papoulis. Had the second army attacked victory was possible.

General Papoules admitted that Prince Andrew had not been dismissed from his command because he was the King's brother.

ATHENS, December 4. Canadian Press. — Prince Andrew and his wife, the Princess Alice, embarked at Phalaron this afternoon aboard a warship. It is expected that they will be taken to England.

INQUIRY ASKED INTO ALLEGED JAIL MARRIAGE

Hon. W. E. Raney Asked By Carleton County Council to Investigate Report of Ceremony Performed at County Jail.

A RE-MARRIAGE.

OTTAWA, December 4. Canadian Press. — Hon. W. E. Raney, the Attorney General of Ontario, was on Saturday asked by the Carleton County Council to conduct an inquiry into the protest lodged by Rev W. H. Steacy, pastor of All Saints Westboro Anglican church, and Rev Robert Jefferson, pastor of the Church of the Ascension, regarding the performance of a marriage ceremoney which was performed in the county jail last Monday.

Rev. Steacy and Rev. Jefferson appeared before the members of the council on Thursday and demanded of the council that it take some action in regard to the performance of a marriage ceremony which had taken place in the jail, whereby Ward A. Bagby, a Protestant had been remarried to Florence Bagby, a Roman Catholic, the ceremony being performed by a priest of the Roman Catholic Church.

The protest lodged by Rev. Steacy was to the effect that the form of ceremony performed in the jail constituted a re-marriage of an already married couple, Rev. Mr. Steacy maintaining that the pair had previously been married under the civil law of the British Empire, the re-marriage had been a mockery.

He also contended and protested that the ceremony had been unnecessary and implied that the law of the Roman Catholic Chuch was above the civil law of the law. The provisions of the civil law, Rev. Mr. Steacy maintained, gave all the authority necessary for the performance of the first marriage.

Bagby and his wife were some time ago convicted in the police court of infractions against the provisions of the Drug and Narcotic Act.

U.S. DELEGATES TO ASK OPEN STRAITS.

LAUSANNE, Dec. 4.—(Canadian Press.)— Indications are that the American delegates will confine their activities in the Dardanelles question to insisting that the Straits be open in time of peace to all United Sttaes ships, whether merchant vessels or warships.

The United States, it is asserted, will probably refuse to be drawn into taking sides on the question of the Turkish right to fortify the Straits, merely asking for an open waterway between the Mediterranean and the Black Sea.

OBITUARY

JAMES SAMUEL WALKER.

WELCOME, Dec. 4.—The funeral of James Samuel Walker, a well known agriculturist and driver, who passed away suddenly on Thursday at his home in Port Hope, took place to the Welcome cemetery on Saturday. Very much sympathy is felt for his widow and other relatives in their loss. A brother William Walker, resides at Zion. Mr. Walker had a farm at Zion and on Thursday motored out to see about some work that was being done. At noon he complained of illness and about an hour later left to return to his home. Upon his arrival there his condition was found to be serious, and a short time afterwards he lapsed into unconsciousness, passing away shortly after seven o'clock that evening.

SERIOUS FIRE AT STURGEON FALLS

Two Men Met Death in Early Morning Blaze, the Origin of Which is Unknown.

STURGEON FALLS, Ont. Dec. 4.—(Canadian Press)—Fire which started about 230 Saturday morning it is believed, between the bar-room and the kitchen, completely destroyed the Pacific Hotel here and caused the death of Camile Ferguson, aged 32, bartender, and Donald Taylor, a teamster in the employ of the George Gordon Lumber Company, at Cache Bay, a guest for the night. A boarder, Otto Christmann, jeweler at Stugeon Falls, whose home is in Beachburg Ont. is suffering from a broken ankle received when he jumped from the third story of the building, and from serious burns on the face and hands. He is in North Bay hospital.

The hotel which was owned by Oscar Gallipeau was a three story brick veneer building which was erected last summer and opened for the accommodation of guests only a few months ago. The loss is estimated at about $25,000 of which only a part is covered by insurance. There were thirty rooms in the hotel, twenty of which were filled on the morning of the fire. The remains of the two victims were found among the ruins. A coroner's jury Saturday afternoon returned a verdict of death from fire of unknown origin which occurred in the Pacific Hotel on the morning of Saturday, December 2.

PEACE PARLEY AT WASTINGTON

Conference of Central American States Opens To-Day.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 4.—(United Press)—The Conference of Central American states convening in Washington today has as its first aim the negotiation of a treaty, or treaties, to make effective those provisions of the treaties signed at Washington in December, 1907, which experience has shown to be effective in maintaining friendly relations and co-operating among the Central American states.

The origin of the treaties of 1907 and their purpose now therefore become of primary importance.

In 1907 a war ended between Honduras and Nicaragua. Shortly afterward a conflict threatened between Nicaragua and Salvador. To avert this conflict a peace conference was proposed by President Roosevelt and President Porfirio Diaz of Mexico. After a preliminary conference in September, a formal conference was convened in November and December at Washington. The participants were delegates of the five Central American Republics and diplomats of the United States and Mexico.

The importance of achievements of the conference of 1907 were: A treaty of peace and amity, stating that the contracting parties sought to preserve peace and pledging adjustment of differences; second a supplementary convention aiming to discourage the re-election of presidents and otherwise to curb revolutions; third, the establishment of a permanent tribunal at Cartago, in Costa Rica, comprising one delegate from each state to take action regarding certain specified controversies.

Although these arrangements had some effect in promoting political stability in Central America, their aims were never entirely fulfilled.

During the last fifteen years various political movements have occurred among the five republics, most important of which were steps toward a Central American union. This union could not be completed partly because of the nonparticipation of Nicaragua, and during the last two years there has been a general condition of political unrest among the Central Republic.

Upon the initiative of Nicaragua, a meeting was held last August 20, aboard the U.S.S. Tacoma, in Fonseca Bay, between the presidents of Nicaragua, Honduras and Salvador, looking toward the establishment of peaceful relations between these three countries. The call for the present conference at Washington is the result of that conference.

At the meeting aboard the Tacoma, the governments of Gautemala and Costa Rica were invited to accept the agreement reached there. They replied that such adherence was not necessary as they regarded the treaty of 1907 a still in force and intended to abide by its positions.

This revelation of a unanimous wish for peaceful solution of Central American difficulties paved the way for the United States State Department to issue an invitation for a new conference at Washington, in which the former treaties would be revised and enlarged and other important matters discussed.

The result was the issuance of an invitation through the American Legations in capitals of the five Central American Republics for the conference now convened.

RATES REDUCED.

LONDON, Dec. 4. — (Canadian Press.)—The Canadian Pacific Railway yesterday announced revised rates on its Trans-Atlantic liners, mainly reductions in third class fares.

Meighen Charges Attempt To Ruin National Railways

(PERTH, Ont., Dec. 4.—(Canadian Press Staff Correspondent.) — Charging that there was an influential circle within the government whose dearest wish was the failure of the national railways and that he believed the lines would be made the "political machine of the Gouin-King Government," Rt. Hon. Arthur Meighen, Conservative leader, speaking here Saturday night in support of Dr. R. F. Preston, party candidate in Lanark, declared that the action of the government in dispensing with D. B. Hanna and the old Board of Management was a "crime against the taxpayers of Canada." Influential men entered the government for the purpose of seeing the lines did not succeed, and Sir Lomer Gouin and others, had declared the country would be ruined if the railways proved successful, he declared.

Mr. Meighen addressed approximately 1800 people in Balderson's Theatre and about 500 more at an overflow meeting in the town hall. During the afternoon he addressed a meeting at Lanark village.

The Conservative leader's charge against the government was that it had systematically "tricked" the intelligence of the people and was guilty of "befooling" the public. The government's record on all its policies was alike; they had failed to carry out its pledges and during the general election campaign, Liberal speakers had preached free trade in the west, while Sir Lomer Gouin and Hon. Ernest Lapointe had been preaching protection in the east, he declared.

The government, Mr. Meighen said, claimed that it had revised the tariff downward, but this year the average tariff was 18 per cent. while under the last year of the Conservative government it was only 13.7 per cent. "Mr. King had better not revise it downwards any more," Mr. Meighen declared.

Further Mr. Meighen charged that the government was attempting to "vulgarly bribe" the people of Smiths Falls and Carleton Place by inferring that should David Findlay, the Liberal candidate, be elected Government orders for railway connecting rods would be placed with industries in the two towns.

Mr. Meighen criticized the new directorate of the National lines as being inexperienced in railway matters and declared that Sir Henry Thornton had never had an hour's experience on Canadian railways. He was an experiment at $50,000 a year. "I hope he will succeed," Mr. Meighen added.

Mr. Meighen again reviewed the Near East crisis and declared that the government had failed when the empire was in peril. The Canadian government had even failed to give parliament a chance to say "yes" or "no" to the British Near East request, he declared.

Senator G. D. Robertson and Dr. R. F. Preston also addressed the meetings.

GOVERNMENT RESIGNED.

LISBON, Dec. 4. — (Canadian Press)—The new Portuguese Government, which has been in office three days, resigned Saturday after the election of a member of the Opposition as president of Parliament.

The President of the Republic has not accepted the resignation and will not do so until he has conferred with the political leaders in Parliament.

TWO KILLED IN WRECK.

BAKERSFIELD, Calif. Dec. 4.—(Canadian Press)— Two persons were killed and a number injured when Santa Fe Passenger Train No. 22, from San Francisco, jumped the tracks about five miles out of this city at 5 o'clock Saturday evening. Wet tracks are believed to have been the cause. The engineer was killed. Charley Morley the mail clerk, also was reported killed.

LIVE STOCK EXHIBIT OPENS AT CHICAGO

Valuable Animals Entered From All Parts of the World — Judging Has Started.

CHICAGO, Dec. 4.—(Canadian Press)—The twenty third annual International Live Stock Exposition swung into action at the Union Stock Yards here Saturday with 10,000 head of blooded cattle, horses, hogs and sheeps competing for honors. Stock raisers from nearly every State in the Union and many Canadian Provinces were included among the exhibitors and a number of European countries had stock entered.

Judging has been started to determine the winners in the 900 classes entered which will participate in the $100,000 in premiums.

Prominent among arrivals were Ministers of Agriculture from various Canadian Provinces, as well as stock men from Mexico, South America and Europe.

The hay and grain show held in connection with the exposition includes entries by the Duke of Sutherland, the Province of Alberta, Canada and other Canadian Provinces, as well as most of the grain producing States of the Union.

Iowa State College won first place in the collegiate live stock contest, with Purdue and Kansas placing second and third respectively in a field of twenty contestants.

SHIP ON FIRE.

ST. JOHN'S Nfld., Dec. 4.—(Canadian Press)—Fire, which started in Number 2 Hold of the steamer Canadian Gunner Saturday night as she lay at her berth here, was burning fiercely yesterday, despite the efforts of the city fire departtment. The hold contained hay, flour and foodstuffs.

The Canadian Gunner sailed from Montreal for St. John's on November 25.

BOOK TELLS OF SHARP CLASHES FOCH AND HAIG

Claim is Advanced That Foch Wanted to Attack on July 12 But Haig Declined.

CANADIAN RECORDS.

OTTAWA, December 4. Canadian Press. — Official reports of the Canadian Corps ad a highly important chapter to the Foch-Haig controversy aroused by the publication of "Sir Douglas Haig's Command," by A. B. Dewar and Lieut. Col. Boraston.

The theme of the book is that it was Haig and not Foch who planned the counter offensive that won the war. Records of the Canadian Corps do not touch on the sharp clashes between Haig and Foch alleged in the book but they show that suggestions made by Sir Arthur Currie, Commander of the Canadian Corps, were adopted in the line of attack that led to the first crossing of the Hindenburg line.

The book claims inter alia, that on August 12, 1918, Foch wanted to attack at once on the Roye-Chaulnes positions, but Haig was opposed on the ground that the German defences had stiffened and that in attacking again south of the Somme "we should incur heavy casualties and receive a severe set-back."

The next day Haig proved the strength of the German position by a reconnaissance. He informed Foch and sketched out an "alternative and far more promising and scientific plan of attack north of Arras." Foch according to the book continued to insist on Haig attacking the Roye-Chaulne positions, Haig declined and Foch eventually agreed to Haig's plan.

A Fascinating Gift—that charms through all the years

GLISTENING beneath the mellow touch of stately candles, catching the ruddy lights of rich mahogany, sparkling over the lacy patterns spread by snowy tea sets, fine silverware gives a charm to hospitality—it helps to entertain; it helps to make a home; it fascinates and charms through all the years.

Holmes & Edwards SILVER INLAID and SUPER-PLATE represent the highest achievement of the modern silversmith's craft. Wear cannot mar its wonderful lustre and finish for it is protected at those points usually marred by friction.

In SILVER INLAID, blocks of sterling silver are actually laid in with delicate care before plating. In SUPER-PLATE the protection consists of an extra heavy coat of sterling silver at the wear points.

THE ENEMY OF SOCIETY.

Public interest in the work of the Canadian Social Hygiene Council, a branch of which has been formed in Peterborough, should be stimulated by the visit of Mrs. Pankhurst, who commenced a series of addresses on Social Hygiene at the Grand Opera House last evening.

Mrs. Pankhurst's subject is not a pretty one—but it is of vital importance.

The greatest enemy that society has at the present time is venereal disease, and the best ally that that scourge possesses is secrecy.

For years people have tried to shut their eyes to the fact that venereal diseases existed.

Instead of accepting it as a plague that had to be fought and defeating it by education and publicity, we have helped its inroads by being afraid to talk about it—and as a result many victims have learned too late what it means.

The Canadain Social Hygiene Council is doing its utmost to arouse Cannadians to the danger, and to make them realize the necessiay of prevention.

It should have the support of the community, not only from moral grounds, but from a health standpoint, and Mrs. Pankhurst in enlisting in the great battle on behalf of a better Canada is doing a fine service for humanity.

PETERBOROUGH'S DUTY.

Organizations such as the Chamber of Commerce and the Rotary Club have announced their willingness to support the City Council in any reasonable action they may take in regard to the Northern Ontario Fire Relief Fund.

The matter will be settled at to-night's meeting of the Council, and the indications are that the City Fathers will pass the responsibility on to the people by deciding to conduct a campaign to raise Peterborough's quota by voluntary subscriptions.

If such is the verdict, it will be the duty of the Chamber of Commerce and other organizations to energetically interest themselves in the drive and to actively support the effort to raise by donations an amount equal to the desired half mill on the city's assessment.

The need of the Northerners is so great and the call is so urgent that the Council would be justified in passing a grant for the amount of Peterborough's quota and making a special levy upon the taxpayers.

That would ensure quick results, and the individual taxpayer would not be heavily hit, while at the same time no one would escape.

The voluntary method throws the responsibility upon those citizens whose generosity is played upon in support of every organization needing funds.

The decision rests with the Council, and whatever they may decide, it is to be hoped they will have the loyal support of the citizens.

With winter closing in upon the northland, the one big fact that stands out is that whether by voluntary subscriptions or special grant, Peterborough cannot, in the name of humanity, do anything else but raise the amount she has been called upon for by the Relief Committee.

The small cash quota so far subscribed here is a long way from wiping out the city's obligation in this most important matter.

THE HIGH COST OF ROADS.

With Ald. Hamilton's complaint in regard to the lack of information from the Suburban Area Commission, in submitting a bill to the city of $8,000 for work done under the Commission's direction on suburban roads, many citizens will be in agreement.

The council, being represented on the Commission, it seems strange that no reports have been received as to the operations of the Commission, or any to what work has been done.

Apparently the City Council is considered to have no interest in the matter beyond providing the money for road work about which its members have no information.

If, as Ald. Hamilton pointed out, the work ends at the rural end of the suburban area on some roads, and on others suburban work is being done ten or twelve miles into the country, the Council most certainly should have the details of the work submitted to them, and have the full confidence of the Suburban Commission.

Incidentally the bill received at the same time from the Ontario Department of Highways is large enough to make city motorists decide that it is their duty to refrain from destroying the Provincial Highway by speeding. For the work done on the 4.27 miles outside of the city limits up to the end of last year, Peterborough must pay $14,688.23, and it is not expected that the levy for this year's operations will be light.

The roads that Bigsg built, the ratepapers will realize, are costing a lot of money, and it is up to the motoring section of the city's population to see that the cost of maintenance is kept down as far as possible.

TOO MANY SPECIAL WEEKS.

Are there too many tag days, too many special promotion weeks, too constant a series of appeals to the public to interest itself definitely during a given period in some certain praiseworthy object? asks the Star Weekly.

Exchanges apparently think so. The Detroit Free Press expresses the hope that while special weeks are being invented someone will invent a week in which all kinds of propaganda will be barred.

The Woodstock Sentinel-Review says as to this that "a good many people are beginning to feel the need for tranquillity."

The Ottawa Citizen suggests:

"This is Telephone Week. These 'weeks' will soon exceed 52 a year. But there is still room for a few more if we 'double up.' For example, let's have a Don't Play Your Phonograph Week, a Don't Beat Your Wife Week, a No Rent Week, a No Rudolph Valentino Week, a No Tip Week, an Anti-Special Week Week, and a No Increase in the Cost of Living Week. Like Tele-me of these would serve a very useful

Underneath all t persiflage there is a stratum of common-sense. Pe feel that many worthy movements are being "syste ed to death"—the death of public patience if not of the movements. And the oft-recurrence of these "special weeks" detracts from the uniqueness which was intended to constitute their appeal.

ARMOUR'S HILL AS A PARK.

It is expected that at to-night's meeting of the City Council steps will be taken for the submission of a by-law to the ratepayers at the January elections, providing for the purchase of the Armour Hill property for park purposes.

The endorsation of this proposition by the Chamber of Commerce shows that the desirability of securing this splendid site is recognized by the city's businessmen.

The general feeling seems to be that the property should be purchased by the city when it is available, at a reasonable price, even if its development into a park might be postponed.

The larger cities have found it a very expensive matter to provide parks, simply because the choice sites where not snapped up when they could have been secured at a minimum cost.

In few cases did the municipal government of these places plan for the future, and the result of their short-sighted policy is being harvested to-day when exhorbitant sums are being paid to provide the breathing places that could have been bought for a song a few decades ago.

Peterboro has a chance to benefit by the experience of the larger centres, and should not lose the opportunity that offers itself of adding the Armour Hill property to the city's park system.

The chance may not always be available.

The ratepayers rejected the proposal when it was brought before them several years ago but public sentiment has changed considerably since that time and the bylaw, should the Council to-night decide to submit it, should be carried by a large majority.

CIVIL SERVICE REFORM LEAGUE.

In addressing the Civil Service Professional Institute last Tuesday afternoon, Hon. Dr. Roche, chairman of the Civil Service Commission, emphasized the need of an organization operating in the Dominion along similar lines to the National Civil Service Reform League which for many years past has been doing yeoman service in the republic to the south for the purification of the public service by the introduction and maintenance of the merit system.

It is now over four years since the principles of the merit system were applied to the Public Service of Canada as a whole, when the Civil Service Act of 1918 was placed on the statute book. This tremendous step forward was made without any special appeal to public opinion or the application of public pressure upon the country's legislators, and it is a significant compliment to the public men of Canada that this progressive legislation was adopted by Parliament so entirely on its own merits. As a result, the Public Service to-day in this Dominion is open to every citizen, man or woman, who can measure up to the requirements thereof, and not, as in the old days, accessible only to those who have friends at court or who can exercise sufficient political pull to obtain recognition and employment.

That the results even at this early stage in its history are fully justifying the faith of the advocates of the new policy must be and is acknowledged by all right-thinking citizens who have taken the trouble to inform themselves as to the facts. At the same time, it must not be forgotten that there will always be a re-actionary element, particularly in the ranks of the professional politicians who, in the very nature of things, are and must always be antagonistic to a system which offers them nothing in the way of spoils. Where selfish interest is the main, and indeed the only consideration, this active antagonism will never sleep, and it can only be offset by eternal vigilance on the part of every citizen who desires a clean non-partisan Public Service. An organization such as the proposed Civil Service Reform League will keep the public constantly and fully informed in Civil Service matters, make the people better acquainted with the work of government, warn the country of pending danger and foster and maintain a proper attitude of hostility to any attempted return to patronage. There is abundant evidence that thoroughly representative outstanding men in all sections of the community are or can be practically and continuously interested in public affairs, if there are means available for keeping them informed thereon; and at no period in the history of Canada was the need greater or the opportunity more promising than now. It would appear, therefore, that the remarks of the chairman of the Civil Service Commission are exceptionally timely just now, and The Journal gladly takes the opportunity to offer a wholehearted endorsation of the proposition enunciated by that gentleman.—Ottawa Journal.

EDITORIAL NOTES AND COMMENT.

The hunting season is over so far as the Elks of Edmonton are concerned.

The penitentiary sentences inflicted upon two Toronto motorists responsible for the death of a woman killed by their car will do more to stop reckless driving than Sir Thomas White's letters on the subject, although the latter are valuable in the warning they give.

Christmas is just three weeks away. Why not get rid of the bulk of that shopping this week?

The open winter weather prophets are having their inning, and here's wishing them luck.

LITERARY GEMS.

Hold fast, Young Canada!
You've shown the world you're brave,
The times now test your wisdom,
So let no lawless wave
Flood o'er your land, and level
Your glory to its grave.

Think hard, Dear Canada!
Good things are worth your care;
Let God, and Home and Honor
Be jewels, precious, rare,
And Peace, and Law and Order,
Their setting true and fair.

Stand fast, our Canada!
Your past had noble root;
No future can be worthy
That scorns its natal shoot;
Then let your growth be steady,
And rich shall be your fruit.

WRONG KIND OF HOMES

DETROIT, December 2.—"Many girls without a compass to guide their barque on the sea of life are the result of the wrong kind of homes," said Miss Jean Hamilton, dean of women at he University of Michigan, addressing the members of the Catholic Study Club here.

"These girls," continued Dean Hamilton, "are merely swayed by 'I like' or 'I don't like,' and their barque drifts on, sometimes fortunately to a happy shore, but often the reverse is true. We must give the boy and girl a measure of the possible and impossible; so that they will be able to swing their own barque.

"I would recommend the small college for the girl who has not had a big understanding training at home, but if homes have a vision of the purpose of life and the children's part in it, those children will not find the larger colleges and universities full of pitfalls. The home and college should be partners.

"When a girl and her mother are friends, the girl does not hink of her world as a girl's world and her mother's world as that of older people. Their worlds are the same.

"Character without intelligence is as pathetic as intelligence without character; the two must go together However, we can not set up standards in the home that can not stand outside. We must remember that there are other homes where other standards may prevail, and that the old-fashioned barriers have been broken down for ever.

"The home is the biggest part of education, but it does not end there. Young people must get the other side of it. Some day we will recognise that what is right for a man is just as right for a woman, and there will be but one standard of conduct."

RUNAWAY GIRL LOSES DARE TO RIDE SOUTH

She Reaches Philadelphia From Irvington, N.J., on a Horse—Then the Police Interfere.

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 4.—Antoinette Miller, tall, husky and 19, was arrested by detectives as a runaway when she rode into Philadelphia from her home at Irvington, N. J., on a big sorrel horse.

She rode out again this afternoon, but this time as a passenger on a train with her mother, Mrs. Ignatius Miller, sitting beside her. The horse, which is Antoinette's pride and joy, sharing her affections with Grover, her collie, remained in the police van stables, to be shipped home tomorrow.

The police, in arresting athletic Antoinette, caused her to back down on a dare, made by girl friends in Irvington. She was on her way to Jacksonville, Fla., where she had letters of introduction, and had agreed to eat Christmas dinner there.

The girl came to grief when she applied for lodging for herself and her horse at the Y. W. C. A. The Travelers' Aid was informed and the detectives were informed of the girl's presence. They held her as a runaway until Mr. and Mrs. Miller had been told, and Mrs. Miller came on to take her daughter home.

When the young traveler arrived at the Y. W. C. A. suspicion was aroused by her appearance, as well as the fact of her having ridden into the city on horseback. She was dressed in a costume bearing the colors of Princeton University, with an orange and black Princeton sweater, orange and black puttees, khaki trousers and an army officer's cap.

WIFE IN DEAD FAMILY SOUGHT INDIAN CURE

Ohio Authorities Convinced She Killed Others in Religious Despondent Mania.

LANCASTER, Ohio, Dec. 4.—Dr Karackas Red Wood, a Circleville "Indian healer," who says he cures by "thought and prayer," was appealed to by Mrs. Florence Henderson, who, with her husband and four children, was found dead in their home here, in an effort to rid herself of real and fancied ills, it was revealed here today after a search of the Henderson house. A letter from Red Wood, dated Sept. 1, offered to cure Mrs. Henderson by the "Hindoo occult absent method."

This helps to substantiate the theory officials are working on now, they asserted, that the woman killed herself and her family in a fit of mental depression, brooding over imaginary ills.

Red Wood's letter acknowledged the receipt of $1 and a lock of "auburn hair," and asserted that his "new sister" could be cured. An unmailed letter found in the Henderson home, written by the dead woman, dated Sept. 9, noted the receipt of Red Wood's missive and expressed gratification that "I can be cured."

Red Wood told an Associated Press representative in a telephone conversation tonight that he had never seen Mrs. Henderson, that he never had prescribed any medicine for her, and that after writing her had never heard from her again.

As a further indication of a motive for the tragedy, officials said a scrapbox was found with a notation in pencil on the bottom reading "Ezekiel, 16-6." This reads: "And when I passed by thee and saw thee polluted in thine own blood, I said unto thee, thou must in thy blood live. Yea, I said unto thee, thou must in thy blood live."

This would indicate, said the offic-

The RED HOUSE MYSTERY

by A. A. MILNE

BEGIN HERE TODAY

The body of the ne'er-do-well brother,
ROBERT ABLETT, was found on the floor of the locked office of The Red House, and MARK ABLETT, bachelor proprietor of the country estate, was nowhere to be found. In the eyes of Inspector Birch, it was clear that Mark had shot Robert, particularly since everyone knew that Mark learned with disgust and annoyance of Robert's return from his 15-year stay in Australia.
But the circumstances were mysterious. The shot was heard two minutes after Robert's arrival, and when ANTONY GILLINGHAM, a gentleman adventurer, entered the house to visit Mark's guest,
BILL BEVERLEY, he found
MATT CAYLEY, Mark's constant companion, pounding on the locked door and demanding admittance. The two men entered through a window and found the body. How could Mark have locked the door if the keys were on the outside? puzzled Antony. He discusses some of the mysterious clues with Bill Beverley.

GO ON WITH THE STORY

Antony smoked thoughtfully for a little. Then he took his pipe out of his mouth and turned to his friend.

"Are you prepared to be the complete Watson?" he asked.

"Watson?"

"Do-you-follow-me-Watson; that one. Are you prepared to have quite obvious things explained to you, to ask futile questions, to give me chances of scoring off you. Because it all helps."

"My dear Tony," said Bill delightedly, "need you ask?" Antony said nothing, and Bill went on happily to himself, "I perceive from the strawberry-mark on your shirt-front that you had strawberries for dessert. Holmes, you astonish me. Tut, tut, you know my methods. Where is the tobacco? The tobacco is in the Persian slipper. Can I leave my practice for a week? I can."

Antony smiled and went on smoking. After waiting hopefully for a minute or two, Bill said in a firm voice:

"Well then, Holmes, I feel bound to ask you if you have deduced anything. Also whom do you suspect?"

Antony began to talk

"Do you remember," he said, "one of Holmes' little scores over Watson about the number of steps up to the Baker Street lodging? Poor old Watson had been up and down them a thousand times, but he had never thought of counting them, whereas Holmes had counted them as a matter of course, and knew that there were seventeen. And that was supposed to be the difference between observation and non-observation. Watson was crushed again, and Holmes appeared to him more amazing than ever. Now, it always seemed to me that in that matter Holmes was the ass, and Watson the sensible person. What on earth is the point of keeping in your head an unnecessary fact like that? If you really want to know at any time the number of steps to your lodging, you can ring up your landlady and ask her. I've been up and down the steps of the club a thousand times, but if you asked me to tell you at this moment how many steps there are I couldn't do it. Could you?"

"I certainly couldn't," said Bill.

"But if you really wanted to know," said Antony casually, with a sudden change of voice, "I could find out for you without even bothering to ring up the hall-porter."

Bill was puzzled as to why they were talking about the club steps, but he felt it his duty to say that he did want to know how many there were.

"Right," said Antony. "I'll find out."

He closed his eyes.

"I'm walking up St. James' Street," he said slowly. "Now I've come to the club and I'm going past the smoking-room windows—one—two—three—four. Now I'm at the steps. I turn in and begin going up them. One—two—three—four—five—six, then a broad step; six—seven—eight—nine, another broad step; nine—ten—eleven. Eleven—I'm inside. Good morning, Rogers. Fine day again." With a little start he opened his eyes and came back to his present surroundings. He turned to Bill with a smile. "Eleven," he said. Count them the next time you're there. Eleven—and now I hope I shall forget it again."

Bill was distinctly interested.

"That's rather hot," he said. "Expound."

"Well, I can't explain it, whether it's something in the actual eye, or something in the brain, or what, but I have got rather an uncanny habit of recording things unconsciously. You know that game where you look at a tray full of small objects for three minutes, and then turn away and try to make a list of them. It means a devil of a lot of concentration for the ordinary person, if he wants to get his list complete, but in some odd way I manage to do it without concentration at all."

"I SAW THE KEY OF THE BILLIARD ROOM."

"I should think that's rather a useful gift for an amateur detective. You ought to have gone into the profession before"

"Well, it is rather useful. It's rather surprising, you know, to a stranger. Let's surprise Cayley with it, shall we?"

"How?"

"Well, let's ask him—" Antony stopped and looked at Bill comically —"let's ask him what he's going to do with the key of the office."

For a moment Bill did not understand.

"Key of the office?" he said vaguely. "You don't mean—Tony! What do you mean? Good God! do you mean that Cayley—But what about Mark?"

"I don't know where Mark is—that's another thing I want to know—but I'm quite certain that he hasn't got the key of the office with him. Because Cayley's got it."

"Are you sure?"

"Of course, I don't really know that he's got it, but I do know that he had it. I know that when I came on him this afternoon, he had just locked the door and put the key in his pocket."

"You mean you saw him at the time, but that you've only just remembered it—reconstructed it—in the way you were explaining just now?"

"No. I didn't see him. But I did see something. I saw the key of the billiard-room."

"Where?"

"Outside the billiard-room door."

"Outside? But it was inside when we looked just now."

"Exactly."

"Who put it there?"

"Obviously Cayley."

"But—"

"Let's go back to this afternoon. I don't remember noticing the billiard-room key at the time; I must have done so without knowing. Probably when I saw Cayley banging at the door I may have wondered sub-consciously whether the key of the room next to it would fit. Well, when I was sitting out by myself on that seat just before you came along, I went over the whole scene in my mind, and I suddenly saw the billiard-room key there—outside. And I began to wonder if the office key had been outside too. When Cayley came up, I told you my idea and you were both interested. But Cayley was just a shade too interested. I daresay you didn't notice it, but he was."

"By Jove!"

"Well, of course that proved nothing; and the key business didn't really prove anything, because whatever side of the door the other keys were, Mark might have locked his own private room from the inside sometimes. But I piled it on, and pretended that it was enormously important, and quite altered the case altogether, and having got Cayley thoroughly anxious about it, as I expected, he couldn't resist. He altered the keys and gave himself away entirely."

"But the library key was still outside. Why didn't he alter that?"

"Because he's a clever devil. For one thing, the inspector had been in the library, and might possibly have noticed it already. And for another—" Antony hesitated.

"What?" said Bill, after waiting for him to go on.

"It's only guesswork. But I fancy that Cayley was thoroughly upset about the key business. He didn't want to commit himself definitely to the statement that the key was either outside or inside. He wanted to leave it vague. It was safest that way."

"I see," said Bill slowly.

But his mind was elsewhere. He was wondering suddenly about Cayley.

"Now then, Watson," said Antony suddenly. "It's time you said something."

"I say, Tony, do you really mean it?"

"I mean what I said, Bill. No more."

"Well, what does it amount to?"

"Simply that Robert Ablett died in the office this afternoon, and that Cayley knows exactly how he died. That's all. It doesn't follow that Cayley killed him."

"No. No, of course it doesn't." Bill gave a sigh of relief. "He's just shielding Mark, what?"

"That's the simplest explanation if you're a friend of Cayley and want to let him down lightly. But then I'm not, you see."

"Why isn't it simple, anyhow?"

"Well, let's have the explanation then, and I'll undertake to give you a simpler one afterward. Only remember—the key is on the outside of the door to start with."

"Yes; well, I don't mind that. Mark goes in to see his brother, and they quarrel and all the rest of it, just as Cayley was saying. Cayley hears the shot, and in order to give Mark time to get away, locks the door and that he can't get in. How's pretends that Mark has locked the door, and that he can't get in. How's that?"

"Hopeless, Watson, hopeless."

"Why?"

"How does Cayley know that it is Mark who has shot Robert, and not the other way round?"

"Oh!" said Bill, rather upset.

"Yes." He thought for a moment. "All right. Say that Cayley has gone into the room first, and seen Robert on the ground."

"Well?"

"Well, there you are."

"And what does he say to Mark? That it's a fine afternoon, and could he lend him a pocket-handkerchief? Or does he ask him what's happened?"

"Well, of course, I suppose he asks what happened," said Bill reluctantly.

"And what does Mark say?"

"Explains that the revolver went off accidentally during a struggle."

"Whereupon Cayley shields him by—by doing what, Bill? Encouraging him to do the damn silliest thing that any man could possibly do—confess his guilt by running away!"

TO BE WELL, LET AIR IN, SAYS COPELAND.

Emphasises the Importance of Keeping Window Open in the Sleeping Room.

NEW YORK, Dec. 4.—Following the warning of the Health Department that in this unseasonable weather pneumonia is lurking "just around the corner," Senator Health Commissioner Dr. Royal S. Copeland emphasizes the importance of keeping a window open in the sleeping room at nights. He said that it was surprising the number of persons who slept in almost air-tight heated rooms at night and honestly believed that to let in cold fresh air was to invite colds.

"In the average household or building during the entire winter it is not uncommon to find all the windows closed, heating appliances going full force, the thermometer registering around 80 degrese Fahrenheit, and the air excessively dry. An increase of colds, pneumonia, influenza and acute infectious diseases is to be expected under these conditions," he said. The most healthful temperature for the living room during the winter is just below 70 degrees. The Health Department after considerable study, set 68 degrees as a standard. But even this temperature is probably too high for the active adult.

"The excessive dryness induced by our modern method of heating should be corrected by placing a pan of water upon each radiator or in the receptacle reserved for that purpose in the hot air furnace. All rooms should be aired at frequent intervals during even the coldest days. This is best done when the rooms are temporarily unoccupied, or even when the occupants are physically active, in order to avoid chilling.

"In every bedroom during the sleeping hours a window should be open. If open air is of so great value in the treatment of tuberculosis, pneumonia and other respiratory diseases, surely it is equally valuable in their prevention. There is a trite saying that the greatest enemies of good health are overheating and overeating. This is the truth and common sense.

"Overstoking the furnace and overstoking the human machine make for inefficiency. Surely at such a time as this, when the saving of fuel is a public necessity, that is an added reason for greater attention to household heating, for overheating means waste. We should see that a proper degree of moisture is obtained, because moist heat is more efficient and healthful than dry heat."

HERRIN MASSACRE JURY STILL IS INCOMPLETE

MARION, Ill., Dec. 4.—Two-thirds of the jury to try five men charged with homicide in connection with the Herrin mine killing last June had been completed at adjournment of the Williamson County Circuit Court.

Four jurors were accepted by both the state and defense yesterday, making a total of eight, after examination of approximately 275 veniremen in four weeks. The first four jurors were accepted by both sides two weeks ago. The jury, so far, is composed of seven farmers and one miner.

Judge D. T. Hartwell, presiding instructed bailiffs to subpena a dozen more talesmen for examination today.

COULD HARDLY STAND AT TIMES

Hips, Back and Legs would Have That Tired Ache

Everett, Washington.—"For several years I have had trouble with the lowest part of my back and my hips and my legs would ache with that tired ache. I could hardly stand on my feet at times. I was always able to do my work although I did not feel good. I saw Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound advertised and having heard several praise it I decided to try it. I feel first-rate at the present time. It has done wonders for me and I keep it in the house right along. I always recommend it to others who are sick and ailing." — Mrs. J. M. SIBBERT, 4082 High St., Everett, Washington.

To do any kind of work, or to play for that matter, is next to impossible if you are suffering from some form of female trouble. It may cause your back or your legs to ache, it may make you nervous and irritable. You may be able to keep up and around, but you do not feel good.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is a medicine for women. It is especially adapted to relieve the cause of the trouble and then these annoying pains, aches and "no good" feelings disappear.

PIE SOCIAL AT YOUNG'S POINT

Was Followed By Interesting Debate — A Very Pleasant Evening Spent

YOUNG'S POINT, Dec. 4.—The pie social held in Charlton's Hall, under the auspices of the Anglican Church, proved a highly interesting, enjoyable and successful event. From 7.30 to 8.30 the guests partook of pie and tea, prepared and served by the ladies of the church.

At 8.30 the hall was well filled by an audience keenly awaiting the programme to follow, the chief feature of which was a debate conducted by four school teachers of Young's Point district. Before and after this debate several vocal items were rendered in a manner that drew hearty applause from the appreciative audience. The programme was as follows:

God Save the King and "O Canada," sung by all present.

Action song — "The Sweeping Brush Brigade," by Bessie Wilson, Olive McNaughton, Daisy Wilson, Helen Coones, Ethel Wilson.

Song—"Nancy Lee" (encore, "In Memory's Garden"), Rev. J. L. Hughes.

Action song (illustrating the days of the week)—"We are Seven," by Bessie Wilson, Ettie Bullock, Olive McNaughton, Dorothy Wilson, Helen Coones, Ethel Wilson, Daisy Wilson.

Debate—"Resolved, that Reading has Greater Educational Advantages Than Travel." For the affirmative, Miss Sage and Mr. Raddon; for the negative, Miss Rankin and Mr. Frost. Judges, Miss J. Kearney and Fred. Young.

Duet—"Mother Machree's Lullaby," by Ethel and Dorothy Wilson.

The judges' decision upon the debate.

Closing chorus — "Good-Night," by all the girls previously mentioned.

Mrs. Hughes made a capable accompanist.

The debate was exceedingly interest-holding, each side possessing a speaker of the weightier type in Mr. Raddon and Miss Rankin, while Miss Sage's racy wit and Mr. Frost's matter of fact, go-a-head attitude, effectively drove home the arguments brought forward.

All the speakers had evidently given much time to the preparation of their arguments for assuring a triumph for their side. There was a clever exposition of point and counterpoint. "The accuracy and reliability of knowledge gained through reading developed the same characteristics in the reader," it was claimed; while on the other hand it was ably demonstrated that "travel corrects false impressions often gained from reading." On the negative side it was contended that there is a large amount of knowledge of countries, people, etc., that can only be gained by travelling. On the affirmative side, it was asserted that "there is a fund of knowledge only to be gained by reading as it is denied travellers. For instance, "Whoever heard of a person taking a trip to the moon?" wittily asked the speaker. Amongst other good points set forth were the following: "Through reading a man can himself qualify for a higher position in life while following his present calling." "Good literature develops deep thought." "All-round reading makes for the independence of thought." "Reading keeps a person level-headed." "A traveller is apt to be less self-centred than the reader." "Travelling affords opportunities which make for the improvement of a person as a conversationalist." "The reader gains his knowledge from books written by the travellers." "First-hand knowledge is better than that gained second-hand."

In announcing the decision arrived at by Miss Kearney and himself, Mr. Young paid compliment to all the debaters for their excellent presentations. It had been an extremely difficult matter to decide in favor of either side, each speaker having presented such a good case in a very convincing manner. It was the excellent rebuttal made by Mr. Raddon that finally turned the scale in favor of the affirmative, and therefore they gave their decision in favor of Miss Sage and Mr. Raddon by the narrow margin of two points.

FIRE AT SCHENECTADY.

SCHENECTADY, N.Y., Dec. 4.—(Canadian Press.) — Eight firemen were overcome by gas and fumes from burning chemicals before a fire which damaged the Vendome Hotel Building to the extent of $250,000, and for a time threatened the business district here, was brought under control Saturday night. The blaze, it is believed, started in the cellar of a drug store in the building and spread rapidly to other stores and to the upper floors of the hotel.

The few guests who were in the hotel when the fire started escaped in safety with loss in personal effect, however, in most cases.

BREAD STRIKE OVER

PARIS, Dec. 4. — (Canadian Press)—The bread strike, which began Saturday, has collapsed. The master bakers informed the Minster of Agriculture yesterday that the baking of bread would be resumed today.

The strike of the bakers has lasted twenty-five hours. Its collapse is attributed to the energetic attitude taken by the Government, which had indicated its intention to use army bakers to meet the crisis.

Tharby has been awarded the General Superintendent's prize of $50 for the best section in the Ontario district. This division is under the jurisdiction of Roadmaster Andrew Frost. This also places the Norwood section in competition for the General Manager's prize of $100 for the best section on lines east of Fort William.

Church Notes.

On Sunday morning a very interesting service was held in the Presbyterian church, when Mr, Thos. Clarke and Mrs. John Starke were inducted and Mr. Ross Fennell was ordained and inducted as elders of the Norwood congregation. The service was performed by Rev. T. M. Wesley, the pastor.

The Y.W.A. of St. Andrew's Presbyterian church, Norwood, held their regular monthly meeting on Thursday evening at the home of Mrs. J. Weir. A very interesting paper was read by Mrs. J. Rogers and a duet was sung by Mrs. McCook, of Campbellford, and Mrs. Rogers. During the evening Miss Elizabeth Douglas who has been secretary of the Auxiliary ever since it was organized, was made a life member by the society as a mark of their appreciation of her services. Lunch was served by Mrs. Weir and a social half hour spent by the young ladies.

HON. W. PROUDFOOT DIES IN TORONTO

Late Senator of Goderich Was Leading Liberal and Widely Known in Ontario.

TORONTOo, Dec. 4.—(Canadian Press.)—Senator William Proudfoot died in Wellesely Hospital here yesterday morning.

William Proudfoot, K.C., Senator, was widely known in the Province of Ontario, where, for many years, he was a leading Liberal and a capable legislator, as well as being a prominent member of the Ontario Bar. He was first elected to the Ontario Legislature for Centre Huron as a Liberal in 1908, and was re-elected in 1911 and 1914. With him it was a case of the office seeking the man, as he had been proffered the Liberal nomination for Centre Huron in 190 but had refused to become a candidate.

Mr. Proudfoot was one of the Liberal leaders in the Legislature for some time, but the broke with the party on the conscription issue and became a Unionist. He was defeated in the Provincial General Election in 1919, when J. M. Govenlock was the successful Liberal candidate and Mr. Proudfoot was second in a three-cornered contest.

On November 6, 1919, Mr. Proudfoot was appointed to the Senate of Canada by Sir Robert L. Borden, then Dominion Premier.

Born in Colborne township, County of Huron, February 21, 1859, Mr. Proudfoot was educated in the Goderich Public school and by private tuition. He graduated in law at Osgoode Hall, became a barrister and settled down to practise his profession in Goderich. In 1902 he became head of the legal firm of Proudfoot, Duncan, Grant & Skeens, Toronto, but he continued to regard Goderich as his home.

In the early period of his public career Mr. Proudfoot was Reeve of Goderich, which office he held for ten years. He was secretary-treasurer of the Huron Law Association, and for many years was President of the Huron Liberal Association.

When You Catch Cold Rub on Musterole

Musterole is easy to apply and it gets in its good work right away. Often it prevents a cold from turning into "flu" or pneumonia. Just apply Musterole with the fingers. It does all the good work of grandmother's mustard plaster without the blister.

Musterole is a clean white ointment made of oil of mustard and other home simples. It is recommended by many doctors and nurses. Try Musterole for sore throat, cold on the chest, rheumatism, lumbago, pleurisy, stiff neck, bronchitis, asthma, neuralgia, congestion, pains and aches of the back and joints, sprains, sore muscles, bruises, chilblains, frosted feet—colds of all sorts. Seldom fails to deliver results. 40c and 75c, at all druggists.

Mr. Jacob H. Macksey, 336 Midland Ave., Midland, Ont. writes:—

"I have used Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills for over 20 years and I feel that I owe my life to them. I suffered severely from rheumatism and heart failure. One doctor just gave me one year to live, and even told me I might be found dead at any time. A neighbor advised Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills and I have been using them as needed ever since. I am now 70 years of age, weigh 217 pounds and can work as well as any young man."

ANNUAL MEETING BUTTER FACTORY

Officers Re-elected For the Year — Campbellford News of Interest.

CAMPBELLFORD, Dec 4.—The annual meeting of Crow Bay Cheese and Butter Factory was held at the factory, Seymour East, Saturday afternoon. After the usual business a lively discussion took place re the relative merits of the two methods of payment, viz: "Test plus 2 method or "straight test method." It was finally decided by a narrow majority that the straight test method of payment for 1923 be adopted.

Mr. William Petherick, who has been the efficient salesman, for the past twelve years was again re-elected and was also the old executive with one or two exceptions. The engaging of a cheesemaker for 1923 was left over till a later date. The proceeds of the season's operations showed the dairy industry to be in a flouishing condition many of the patrons receiving handsome cheques.

Meet To-morrow

The regular meeting of the Women's Missionary Society of the Methodist church will be held on Tuesday afternoon at the home of Mrs. E. T. Morton, Queen street. An excellent Christmas programme will be rendered and a large attendance is requested.

For Christmas

The Christmas entertainment to be given by the Methodist Sunday School will be held on Thursday evening December 21st in the church. An excellent programme is being prepared consisting of a cantata "Santa Claus and his Friends" under the efficient direction of Mr. and Mrs. Cowell.

Church News

Communion Services will be held next Sunday morning December 10, in St. Andrew's church with the pastor Rev. C. F. McIntosh in charge. Preparatory services will be held at the church on Thursday evening previous.

The pulpit of St. Andrew's church was ably filled on Sunday by Rev. G. I. Craw, B.A., of Springville, the pastor Rev. C. F. McIntosh, being in Springville, conducting anniversary services for Mr. Craw. Rev. Mr. Craw preached two very practical and helpful services to good congregations. His morning address was "The Superiority of God's word, over human dream fancies and ideals", being based on the words found in Jeremiah, Chap. 23, verse 28. "The Prophet that hath a dream; let him tell a dream; and he that hath my word let him speak my word faithfully.

What is the chaff to the wheat? saith the Lord. The speaker asserted that the Prophet Jeremiah lived in an evil day and fervently denounced evil in the life of the nation as well as in that of the individual Jeremiah also proved the superiority of God's word over human ideas and dreams by their results. Rev. Mr. Craw affirmed that there is no finality to God's word and that which does not savour of eternity is short lived Atheism and agnosticism have not advanced in the last century.

Boy Scouts Organized

At a recent meeting in the Parish Hall a corp of Boy Scouts was organized wtih about thirty members and consists of three patrols. The officers are as follows:— Chaplin Rev. E. NEWS WARKWORTH AND THE VICINITY.

WARKWORTH, Dec. 4.—Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Harper visited their daughter, Mrs. Charles Wolfraim, Castleton, on Thursday.

Mrs. C. L. Cryderman and little daughter, Jean, Castleton, are visiting relatives and friends in the village before leaving for their new home in Toronto.

Mrs. Jas. Armstong who has been spending the past week with her son Dr. Gordon Armstrong, Roseneath, has returned home.

S. Leich of Fenella is in town on Thursday.

William Runnells, who has been ill for the past three weeks is improving slowly.

The Girl Guides have rented a room next to Mrs. John O'Shea's millinery store for the purpose of holding their meetings instead of meeting at the members homes.

START FOR KINGSTON.

MILTON, Dec. 4. — (Canadian Press.) —George Fenton of Brantford ,and Samuel Green, of Hamilton, start for Portsmouth penitentiary to-day to begin serving their sentence of three years and six months for picking pockets at Milton Fair September 30. Judge Elliott sentenced them on Saturday.

CAMPBELLFORD AND DISTRICT

CAMPBELLFORD, December 4.—During the installation of the new electric valves recently the water had to be lowered and there was a wild rush for the paper mill locks —where the fish are generally found on such occasions. They were there all right, by the hundreds, principally eels.

Two young fellows who were early on the scene secured 25 enormous fish, which they proudly carried up town, strung on a pole. And aside from the sport, will have enough salt fish to last all winter.

Everybody who likes fish was on the job, for all you had to do was to pick them up out of the mud—bass, eels, and mudcats.

Funeral of James F. Dunlay.

The funeral of the late James Francis Dunlay, only son of Richard Dunlay, whose sudden death at Peterborough last Thursday came as a great shock to his friends and relatives in this district, took place from the family residence, Seymour West, on Saturday morning at 9 o'clock, to St. Mary's Church, where requiem mass was celebrated. Six cousins of deceased acted as pall-bearers, and the remains were laid to rest in St. Mary's Cemetery. Besides a wife and baby girl, he leaves to mourn his loss a host of friends and relatives.

Mrs. Jean Dinwoodie.

The death of Mrs. Jean Dinwoodie, at the age of 90 years, took place at the residence of her daughter, Mrs. W. W. Cumming, 113 Bedford Road, Toronto, on Friday, 1st December. Deceased was the widow of James Dinwoodie, and daughter of the late Commander R. Cock, of the Royal Navy.

The funeral will take place on the arrival of the Grand Trunk train from Peterborough, due at Campbellford at 1.28 p.m. on Monday, and the remains will be laid to rest in Mount Pleasant Cemetery.

Council Meetings.

Both Town and Township Councils will meet on Monday morning at their respective quarters at 10 a.m. for general business. These will be the last regular meetings for 1922, and the object of the morning sitting is so that the Reeves and the Deputy Reeves may get away to Cobourg on the 1.33 train to attend the County Council, which is now in session there.

Lawn Tennis.

Just imagine playing tennis in December—but that's what happened on Saturday afternoon. Members of the local club had a nice friendly game, and stayed right with it until it got too dark to play. It was a real game—no ordinary practice, and positively the last of the season.

Campbellford Market.

Dairy butter was plentiful on Saturday best grade bringing 35c a pound. A limited supply of new-laid eggs sold at 45c dozen. Lots of chickens, good roasters, brought 20c a pound. Round steak, best cuts, went for 12½c pound.

At the fruit market there was an endless variety — Malaga grapes, oranges, grapefruit, bananas, Canadian apples, new figs, and dates, and the prices seem to be getting back to old times.

There was also a fine display of celery, Jersey sweet potatoes, Boston head lettuce, Cape Cod cranberries—in fact, everything to make a full course dinner for Sunday.

Stirling Cheese Board.

The last meeting of the season was held on Thursday, 30th November, only 392 boxes were offered, and all sold at 19½c, which was 1c pound advance over Brockville market of the same day.

Off to Cobourg.

Addition to Kennels.

Bert Reynolds has added a new hound to his kennels, which he intends to use exclusively for rabbit hunting.

Princess Alice "comparatively happy" on leaving Greece with her banished husband Andrew.

WHY "PHAETON?"

George J. Mercer, member of the Society of Automotive Engineers Standards Committee which choose standard names for automobile bodies, gives the following explanation of the committee's choice of the name "phaeton" for what had heretofore been termed "touring car."

"The term 'touring' applies to any particular type of body because all types are used for touring. The type of body in question is the logical successor of the family horse-drawn open carriage known as the phaeton. It was so called in the earliest handbooks of the Association of Licensed Automobile Manufacturers."

MILLBROOK AND DISTRICT

Anniversary Services of Grace Presbyterian Church Yesterday.

MILLBROOK, Dec. 4. — The anniversary services of Grace Presbyterian Church were held yesterday, Rev. J. P. Jull, M.A., of Lakefield, being the preacher for the day. Congregations weer large at both services, the evening one being considerably augmented by the fact that the Presbyterian Church, Centreville, and the Methodist Church, Millbrook, both withdrew their usual service out of compliment to the special occasion in a sister church. Miss Mabel Clarry presided at the organ, leaving Miss Ethel Richardson free to assist with the singing, as neither Mrs. H. W. Johnston nor Mr. E. C. Hansman were able to be present owing to the illness of their mother. The music all day was of an especially high order, adding much to the spirit of worship, and being greatly appreciated by the congregations. Two anthems were sung at the evening service, "Rock of Ages," with trio by Mrs. G. S. Gervan, Miss E. Richardson and Mr. H. W. Johnston, and "Consider Thy Work, O Lord," with solo by Mrs. Gervan; the concluding number, following the sermon, "Is It I, O Lord?" by Mrs. Gervan, Miss Richardson and Mr. Johnston, was particularly enjoyed. Revs. A. H. McConnachie, J. Wilks and S. T. Tucker were present, the latter leading in the opening prayer. Rev. Mr. Jull read his evening lesson from I. John ii., 1-17, his text being chosen from the 14th verse, "I have written unto you, young men, because ye are strong and the word of God abideth in you," and stated that while he had a deep appreciation of the splendid services rendered by the women to Church, home and State, he wished especially to address himself to the men, placing before them, clearly, the responsibility which God lays at their door to defend their homes, to bear the burdens, fight the battles, lift the heaviest loads, step into the place of danger, protect the weak, etc., and urging that no true man will bring shame upon his manhood by failing to provide defence and support for his home and family as adequately as health and toil will permit, or circumstances may demand. In moral matters, shame also upon the man who depends upon influencing the votes of women to carry some piece of iniquitous legislation, or the man in the church who leaves the religious instruction of his children wholly to his wife, with the setting of a proper example and in fact the whole moral status of his household.

"I write to you, young men, because ye are strong," John said, and nothing brings such a thrill to the heart of a man as to be praised for his strength; but John was not thinking only of physical powers which must always be inferior to the intellectual, moral and spiritual. Samson was a giant, but he lacked moral fibre and was lured to his fall by the seductive smiles of a maiden. Paul, on the contrary, was "in bodily presence weak," but a giant in intellect. The strength which John had in mind is revealed in this: "The Word of God abideth in you," which means that it has been worked into the very being, that in you the "word becomes flesh" as it did in Jesus Christ. The processions which walk our streets on a certain occasion every year, the speaker stated, carrying an open Bible before them, are a joke of the devil, a gilded hypocrisy, if that Book means nothing practical in the life.

To keep on fighting against timidity, laziness, any weakness, gaining at times, may be losing once in a while, but ultimately gaining, "because each victory will help you some other to win," to keep on working in spite of discouragement, these are source of real strength. To have an ideal, not "get," but "give," and yet not to be of those men who will give money liberally but refuse an ounce of themselves. The world will never be saved by hirelings—patriots nor prophets are not made that way. Jesus Christ is a man's man every time; He made heavy demands upon the men of His time, and they came; Peter and Paul are examples of men made over by Christ, Who is judging men still, and those who are worthy will respond to His call; He alone can save men's lives from the things that defile and often smash them seemingly beyond repair. Christianity is a man's religion—the finest men, and women too, that have ever lived have been followers of Christ. The Church of Christ offers a man's job of which none need ever be ashamed. The falling off in recruits for the ministry is not to be accounted for through the small salaries offered, though some lives have become embittered and warped because of financial difficulties traceable to this very fact, but because the spirit of materialism has so permeated the atmosphere of the day that gain and not service is the standard of choosing a vocation, and for this the homes are largely to blame. "Give your life over to the Saviour, and you will never weary in the combat because you have set the Lord always before you; with Him at your right hand you will never be moved."

MARRIAGE A LA MODE

Among the Medes polygamy is the recognized practice. A man is scarcely considered entitled to a full degree of respect until he has had at least seven wives.

Unless a woman has had five husbands she is not ranked as a full-fledged matron.

Nurses in Moscow hospitals are paid 1,500000 rubles monthly, which is about $1.25.

CASH GRAIN.

MONTREAL, December 4. Canadian Press. — The local cash grain market was quiet on Saturday and without feature of significance. There were no developments in the flour situation. A good business prevailed in millfeed while trading in rolled oats was steady. Strength was shown in strictly new laid eggs with prices up three cents to 78 cents a dozen. In other grades a good business was passing. Total receipts to date this season were 475 179 cases against 460,032 in the same period last year.

Trade in butter was good. Total receipts to date were 169,029 packages in excess of the total for the same period last year.

There was a weaker feeling in cheese but business is so small that prices were not quoted. Receipts were 352,826 boxes less than in the same period of 1921.

STERLING RATES.

Demand, 4.5264.

Companion Let Gun Fall While Hunters Were at Rest.

LINDSAY, Dec. 4.—A fatal hunting accident occurred at Golden Lake, when John Sell, the nineteen-year-old son of Mr. John Sell, of Wilberforce, received the charge of a No. 20 shotgun in the lower region of the abdomen and died ten minutes after. He was with three companions—two Reczine boys and another youth named Roessler, were in the woods in the vicinity of Golden Lake hunting. While at rest for a few minutes, one of the Reczines, standing at the bottom of an incline ledge of rock, let his gun fall, which discharged and found a mark and victim in Sell, who was standing above. His companions, horror-stricken at the tragedy, carried him to the home of Mr. Paul Weckwerth, where he died in about ten minutes time.

DECREASE IN COAL

LONDON, December 4.Associated Press. — Coal production in England has dropped 124,000,000 tons, or about 40 per cent. since 1913. The heads of the coal miners unions declare that the decerase in the production is not due to the lack of supply but to the fact that the mine owners are closing down entirely or partially as a means of forcing the unions to make concessions in the matter of wages and hours.

A Letter to Mrs. Pankhurst

To the Editor of the Examiner:

Sir: Would Mrs. Pankhurst be so good as to express her opinion upon the fitness of women for the pulpit? At present there is a disposition to declare that women must not invade the ranks of the clergy. One denomination has already so declared. No others have as yet disapproved of this action. Mrs. Pankhurst is probably the most distinguished and capable of all international advocates of women's rights. Her opinion would would have great weight. I have been asked to make this request and I do so gladly because I am against repression and injustice, and it cannot be denied that the exclusion by some denominations of women from the pulpit is a most serious and improper reflection upon women.

J. H. BURNHAM.

GOWNS FOR THE PLUMP

The woman of too-rounded outline should learn that nothing so effectively conceals her defects as simple, straight lines.

Notice the difference in effect in the models above. The one emphasizes the thickness about the waist and hips that might easily be hidden, while the other actually transforms it into lines of grace and beauty.

The trimmed hat too makes the wearer's face too broad for beauty, while the closer turban frames it most interestingly.

LOOKS FOR A NEW POSTAL CONVENTION

As the Result of Present Conference Between U. S. and Canada.

OTTAWA, Dec. 4.—(Canadian Press).—The new postal convention between the United States and Canada, to supercede the existing convention concluded in 1888, will, it is expected bt the outcome of the International Postal Conference that opened here this morning.

Irwin Sands, superintendent of Foreign Mail, United States, when consideration of the Agenda opened, asked how decisions of the conference were to be given effect. P. T. Coolican, acting general superintendent of postal service Canada, and one of joint chairmen of the conference replied that the drafting of a new convention was in view, embodying main decisions of this conference not technical details discussed.

The first decision reached by the conference was in favor of an increase in maximum indemity for loss of registered articles between United States and Canada. The present maximum is $9.65. Conference agreed that it should be increased to $25.00.

Discussion followed on reciprocal exchange of equipment and greater co-operation between United States and Canado in cases of theft and fraud.

A Warm Welcome

Hon. Dr. Work, postmaster general of the United States, spoke very warmly of the welcome which has colleagues and he had received in Canada. The bonds between Canada and United States he said were greater perhaps than those between any two other countries. Dr. Work spoke of Canadians who crossed the boundary to join the northern forces in the United States Civil War. They believed that a nation, like a house if divided against itself, could not stand.

RECIPES

By BERTHA E. SHAPLEIGH
Of Columbia University.

WHITE CAKE

One-half cup butter, 2 cups sugar, ½ cup milk, 2½ cups flour, 2 teaspoons baking powder or 1 teaspoon cream tartar, ½ teaspoon soda, whites 6 eggs, 1 teaspoon vanilla or ½ teaspoon almond extract.

Cream butter and sugar together. Add milk and flour sifted with baking powder alternately, beating thoroughly.

Beat whites of eggs until stiff and lightly stir into the mixture. Add flavoring and bake in one pan 40 minutes or in layers 30 minutes.

In baking a white cake it is best to have a slow oven at first, increasing heat gradually as cake rises and browns slightly—then decreasing the heat to finish baking.

BAKED APPLES

Probably no fruit is enjoyed more universally than the apple when baked. The children enjoy it and it can be taken for the school lunch. In dairy lunch places baked apples and cream are in great demand.

Select sound, medium-sized apples. Wash and core. The skin may be removed or left on.

When skin is allowed to remain cut through the skin an inch or two from the stem around the apple. This allows the apple to expand in cooking and it is less likely to lose its shape.

Place apples in a baking pan. Add one tablespoon sugar and one teaspoon butter to each apple.

Pour in enough water to cover pan after the apples have cooked for 10 minutes. Baste often with the syrup formed by cooking.

APPLE FLAN

The following is a good recipe for using apples, but where fruit may be used. When canned fruit is used the paste is always baked first and then the fruit is put in and a glaze is made with the syrup and poured over the fruit.

Line a slightly buttered deep pie plate with a good pie paste. Press edges well onto edge of plate and trim evenly.

Pare, core, and cut in eighths eight well-flavored apples. Cover the bottom of the lined pie plate with any kind of marmalade.

Thinly slice the apples over this and sprinkle with one-half cup sugar mixed with one teaspoon cinnamon.

Bake in oven 30 minutes. Remove and pour over the apples two tablespoons melted currant jelly.

Another Method

Line the pie plate as before with the paste. Cut apples in eighths and cook half of them in a syrup with one cup of sugar and one-fourth cup water, boiled one minute.

Add two drops of vanilla extract. Cook the remaining half of apples in cranberry juice sweetened to taste. The cranberries will give a beautiful red color to the apples, as well as a good flavor.

Fill the plate which is lined with paste with paper and bake. Remove paper and spread the paste with marmalade.

Then arrange the pieces of apple in circles, alternating red and white. Boil the cranberry juice and sugar until it will jelly and pour over the apples.

RUSSIA'S PLEA FOR THE TURKS

Guarantee Turkish Sovereignty by Fortifying the Straits to Guarantee Her Independence.

LAUSANNE, December 4. Canadain Press. — M. Tchitcherin's plea for Turkey was an impassioned one. The Russian spokesman insisted that Turkish sovereignity could be only guaranteed by the presence of Turkish warships in the straits, while the warships of other powers should be prohibited from entering them. He contended also that Turkey should have authority to fortify the straits as a means of safeguarding her independence, and particularly for the protection of her capital, Constantinople.

M. Tchitchrin's speech caused such a commotion in the ranks of the allies that Lord Curzon rose and remarked ironically that the conference was interested to observe that the Russians who came to Lausanne representing three countries, were now acting as the mouthpiece for a fourth, namely the Turkish. In this he referred to the Russians representing Georgia and Ukrain as well as Russia herself.

JAS. HAMMELL FEARS NOTHING

Not Afraid to Face Constituents for Switching His Allegiance.

TORONTO, Dec. 4.—(Canadian Press.)—Wm. James Hamell, M.P. for Muskoka, says he has nothing to fear and nothing to hide in connection with his action in going over to the Liberals from the Progressives. "I am not afraid to face my constituents," he declares. "There may be a few of them who will be critical, but they are of the Tory stripe. I believe that the mass of the voters will be satisfied with my action. I received strong Liberal support at the election a year ago, but the Tories fought me and Mr. Meighen came into the riding against me."

Referring to criticism of his action by J. J. Morrison and other U. F.O. leaders, he said that "there is no give and take about them. They want things all their own way. There is no compromise possible in order to arrive at united action."

As to threats of what the Progressives would do to him, he merely said: "I don't owe these fellows anything. I was given to understand when I was nominated that my election expenses would be met. But when it came to paying bills it was little me who paid them."

He declares that his action is really a fulfilment of pre-election promise to his constituents.

BUSINESS GIRLS' CLUB ELECTIONS

Annual Reports Presented —Bouquet for Retiring President.

The annual meeting of the Business Girls' Club of Peterborough was held in the Green Room of the Y.W.C.A. on Friday, November 17.

Annual reports of the Secretary and Treasurer were presented and were most encouraging.

A pleasant feature of the meeting was the presentation of bouquet of flowers, on behalf of the Club, to Mrs. B. W. McClellan, the retiring President, as a token of appreciation of the faithful services rendered in this capacity.

Refreshments were served by the Executive Committee and the following officers were elected for the coming year:

Hon. President—Mrs. W. R. Morris.
President—Miss Grace Evans.
1st Vice-Pres.—Mrs. McClennan.
2nd Vice-Pres.—Miss O. Marshall.
3rd Vice-Pres.—Miss Helen Lytle.
Secretary—Miss Hazel Henry.
Treasurer—Miss Teresa Taylor.
Executive committee—Mrs. Drummond, Mrs. Barrett and Misses V. Foote, M. Walker, P. Twigg.

LAUDER JESTS ON DRY LAW

Tells Chicago Rotarians It Helps to Keep Corkscrews Straight

CHICAGO, Dec. 4.—Sir Harry Lauder, speaking before the Chicago Rotary Club, at its annual meeting in the Sherman Hotel, said that the nations of the world must work together to prevent another world war

Sir Harry, who is a member of the Glasgow Rotary Club, mixed humor with pathos in his remarks:

"I find all of you looking fine," he said. "Prohibition seems to have done worlds of good. It also helps to keep corkscrews straight."

Efficient Housekeeping

The modern idea of efficiency extends into the household as well as into every branch of business. Most housewives pride themselves upon the fact that their homes are conducted in an efficient, business-like manner.

Every housewife knows, too, that the business of running a house, providing for the wants and needs of the different members of the family and meeting the almost daily emergencies is second to none.

The Want Ads. in the Examiner are a great boon to the efficient housewife. In securing helpers, in purchasing various articles of household equipment, disposing of discarded furniture, in fact (n countless ways, the Want Ads. are the housewife's most valuable assistant.

A CONFERENCE

generation Benjamin Franklin is known as a philosopher, a statesman and a scientist; but it is not so generally known that in the world of affairs, and particularly in the postal service, Franklin enjoyed a reputation equal to that which he achieved in any of the other fields in which he excelled. However, such is the fact. In early colonial days, he was in turn Deputy Postmaster-General and Postmaster-General, and in the discharge of the duties attaching to these offices he travelled over a vast and sparsely-inhabited region that now contains nearly one-half the population of the United States and Canada. Hence, it was that he came to Canada in 1763, and, in order that the mails from Canada might make connection with the steam packets that sailed monthly from New York, he laid out and put in operation the first postal route between Montreal and New York. w

"The international mail service that Franklin thus established followed a route that, from the postal point of view, not only formed a link between neighbouring nations, but which, even to this day, has an irresistable attraction for the student of history, as well as for the lover of romance.

"Almost every mile of that route," said the speaker, "which lies between the waters of the St. Lawrence and those of the Hudson has woven into its history not only the ennobling record of the trials, the sacrifices and the sufferings of those pioneers of the Cross, Jogues, Le Caron, Bourdon, Poncet, and Le Moyne; but there is also woven into the same history the no less thrilling tale of the exploits and adventures of those brilliant soldiers of France — Champlain, Frontenac, Iberville, Levis ,and Montcalm, all of whom made use of the same highway in the course of their military operations.

"Reminders of the noble self-sacrifice and the splendid heroism of those distant years there are in plenty on both sides of the International Boundary line—thus proclaiming the common heritage to which the people of Canada and of the United States are joint heirs.

And as a further proof of the bond that has so long existed between the two countries, the tourist who passes through the Village of Lake George will notice that the main thoroughfare is still called Canada Street—the name it bore in Franklin's time, because of the fact that it was part of the new route along which mails were carried to and from Canada.

"It is, therefore, entirely appropriate that fellow-citizens of the illustrious man who first forged the link of our international postal relations should come to Canada to sit in conference with their Northern neighbours and elaborate plans for extending and making more efficient the modest postal service which Franklin had the vision to conceive and the practical ability to put into successful operation.

"There have, of course, been numerous occasions since the year 1763 when the international service then inaugurated has been enlarged and improved. I refer more particularly to the Postal Conventions of 1792, 1848, 1875, 1881, 1907, and 1908.

New Problems.

"To solve new postal problems that call for immediate attention is the object of this Conference. The time at which we meet should be propitious for a satisfactory solution of these problems. A period of unrest and business instability is gradually giving way to more settled conditions, and the improvement in general business is reflected in the business of the Post Office. In proof of that, I may mention that while the operations of the Canadian Post Office Department showed a deficit at the end of the last fiscal year of $1,552,000, the operations of the present fiscal year will show not only that that deficit has been wiped out, but that there will be a surplus of approximately $1,000,000. And I have no doubt that like results are reflected in the operations of the United States Post Office Department.

"Gratifying as are these results, we cannot rest satisfied with them. We must seek to make possible, results more gratifying still. We can, by mutual co-operation, assist each other in attaining such an end; and, having regard to what has been accomplished in the past, I am confident that the outcome of the next few days' deliberations will inaugurate a new era in international postal achievement, postal efficiency, and postal success.

"A glance at the programme prepared for this meeting will indicate how numerous and varied are the subjects to be dealt with. You will also observe that the subjects to be discussed are not limited to those enumerated. Among those not mentioned may be cited one upon which the experience and judgment of our American friends may be brought to bear with practical advantage, namely, the proposal to have a summer aeroplane mail service between selected points. In its wider aspect that proposal involves, of course, international questions outside the sphere of the postal service, and, for that reason, it could not be finally determined at a conference composed only of postal representatives. However, if time permits after the regular programme has been disposed of, a discussion of this proposal will be both illuminating and helpful.

"There is another subject not included in the programme to which brief allusion may be made. I refer to the suggestion that the domestic rate of postage on letters in Canada might be reduced from 3 cents to 2 cents. The fact that such a reduction was made in the United States a few years ago is often cited as a reason for similar action being taken in this country. As there seems to be an impression that the suggested reduction is a matter within the jurisdiction of the Post Office Department, it is desirable to point out that such is not the case. The increase from 2 cents to 3 cents in the Canadian domestic rate on letters was due to the special War Revenue Act of 1915, which provided that in addition to the postage payable in the form of a postage stamp, there should be a tax of 1 cent imposed on every letter and postcard mailed within Canada. A return to the former rate of 2 cents is, therefore, possible only when the special war tax of 1 cent is repealed. That is a matter to be determined by the Finance Department, and not by the Post Office Department. Its determination rests, of course, on considerations of revenue and policy that are within the special purview of the Finance Department. While such are the facts, the Post Office Department is both willing and eager to assist in removing the 1 cent war tax and restoring the 2 cent postage rate.

"Once more, may I assure our visitors from the United States, that although in their journey from Washington to Ottawa they crossed the international boundary line, they did not then enter a country of strangers. Quite the reverse. They are, in fact, among friends and brothers who are desirous of expressing neighbourly feeling and international goodwill in deeds, rather than in words. A truce then to further speech on my part. With great pleasure I give way to the Honourable Dr. Work, th Postmaster-General of the United States."

LUMBERMAN DIED AS RESULT OF INJURIES

LINDSAY, Dec. 4.— (Canadian Press.) — David Bissette died last night from injuries received near Haliburton on Saturday, when he was cutting down a balsam tree and stumbled and fell in avoiding being crushed by the falling tree. His head came in contact with a stump and the falling tree also struck him a glancing blow. The fatal accident occurred at Richard Burke's camp, about five miles from Haliburton.

ULSTER PREMIER IS LOOKING FOR OUTLET

BELFAST, Dec. 4. — (Canadian Press.)— Sir James Craig, Ulster Premier, at Dory yesterday, said he would not be a party to any boundary commission that would place his fellow loyalists under a foreign flag and foreign jurisdiction. As a means of bridging the difficulty he suggested direct negotiations between Northern and Southern governments which might adjust matters by an exchange of districts without surrender of entire counties. He was desirous of establishing co-operation between the North and the South.

ANOTHER BIG STEP IN RADIO

Radio broadcasting, as everybody knows, is made possible by the use of the wonder-working vacuum tube! When Bell Telephone engineers in 1915 achieved the first transmission of speech across the Atlantic they used no less than 300 of these vacuum tubes to generate the necessary high frequency power. Later developments brought about the use of tubes supplying 250 watts.

Now comes an epoch-marking advance in vacuum tubes! Bell engineers have just perfected a water-cooled tube capable of supplying 100,000 watts—200 times the power used for the ordinary broadcasting station.

This tube was made possible by the perfecting of a method of sealing copper to glass in such a manner as to overcome cracking when the tube gets hot.

The picture shows W. G. Housekeeper, the Bell engineer who perfected this new sealing process, with one of the big tubes in his hands. Note also the contrast between the new 100,000 watt tube and the little tube in use in the average receiving set!

This new tube marks a great advance, it is thought, in the progress of radio! It makes available high frequency power in units so large that only a very few such tubes would be necessary to operate even the largest radio stations, with all the flexibility of the ordinary vacuum tube.

Queens Captured Rugby Championship of Canada

Edmonton Elks Put Up a Great Battle But Queen's Speed Told in the End.

A GREAT GAME.

RICHARDSON STADIUM, KINGSTON, Dec. 4.—Queen's are all-Canadian senior champions. They defeated Edmonton Elks, the western champions, 13 to 1, here yesterday, on a dry, hard field. Before the westerners went under they gave the champions and their supporters a bad attack of the blues.

They not only held Queen's scoreless the first period but they outscored them 1 to 0 in the second and at half time looked as good if not a trifle better than the ultimate winners.

In the third period the break came after Queen's had gone into the lead on two singles. Brown fumbled one Leadley's long punts at Edmonton's 25-yard line and Queen's bucked over for a try which was converted. That made it 8 to 1 at third quarter time.

Class Counts.

In the final period Queen's class commenced to tell. After a fierce rally which carried them by a series of bucks and short end plays to Elks' 10-yard line, a fake play sent Harding through a hole at Elks' left wing for the touch down which made it 13 to 1 and cinched the game.

Elks battled gamely to the bitter end but Queen's had complete command of the situation. It was a close, hard contest all the way and while Queen's are undoubtedly the better team the western team is certainly a more formidable aggregation than the one which Argos defeated 23 to 0 last fall.

They were well drilled, hard and game. Their wing line performed well in the close work but their outsides lacked the speed and tackling ability of Thomas, Walker, Veale, Harding and McNeil. That gave Leadley and Batstone good chances to return or run back Fraser's long punts.

Fraser, Fine Booter.

The Elks were far from outclassed on the back field in kicking or catching. Fraser is a grand booter and he and Dorman worked well defensively. Both plunged well but the back field lacked the cohesion of Queen's rear guard and they had nothing but individual work to stack up against Queen's extension runs and combination half-back play.

There were not outstanding stars. Leadley, Batstone, Harding and Evans all played up to their usual high standard and so did the ends and flying wings. McKelvey, the big read-headed meteor of Queen's wing section, had to retire in the first 10 minutes and he was certainly missed, though Reynolds, who replaced him, did great work. Mundell was Queen's best line plunger.

All the Elks played excellent football. Their chief weakness lay in the lack of speed in their outside wings and the dearth of combination plays behind the line what they had were well worked. It was a keen, hard game, with but few spectacular features.

Queen's were well entitled to their victory and are worthy champions of a great season. If Queen's winning intereference had been checked in Toronto as it was checked here, the first half Saturday's final would have been an Argo-Elk seance.

Only 5,000 fans turned out for the game. The line-up:

Edmonton Elks— Flying wing, Creighton; halfs, Dorman, Fraser, Dunsworth; quarter, McAllister; snap, Shieman; wings, Duke; Carrigan, Palmer, Yancy, Burnett, Cullinan; spares, Brunson, Brown, McColl, Dey, Adams, Spence, Seeley.

Queen's—Flying wing, McLeod; halfs, Hadley, Batstone, Harding; quarter, Evans; snap, Lewis; wings, Muirhead, Carson, McElvey, Mundell, Walker, Thomas; spares, Veale, Delehay, Dolan, Reynolds, Johnston, Grondin, Nickle, McNeill.

Referee, Silver Quilty, Ottawa. Umpire, Murray Thompson, Moose Jaw. Head linesman, Bob Ibister, Hamilton.

HAVELOCK TO HAVE TWO HOCKEY TEAMS.

HAVELOCK, December 4. — At a meeting of the Athletic Association on Thursday night of last week, it was decided to manage the hockey teams this season, which will consist of a team in the Trent Valley League and a High School team.

Charles Green was appointed manager, with Lou Hagerman as assistant manager, for the Trent Valley team, and Principal Davidson was selected as manager of the High School seven.

The colours of the teams will be the popular black and white and the socks in the same colours will be secured.

Arrangements have been made with the rink management for the use of the ice for practice three nights every week—on Monday from 10 to 11, and on Wednesdays and Fridays from 7 to 8.

LOCAL BOXERS FOR TORONTO

Riverside Club Invite Entries For City Championship Cards.

The Peterborough A.A.A. has been invited to send boxers to Toronto to take part in the city championships, on December 14th and 15th. The Riverside Athletic Club will conduct the tournament.

The local boxers have been in training for six weeks and a number of them are in shape for competition in the ring. It is quite likely that several of the more experienced lads will be given the opportunity of taking part in the Toronto show.

The proposed boxing bouts for Central Ontario, to be held at Oshawa, are meeting with some difficulties, as a result of which no dates have been set. This is one reason why action by the local boxing committee has been delayed. The absence of definite information from the promoters at Oshawa is probably explained by an announcement from the Ontario Branch of the A.A.U. of C. which points out that no permit for the tourney has been applied for. Some time ago, two Toronto men proposed to run a tournament at Oshawa for personal gain, but were refused a permit.

The Oshawa A.A.A. will be given permission to hold a tourney, but just now the sportmen in the motor town are busy with the various stages of organization. The local association would be glad to help Oshawans by sending entries for the bouts.

CALLS HAMMELL RANK APOSTATE

Deserted Farmers' Party and Crosses Floor of the House.

TORONTO, Dec. 4. —(Canadian Press.)—At the farmer'se central office on Saturday the action of W. J. Hammell, M.P. for Muskoka, in resigning from the party and crossing the floor of the House, was described as "rank apostasy," while some leaders were very harsh in their criticism. J. J. Morrison remarked that it did not "much matter." The member for Muskoka some time ago had alienated the affections of his colleagues, he said. "It appears quite evident," Mr. Morrison said, "that Mr. Hammell has always been Liberal, but used the U.F.O. political organization in Muskoka as a derrick to hoist him into parliament, and having got there, he now moves to where he should always have been. We feel that the agricultural group in Ottawa has gained immeasurably by his desertion. His constituency will deal with him in a fitting manner."

SWEDE ATTACKED EVOLUTION THEORY.

Rev. Dr. J. Enander Declares That Darwin Was Wrong.

STOCKHOLM, Dec. 4.—(Associated Press). — A declaration that Darwin's theory of evolution is wrong comes from the Rev. Dr. J. Enander, a Swedish country minister, more famous as a botanist, who has just returned to his congregation and an orchard of at least a thousand varieties of willows and willow hybrids, after a botanical tour through the United States and Canada.

"The cross-breeding of plants is as fascinating to a botanist as the cross-breeding of races to a biologist," says Dr. Enander. "Cross-breeds usually occur when the willows go northward, or to higher altitudes in mountainous countries. The female willow is a more hardy and aggressive pioneer than the male, but continues being fertilized by the male as long as he is able to follow. When the male plants finds the migration too hard and gives up, the female willow accepts fertilization from some male of a kindred species, and thus cross-breeds arise." Dr. Enander added that there were more than 70 varieties of sallows, or willows, and many thousands of cross-breeds.

The United States Customs officers prevented the Swedish botanist from taking in live botanical specimens which he wanted to show to American scientists. This was in accordance with the law designed to prevent spreading of plant diseases. Dr. Enander now intends to prevail upon the Swedish Government to inspect plants which it is desired to export, and to give pledges to the United States authorities that they are free from diseases.

The British Government estimates that England has spent more than $500,000,000 on Mesopotamia since the armistice.

PLAY-OFFS COMING IN INDOOR LEAGUE

Schedule of Seventy-Two Games Will Be Completed Friday Evening.

The Mens' Soft Ball League schedule is nearly finished but the excitement is not over, not by a long shot. In fact its just beginning.

There will have been played seventy-two games by Friday evening when the schedule finishes. It speaks well for the league executive that only three out of the schedule games have been defaulted, by teams not having a full nine out.

The play offs the most important part of the whole seasons program are still to be played. The Knights of Columbus are winners of the Club section and also Chris Graham's fine shield. They earn the right to meet the Wildcats winners of the Left Over section on Saturday next. The winner of that game will meet the winner of the Industrial section. That is just where the excitement comes. The Raybestos are leading the Industrial league and have no more games to play. The Engineers and DeLaval are tied for second place and a victory for either will put them on even terms with Raybestos.

Balance in the Bank.

The Treasurer's report showing a balance of $7,478.87 in the bank and $5,000 Victory bonds was received with applause.

New Advisory Board.

The following was added to the constitution:

"All past presidents of the association resident in Ontario shall form the Advisory Board of the association. This board shall be invited to attend at least two Executive meetings during the year, one of which shall be the meeting held immediately previous to the annual convention. Members of the board may take part in the Executive meetings, but shall have no vote. They shall have the rights of delegates at the annual and special general meetings, including the right to vote. The immediate past presidents shall be the chairman of the board and shall report for the board to annual convention on general hockey conditions and on such other matters as the board may care to bring to the attention of the association."

Executive Changes.

The Executive in future will be elected as follows:

"Four to be elected at the annual meeting and the president to appoint two, one of whom shall be a member of the Northern Ontario Hockey Association, unless that association be already represented on the executive by election."

Amendments Defeated.

The amendment of H. C Snyder of Brampton to allow junior players to play in senior or intermediate teams without losing their junior status was defeated. Some of the arguments against were of interest and the feeling of the meeting was that it was not the object of the O.H.A. to win championships, but to develop hockey players.

Bar Pro Coaches

The matter of professional coaches for senior teams, considered to be the most important question of the meeting, elicited a long argument.

It was finally decided to move the amendment clause by clause. The first clause is that professional coaches and trainers be included in the list of unauthorized persons and not be permitted to sit near the players' box or the penalty box, or to direct or interfere with the play or players in any manner during the match. The referee will be held responsible for the proper carrying out of this rule, and the home team shall provide an officer to enforce this rule. Any infraction of this rule is to be reported to the Executive of the O.H.A. This clause was carried.

The second clause was that in case of an injured player, he shall be assisted off the ice by the trainer or a person previously designated by the teams. This was carried and

Past Presidents on New Advisory Board

The new Advisory Board of the O.H.A. authorized at Saturday's meeting of that organization will consist of the following past Presidents:

Albert Copeland of Midland, Chairman.
R. M. Glover of Peterborough.
J. F. Paxton of Whitby.
J. T. Sutherland, of Kingston.
Charles Farquharson of Stratford.
H. E. Wettlaufer of Kitchener.
L. B. Duff of Welland.
Dwight J. Turner of Toronto.

Mr. Farquharson of Stratford gave notice of motion for next year's meeting to bar professional coaches from the O.H.A. altogether.

Lighting of Rinks.

The following amendment was also carried: "Referees will in all cases report with reference to the lighting of each rink at each game, stating if in his opinion the rink is sufficiently lighted to allow spectators to follow the game at all times in a satisfactory manner. Detrimental reports will be immediately dealt with by the Executive."

All "Benedicts" Now.

The following amendment was adopted: The goalkeeper may stop the puck in any position or manner he wishes, in his own territory, but shall not throw or hold it, and no other player of the defending side, other than the goalkeeper, shall, during the play, lie, sit, kneel or slide along the ice in the goalkeeper's territory. The goalkeeper may wear pads and a face protector, but must not wear a garment such as would give him undue assistance in keeping goal. The referee must rule off the ice for at least one minute a goalkeeper who infringes this rule and must rule off the ice, for at least two minutes, any other player on his side who has offended against this rule.

When a goalkeeper is ruled off the player who takes his place shall have all the privileges as a goalkeeper.

Protection for Goaler.

The goalkeeper's territory was defined as follows: A dark, distinguishing line shall be drawn on the ice between the centre of each goal-post and extending one foot on each side. From the centre of this line and fronting the goal a half-circle shall be drawn in the ice with a radius of four feet. This arc shall be the goaltender's territory.

Up to Captain Only.

The captain was given the privilege of speaking to the referee on the following amendment:

"Each side shall have on the ice a captain, who alone shall have the right to speak to the referee on any question in dispute. The visiting team shall have the choice of goals." In case of a game on neutral ice the referee shall toss for choice of goals.

Assistant for Referee.

The following was adopted: "There shall be only one referee for a match, but the executive may appoint an assistant, in addition to the regular referee, and in no case shall he belong to either of the competing clubs, and he may be an amateur or professional. They are to enforce the rules, adjudicate upon disputes or cases unprovided for by rules, appoint or remove goal umpires, control the timekeepers, keep the score, announcing each goal as scored, and at the conclusion of the match declare the result. The puck shall be considered in play until the referee or his assistant stops the game, which they may do at any time, by sounding a whistle or ringing a bell. The referee's decision shall be final, and there shall be no appeal.

More Power for Referee.

The referee's decision was made final by the following rule: There shall be one umpire behind each goal; he shall inform the referee when the pluck has been put into the goal from the point scored, but the decision of the referee as to the scoring of a goal shall be final.

Cannot Kick Puck.

Carrying the puck will be stopped by the adoption of the following: The puck may be stopped with the hand, but not carried or held or knocked on by any part of the body. A player must not throw the puck or shove it along the ice with his hand or kick it deliberately. (Penalty at least one minute for each offense.)

Neutral Officials.

It was recommended that all the officials in the finals and semi-finals be neutral, and appointed by the Executive of the O.H.A.

The honorarium of the Secretary for the season of 1921-22 was moved at $1,200, and the Treasurer at $200.

New Officers.

The officers were elected as follows: Past President, A. E. Copeland of Midland; President, W. A. Fry, Dunnville; 1st Vice-President, Wm. Easson, Stratford; 2nd Vice-President, G. B. McKay, Kitchener; A.A.U. of C. Governor, W. Davidson, Toronto; Treasurer, J. T. Paxton, Whitby; Secretary, W. A. Hewitt, Toronto; Executive Committee, J. P. Bond of Peterborough, R. Butler of Lindsay, Angus Campbell of Cobalt and R. W. Wilkinson of Galt.

P. J. Mulqueen, President of the Sportsmen's Patriotic Association, appealed for support with regard to the new civic stadium, a bylaw for which will be placed before the electors on January 1. The O.H.A. were unanimously in support, and a vote was passed endorsing this.

A standing vote of thanks to the retiring President, Mr. A. E. Copeland, was carried, and the new President, Mr. W. A. Fry of Dunnville, was introduced to the meeting and given a great reception.

Executive Meets Next Thursday.

It was announced that the first meeting of the new Executive of the O.H.A. will be held at the Evening Telegram office on Thursday, December 7, at 8 p.m., when the teams will be grouped for the season.

All entries of clubs must be in the hands of the Secretary by Wednesday, December 6.

SEPARATORS GRAB CHANCE FOR TITLE

Defeated Quakers and Tied Themselves With Engineers For Second Place.

The DeLaval complicated matters in the Industrial Section of the Soft Ball League by grabbing a victory by the score of 7 to 6 from the Quakers after ten innings of play. Two of the DeLaval runs came in on walks issued by Gilchrist in the fourth frame. The Quakers deserved a win on their work and would have had if Gilchrist had pitched in form Pirie pitching for the DeLaval worked well and was content to let his team mates do their share of the work.

Two hits and a error gave the Quakers their first run in the first innings. The DeLaval failed to score in their part of the first. Neither team scored in the second or third. Gilchrist had struck out seven men up to the end of the third. A hit in the fourth gave the Quakers their second run, but in the same inning Gilchrist blew issuing seven walks and forcing in five runs.

The Quakers failed to score in the fifth and the DeLaval added another to their total making it 6 to 2 at the end of the fifth. Neither team came through in the seventh but in the eighth the Quakers chased around three on hits and they got another in the eighth. By holding down opponents they tied the score making it six all. In the ninth both teams tightened up and neither scored. The Quakers failed in their half of the tenth. Frick first man up for the DeLaval hammered out a two bagger, stole third and came in on Doughty's single, making the winning run.

The players were:

DeLaval—Perks ss, Galbraith rf, McIntyre lf, Bell 2b, Frick 1b, Doughty 3b, McGee c, Marchen ss, Pirie p.

STAR TRAVELS TERRIFIC SPEED.

Nearly Two and a Half Million Miles an Hour For RZ Cephei.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., December 4. —Associated Press. — Nearly two and a half million miles per hour, or 1100 kilometres per second, is the speed record set by the star RZ Cephei, which according to a bulletin isued by the Harvard College Observatory, has been found by the Harvard astronomers to be moving through space with a greater velocity than that of any other star whose speed has been determined.

This star, a variable star of the so-caled cluster type, has long been known to astronomers, but its velocity was never measured until recently. It is far too faint to be seen with the naked eye, being of the 10th magnitude. It is in the constellation Cepheus and is 3800 light years distant from the earth, which means that the light from which which the astronomers now see through their telescopes started on its journey to the earth in the time of the Shepherd kings of Egypt, nearly 900 years before Christ. That distance is only a small fraction of the distance from the earth to some of the more distant star clusters but the outstanding fact about RZ Cephei is that its velocity as it flies through space is the greatest yet known for a star.

The speed of the star was measured at the Harvard Observatory by a complicated process of observations and computations, including among other things the comparison of photographs recently taken at Harvard with others taken 31 years ago when the observatory was just beginning its task of preserving a photographic history of the entire sky. Since that time a 'sky patrol' has been kept without interruption at Cambridge supplemented by photographs taken at the station at Arequipa, Ueru ,and the history of the stars down to the eleventh magnitude has been written by the stars themselves on over a quarter of a million photographic plates weighing in all one hundred and forty tons.

Most of the discoveries made by Harvard astronomers, it is said at Cambridge are not made by looking through a telescope at night as is popularly supposed but by doing what was done in the case of this discovery of the speed of RZ Cephei by studying and measuring by day, in the laboratory photographs taken at night, and by computing the significance of the changes in the brilliance or position or spectra of the stars as recorded on these plates.

Here and There in Sportdom

Hockey fans are about to receive a shock. Season after season has come and gone with invading Junior O.H.A. teams showing a big advantage in stature and weight over the local team. But the situation has changed. The season's flock of juniors includes some big lads who, if they make good on the ice, will greatly strengthen the attack and defence of the O.H.A. warriors. Incidentally, it might be mentioned that Walter Jackson, Orville Kenneally, and Lew LeBarr are bringing out a large number of junior players, and indoor training is proceeding with good results.

Congratulations to Mr. J. P. Bond on his promotion to the executive of the Ontario Hockey Association! Mr. Bond played the game for many years—longer, probably, than he would care to admit—and the experience, along with that gained on hockey executives, fits him for a place on the body governing hockey in Ontario. He knows the problems of the hockey clubs and their players, and his election will meet with general approval.

The Athletic Association is giving attention to the problem of providing ice accommodation for the numerous junior and juvenile hockey teams being organised for the coming winter. Due to the big strides made by the yonugsters last winter, something must be done to meet the needs of the teams, who will be more numerous this winter.

It has been suggested that an athletic programme might be put on at Brock Street Rink, before ice-making gets under way. The runners who took part in the races on Thanksgiving Day would make competition in races from one to five miles. Other attractions could be secured to make up a programme that would be a fitting finale to one of the best outdoor seasons this city has ever had.

FRENCHMAN WON.

PARIS, Dec. 4.—(Canadian Press) —Eugene Criqui, the French bantamweight champion, Saturday night settled all arguments as to the featherweight title of Europe by decisively defeating Billy Matthews, of England, in the seventeenth round, when the referee stopped the fight to save Matthews from further punishment.

ALL THE FAMILY HAD BAD COLDS

"Did you ever notice that if one of the family contracts a cold it generally runs to all the other members?"

Many people when they contract a cold do not pay any attention to it, thinking perhaps it will pass away of itself in a day or two. This is a great mistake for before they know it, it has become settled on the lungs.

Never neglect the first symptoms: get a bottle of

and see how quickly your cold will disappear.

Mrs. A. Coghlan, Magnolia, Alta., writes:—"Last Winter we all had bad colds in our family, and I didn't know what to do. Some friends told me to try Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup, so I went and got a couple of bottles and in a short while our colds were all gone. Now we always keep a bottle on hand in case one of us might catch a cold."

"Dr. Wood's is 35c and 60c a bottle; put up only by T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto.

AH! BACKACHE GONE RUB LUMBAGO AWAY

Quickly?—Yes. Almost instant relief from soreness, stiffness, lameness and pain follows a gentle rubbing with St. Jacobs Oil.

Rub this soothing, penetrating oil right on your painful back, and relief comes. St. Jacobs Oil is a harmless backache, lumbago and sciatica remedy which never disappoints and doesn't burn the skin.

Straighten up! Quit complaining! Stop those torturous stitches. In a moment you will forget that you ever had a weak back, because it won't hurt or be stiff or lame. Don't suffer! Get a small trial bottle of old, honest St. Jacobs Oil from your druggist now and get this lasting relief.

SAGE TEA DARKENS HAIR TO ANY SHADE

DON'T STAY GRAY—HERE'S AN OLD-TIME RECIPE THAT ANYBODY CAN APPLY

The use of Sage and Sulphur for restoring faded, gray hair to it's natural color dates back to grandmother's time. She used it to keep her hair beautifully dark, glossy and attractive. Whenever her hair took on that dull, faded or streaked appearance, this simple mixture was applied with wonderful effect.

But brewing at home is mussy and out-of-date. Nowadays, by asking at any drug store for a bottle of "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound" you will get this famous old preparation, improved by the addition of other ingredients, which can be depended upon to restore natural color and beauty to the hair.

A well-known downtown druggist says it darkens the hair so naturally and evenly that nobody can tell it has been applied. You simply dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair taking one strand at a time. By morning the gray hair disappears, and after another application or two it becomes beautifully dark and glossy.

Fruit Cake and Plum Pudding Date Back to the Days of the Romans.

By BERTHA E. SHAPLEIGH
Of Columbia University

As the holiday season approaches the housewife always thinks of making plum pudding and fruit cake. As they both keep indefinitely they can be made several weeks before Christmas and New Year.

Both fruit cake and plum pudding are old, dating back to Roman days. Of course the method of making then was different.

The spelling used to be "plumb" and all old English cook books have recipes for "plumb" cake. The plum pudding was originally made of barley with large pieces of suet in it and many plums.

All the children know the old rhyme:

"When good King Arthur ruled this land
He was a goodly king.
He stole three pecks of barley meal
To make a bag pudding.

"A bag pudding the king did make,
And stuffed it well with plums,
And in it put great lumps of fat
As big as my two thumbs.

"The king and queen did eat thereof,
And noblemen beside,
And what they could not eat that night
The queen, next morning, fried."

Plumb pudding is of German origin, having been called "plum squash," and was the combination of barley and juice from fresh plums.

The Saxons boiled their pudding in a cloth, a custom which is still followed, although a bowl is sometimes used with a cloth tied over the top. The plums are used no longer, but instead raisins.

The suet makes the pudding rich enough to prevent drying, and it may be reboiled or steamed at any time and become as soft and delicate as if just made. Some cooks think that bread crumbs are preferable to flour, making a more delicate pudding.

Pagan Custom

The pagans had a festival at the beginning of the longest night in the year in honor of the god Thor. Peace offerings in the form of cakes made of finest flour and sweetened with honey were made and not only offered to the god, but were given to friends.

When the Christian Church wished to celebrate the birth of Christ it chose this time and festival and called it Christmas. The cake, usually plum cake, was made and served, and some of it was kept until New Year's Day, or the succeeding year would be unlucky.

Fruit cake may be made simple with raisins and currants, or more elaborate with candied fruit and nuts.

It was always thought necessary to put in brandy or whisky to make the cake keep without drying, but strong coffee does very well, and if the cake is napped and placed in a stone jar there is little danger of its drying before it is all eaten.

PANTAGES' VAUDEVILLE AT THE GRAND TONIGHT

Starting with the usual daily matinee to-day, the policy at the Grand for the next week or so will be the offering of the very best refined vaudeville playing the Pantages Circuit, which includes Buffalo, Toronto, Detroit, Cleveland, etc., together with the selection of the very selected Super-Productions in the Photo-Drama Industry.

The Picture Production for the first half of the week is the 9-reel sensational drama "Sherlock Holmes," with America's Greatest Actor, Mr. John Barrymore, in the part of the great detective. Nothing finer is to be seen on the screen than John Barrymore's portrayal of this world famous character. The production played the Capitol Theatre, New York City, for over 4 months without a break, and only recently was shown in Toronto for 3 straight weeks at the one theatre.

The picture is full of thrills, mystery and action from start to the ending moments, and is not a usual studio production, but was photographed in England, Switzerland and America.

The vaudeville acts included in to-day's programme are "Florrine," Piano Accordianiste, "The Ozaos" in comedy juggling, etc. Several sohrt picture subjects round out one of the biggest and best evening's entertainment ever offered to the theatre-goers in Peterborough, and the bargain prices of 15-25-30c. plus tax are within the reach of everybody. Matinee daily, children 11c., adults 16c. Seats can be reserved for all evening performance, thus saving you the rtouble of waiting in line. Evening shows start at 8 p.m. sharp.

OBSERVE ANNIVERSARY OF SUNDAY SCHOOL

Stirring Sermons by Rev. Frank Langford at Trinity

The anniversary of Trinity Methodist Church Sunday School was observed yesterday, when the congregation was honored by having Rev. Frank Langford, youngest brother of their pastor, Rev. A. J. Langford, with them.

Rev. Frank Langford, who is the general secretary of the Board of Religious Education Department in Canada, preached at both services, as well as addressing the children at Reid Street Sunday School Hall in the afternoon.

In the morning he featured his sermon on the "place and functions of Sunday schools," and opened his address by outlining the three-fold work done by the Board of Religious Education. The different sections of endeavor, as described by the speaker, are as follows:

The outlining of a programme for the church, Sunday school, and various young people's associations for the year. At present the Executive is working on the 1925 programme, and expect to start the 1926 at Christmas time.

Promoting of the programme, which is greatly assisted by schools for the young people and conferences.

And, last of all, the establishing of new Sunday schools all over the Dominion as well as in foreign countries.

The speaker then compared the public schools of to-day with our present Sunday schools. Public schools, he said, have a compulsory attendance, a prescribed course of studies, funds supplied for beautiful schools, and for their upkeep by taxation; trained teachers; inspectors to inspect schools annually, and twenty-five to thirty hours a week for study. On the other hand, the Sunday schools have no compulsory attendance, no prescribed course of studies, no trained teachers, no inspectors and only about twenty-five to thirty hours of Bible study a year.

Under present conditions, stated Rev. Langford, Sunday school teachers are extremely handicapped by such a heavier burden than carried by public school teachers. But, he continued, there is a new day coming soon, when Sunday school teachers will get more training and more assistance from religious bodies, as well as from the parents of children themselves.

Only Advantage.

The only advantage that the Sunday school teachers have is that they are working voluntary for Christ, and their rewards are received from heaven. They are taking the parents' responsibility upon themselves for that teaching about Christ, which they should receive at home. Another feature strongly brought out by the visitor was that the average school child of to-day receives ten times more instruction in arithmetic than he does in the Bible. Here the speaker enquired of his hearers, did they really believe that their little ones needed instruction in arithmetic ten times more than in the Bible.

Describes Work.

In conclusion, the speaker briefly described the good work being done to enable us to have improved Sunday schools and better instructed teachers to teach the younger folk the principles of the Christian faith. One period a week in several schools is put apart so that members of religious bodies can visit and instruct the pupils in the word of God. Parents also are now recognizing where their help is needed, they are beginning to realize their tasks, and funds for this great work are forthcoming.

Reid Street School.

In the afternoon, the Rev. Frank Langford addressed the younger folks in the Reid Street Sunday School Hall, where an attendance of four hundred greeted him. He confined his talk to three very interesting moral-teaching stories, one to the younger children, one to the young boys and girls, and the last one to grown-up men and women.

At the evening service he delivered a very effective sermon on the text, "Young People and the New Day," taken from Ecclesiastes xi., 9. And the members of Trinity Church will long remember the many truths given them by their pastor's brother, whose efforts will not have been in vain as far as Peterborough is concerned.

MRS. PANKHURST WILL GIVE ADDRESS TO-NIGHT

All who heard Mrs. E. Pankhurst last night at the Opera House were unanimous in their praise of the able way in which the subject of Social Hygiene was presented. For all young people or ladies who did not have the opportunity of being present, the Local Executive of the Social Hygiene Council has arranged for Mrs. Pankhurst to speak to the Young people at St. Paul's church to-night at 8.00 p.m. and for the ladies at the Public Library to-morrow Tuesday, at 3 p. m. The meeting for the ladies will be under the auspices of the Local Council of Women and all ladies are invited to attend.

MUTT AND JEFF'S HONEY-MOON.

The audiences which Saw Bud Fisher's cartoon musical comedy success, enjoyed "Mutt and Jeff's Honeymoon" much more than those heroes did, for it was a stormy passage for the elongated Mutt and his diminutive friend, who were in hot water all way through. This year's version of "Mutt and Jeff" was much superior to last season's offering and proved a thoroughly enjoyable entertainment with an abundance of laughable comedy and a wealth of pleasing specialties. In make up and actions Richard Freeman as Mutt and Dan McCormick as Jeff, were the comic strip characters to the life and both proved clever comedians, who got the most out of their opportunities. Excellent support was given by the rest of the prinicpals and by the chorus, which danced nicely and sang well. A special number that was thoroughly appreciated by the specialty contributed by the Bower sisters, two clever young entertainers who have just joined the company and who won instantaneous popularity through the excelence of their singing and dancing. Madlyn Fisher, seen here last year, was very effective as Mrs. Mutt and her special numbers were well reecived. Bernard Green earned two encores with his violin specialty and other members of the cast scored frequently.

To-night the Grand's special programme of vaudeville and super picture hits begins, with John Barrymore in the thrilling success, "Sherlock Holmes."

NEW YORK CRITICS YIELD TO BARRYMORE

They showered his Performance of Every newspaper in New York accorded 'Sherlock Holmes", the Goldwyn super-feature starring John Barrymore, the highest praise when it was given a pre-release showing at the world's largest theatre, the Capitol, and broke all records for a week's engagement at that house, following it with a three months' run at B.. S.. Moss' Camoe Theatre in the heart of New York's Theatrical District. It then moved to the Broadway Theatre for an additional wek on Broadway..

Barrymore's interpretation of Conan Doyle's famous character was aclaimed as the finest thing he had ever done for the screen and the picture, made under the direction of Albert Parker, who 'shot" the scenes in England and Switzerland as well as America, was conceded to be a masterpiece of motion picture construction.

The "Daily News" always a frank critic of motion pictures, gave the following summary: "Direction — Superfine; Photography — Very Good; Value—100 per cent." The review accompanying this sumary enlarges upon the merits of the picture as follows: "Sherlock Holmes is by far the most thrilling character in detective fiction. He's always the man who plays the last card, holds the whip hand and that kind of thing So satisfactory, I think, to be sure your hero is going to come up smiling—and with a pipe in his mouth.

"It was undoubtedly a happy thought making a picture about him, and putting Jack Barrymore in the title role was little short of inspiration.. Mr. Barrymore has a light air of infallibility, anyhow.

"Really you will have an awfully good time watching him work in this film. If you have a small neighbor who is in the throes of detective liteature, take his hand and lead him to the Capitol Theatre, too. I fancy litle boys arregoing to derive an imense kick from the story and the manner of its telling.

"The London scenes were taken in London. That's nice, isn't it? All the eerie atmosphere of the story has been preserved in toto. No less a person than the ineffable Roland Young plays Watson! That in itself is worth the price of admission."

After commenting on Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's approval of the picture, "The Morning Telegraph" continues: "Thus making it unanimous that 'Sherlock Holmes' is one of the greatest film successes that Mr. Barrymore has ever made and a superlatively fine motion picture. Had Conan Doyle himself started out to conjure up an embodiment in flesh and blood of all the baffling, canny whimsically ironic and astute characteristics of the greatest detective, he could not have invoked a more fascinating reality than Mr.. Barrymore. The latter's impersonation will doubtless sem many things to many people. But each one will wonder with the same breathless amazement how he knew that Watson moved his bureau, and chuckle in the same degree when he tricks Moriarty, behind the curtain, for here is the perfect detective story, camera told."

Other metropolitan critics were equally impressed by the picturization of "Sherlock Holmes"..

Prizes This Evening At Capitol For the Road Race Winners

The prizes for the Examiner road race will be presented this evening at the Capitol Theatre immediately after the show. The presentation of the prizes and trophies for the city track championships will also take place at the same time. Dr. A. W. McPherson, president of the P.A.A.A., will give out the prizes to the winners.

Convenient seats will be reserved for the successful athletes and they are requested to be at the theatre not later than 7.45 in order that the committee may see that they are properly seated.

The prizes will not be given out during the show as was at first intended, but the audience will be asked to remain a few minutes after the performance when they will be presented.

SHIP PRE-BUILT FOR "TO HAVE AND TO HOLD."

Considered the most ambitious bit of marine construction as yet attempted in motion pictures is that which re-vamped the old South Sea trader, the William G. Irwin, for "To Have and To Hold," a George Fitzmaurice Paramount picture featuring Betty Compson and Bert Lytell, which comes to the Capitol Theatre to-night.

The William G. Irwin, 330 tons, 133 feet long, and a three-masted schooner, made a San Francisco-Honolulu record of 8 days in 1881 when she was launched. She was first made over as a British man-o'-war, vintage of 1629, and later as a pirate ship. This required a great deal of carpenter work to produce the high prow and lofty stern of the seventeenth century, all adorned with a wealth of carved and gilt work.

The scenes aboard the William G. Irwin are considered among the most colourful of the production. A real sea fight is staged, with smoke belching from real cannon of seventeenth century type, thirty of these having been especially made for "To Have and To Hold." Strenuous duels between Bert Lytell, Theodore Kosloff, Walter Long, and Fred Huntley are also announced as "thrill" features of the offering.

It is aboard the man-o'-war that Betty Compson, as "Lady Jocelyn Leigh," comes to Jamestown, Va., to escape the attentions of "Lord Carnal." In the rough colony she is first protected and then loved by Bert Lytell as "Captain Ralph Percy," who through an exciting sequence of events becomes captain of the pirate ship as a prelude to the final denouement in the court of King James I. at London.

IS THE KING OF SOUTHERN CHINA.

Thirty Years Ago Chin Gee Hue Was a Storekeeper in Seattle.

HONG KONG, Dec. 4.— (Canadian Press.)—Thirty years ago Chin Gee Hee was a humble storekeeper in Seattle, who probably spent much of his time wondering where his next meal was coming from. To-day he is "King of Southern China."

And it is all because, according to his own story, he died when he was forty-six and was sent back from heaven to live a more useful existence than he previously had spent.

There is a big bronze statue at Sunning as a perpetual reminder that Chin Gee did his duty when he came back to earth. He built a railway from Kongmoon to Sunning in Southern China and in the eyes of the peasants of that country Mr. Chin is something more than a mere story book saint.

He is seventy-six now, but he claims that during his brief sojourn in heaven he was told that he would live 104 years. Just how long he lived in Seattle not even Chin Gee remembers exactly, but he still possesses an illuminated address presented to him by the Seattle Chamber of Commerce. He made money while in Seattle, but he also lost most of it and when he returned to China he had to sell his home to pay his employees.

After that, at the age of forty-six, Chin Gee Hee "died." That, at any rate, he declares to be the positive truth. In heaven, he says, they told him they were not ready for him and they suggested that he return and build the Kongmoon-Sunning railroad. Chin took the hint and shortly after his "resurrection" he became surprisingly prosperous and successful. The building of the railroad was only one of his achievements.

He prefers kings to presidents, declaring to interviewer: "Presidents no good. Americans kill three presidents. People like king all same England. See Prince of Wales walk all over earth and no one shoot him."

His idea for the economic salvation of China is that everyone in the country should contribute on the basis of one dollar a head, the rich paying enough to make up the shortage of money from the poorer classes.

TALES OF "TONY."

(Tom Mix's Famous Horse.)

Since the announcement that Tony, the famous horse owned by Tom Mix, the Fox star, is to play the leading part in "Just Tony," a photoplay based on Max Brand's novel "Alcatraz," which comes to the Royal Theatre to-night, many anecdotes of the animal have been related, which emphasize the intelligence of the beautiful animal and show why he was chosen over hundreds of others to play in pictures with Tom.

Long ago Mix was shot in the leg by a drunken cowboy. The bullet troubled him only slightly for a dozen years; then one day, after a rodeo performance, his leg gave out and he had to go to a hospital to have the bullet removed. Tony's distress at Tom's absence was so great that he refused to eat. Pat Chrisman, in care of the pony, went to the hospital and told Tom, and the two arranged to have Tony brought to the hospital, so Tom could feed him. The superintendent of the hospital allowed Chrisman to take Mix out on the lawn in a wheel chair, and there he fed Tony the first meal the animal had eaten in several days. Thereafter, until Tom got out, the feeding of Tony was the big event of the day at the hospital.

With Collars' Aid You Can Make Old Frocks New

One way to refurbish one of last season's frocks is to add one of the new wide collars now so fashionable.

Those of net or georgette crepe, trimmed with hemstitching and a lace edging, may be made very inexpensively at home and they give the same effect of the expensive ones you buy in the shops.

It seems only fair to give this word of warning—if you have very broad shoulders such a collar will emphasize the fact. Only the young and slender should attempt this extreme style.

FOR STREET WEAR.

A street costume for the youthful figure has a short hip-length coat of brown matelasse over a brown velvet skirt. The collar is of brown rabbit fur which develops into revers henna colored crepe de chine, the longer of which ends with a sash girdle knotted at one side of the jacket.

War on Long Skirt Edict First Move For Independence, Designer Says

By Marian Hale

American girls have cultivated distinctive personalities, now they should have a distinct style of dress.

This is the opinion of Jane Stanford Hodges, who distinguished herself as a designer in the New York Textile High school, and has just won a scholarship at Wallcourt school to continue her work in costume design.

The current battle between the long and short skirt is, she believes, another evidence that we are freeing ourselves from the sartorial yoke of Paris.

"A few years ago, women would have accepted the long skirt, just because Paris ordered it. Now they don't—they are protesting, and many of them will continue to wear the short skirt regardless of what the majority may do.

Short Skirt U. S. Style.

"This is because the short skirt is a distinctly American style, adapted to American life. It would be ridiculous for the American business girl to give up such a comfortable, becoming style, just because women in Paris have decided to wear longer garments.

"Then length of a skirt should not be determined by style but by appropriateness.

"For the home and for the evening wear long skirts have always been most lovely. They have a grace and a suggestion of femininity a short skirt can never give.

"When a woman has worn a practical serge dress or suit all day, nothing rests her more than to put on a long, flowing, feminine-looking garment.

Color Important, Too

"Color, too, is important. I am glad to see that women are giving up the steady black diet and including a few colors in their fashion menu!"

Miss Hodges does not give all her thoughts to costumes. She also has some very decided ideas about homes and backgrounds.

"I should like to design women's homes as well as their clothes," she went on. "I believe New York women are the most smartly dressed of any in the country, but California women know how to create the most beautiful backgrounds for themselves. Their homes are much more original and beautiful than those in the East.

JANE STANFORD HODGES

"California women, too, have developed a very distinctive style, and have done wonders with the sports costume.

"I believe if designers were ever to make an effort to reinstate the corseted figure American women would resist it even more than the long skirt.

"Girls who have been trained to be athletic and have never worn stays would not begin now.

"After all, women are progressing Common sense was never so much the vogue as it is today.

"Women no longer want to be slaves of fashion. They want beautiful styles, and comfortable ones, and when they find them they do not wish to exchange them for mere passing fads."

CROWDS FLOCKED TO HICKEY'S SALE

Extraordinary Values in Gents' Clothing and Furnishings Listed.

From early morning Saturday until 11 o'clock at night, value-hunting shoppers flocked to Hickey's store, 345 George street, where his $19,000 stock of gents' clothes and furnishings are on sale at marked-down figures. In no case was the buyer's expectation of bargains not realized, for the goods are all of exclusive tyles and excelling workmanship, to say nothing of material, which stands in the premier class. This stock consists of the best of men's warm, durable winter underwear, hose, sweaters, mufflers, hats, raincoats, belts, odd trousers, umbrellas, suits, overcoats—in fact all clothing that gents affect, and at real sacrificing values.

This is an opportunity for men to purchase such goods as above outlined, as only arises once in a while, and shrewd buyers will take advantage of it. The overstocked store must positively be reduced this week and customers will find that apart from the phenomenal price cutting in evidence, all offerings bear that unexcelled quality for which Hickey's is noted.

SCHOOL BOARD SHIRKING OWN DIFFICULTIES

Statement at the Council Meeting Regarding the Proposed Questionaire to Ratepayers.

BYLAW LOST

A by-law authorizing the taking of a vote of the ratepayers at the municipal elections on three questions submitted by the Board of Education respecting certain mooted extensions to the Collegiate Institute was defeated in its second reading at last night's Council meeting.

When Ald. McIntyre, seconded by Ald. Morrison, moved the formality to go into Committee of the Whole, only Aldermen Holloway and Phelan supported them.

Members of the Council asserted that they hadn't sufficient information before them, and it was also said that the school trustees were side-tracking their own responsibilities.

The propositions set out in the Board of Education's interrogatory were as follows:

Are you in favour of building an addition to the present Collegiate Institute to serve as a combination Collegiate and Vocational school?

Are you in favour of building an addition to the present Collegiate Institute for High school purposes only, and later, if found necessary, to build a separate Technical school?

Are you in favour of building any addition whatever to the Collegiate Institute at the present time?

No Parks Commission.

Ald. Gainey assayed the Council's opinion toward a Parks Commission and found only Aldermen Morrison, Phelan and Hamilton in agreement with him. He asked whether the members were willing to submit a by-law to the people at the municipal elections for their sanction, but the majority were disinclined toward the scheme.

Ald. Stocker said that a delegation from the Horticultural Society would ask that Victoria and Central Parks be placed under their care next year. "We'll put in a man who'll be on the job all the time, and not come around for a few hours Monday morning and not come back till the next Monday. We want the Parks cleaned up for Saturdays and Sundays for the benefit of those who can't visit them till then. We'll plant 5,000 new bulbs and not 2,000 new ones and 3,000 old ones. The Society will give you a competent man to look after it for nothing. For every dollar in membership the Government gives us another dollar."

Ald. Gainey objected to some of these animadversions. "Ald. Stocker seems to have had something in for the caretaker this year," he said. "I think Mr. Wise was qualified and efficient and he certainly did more than his contract called for. I had many compliments about the park from citizens who were just as qualified as Ald. tSocker. Mr. Wise gave a great deal of his time to the Parks."

Ald. Stocker replied that Ald. Gainey "talked from the layman's viewpoint. I've had experience and I think I know something about it."

No Toboggan Slide.

City Engineer Parsons' estimate of $845 for the cost of a toboggan slied at Riverside Park from the corner of Hunter and Burnham streets put the quietus on the plans for that winter sport. Trestle work across the old tailrace was one of the major items of expense, and the Council passed up the whole idea.

SPEND $10,000 ON ELECTRIC SYSTEM

Utilities Commission Have Extensive Reconstruction Program — Boys Blamed For Breaking Street Lamps.

In accordance with a request from the Utilities Commission the Council last night, on Ald. Morrison's motion, seconded by Ald. Hamilton, decided to apply to the Hydro-electric Commission for the approval of the expenditure of $10,000 on the reconstruction of the electric distributing system in the area between Smith, Lansdowne and Park streets and the river.

Lamps Broken.

Replying to the Council's former enquiry about sections of the street lighting being out for certain periods recently, Mr. H. O. Fisk, manager for the Utilities Commission, explained that the switches have been rebuilt on the distributing panels that controlled the circuit in question.

Continuing, he wrote: "We have been advised that the lamps are out on the C.P.R. station platform. I might say that all lamps around the C.P.R. and G.T.R. stations are owned and serviced by them as this is private property. In addition to that, our greatest trouble is lamps being broken presumably by boys who enjoy the report made by shattered lamp bulbs. To give you an idea of the magnitude of this trouble I will quote a report, covering the last two weeks, of lamps only that were broken. Three lamps on Armour road were replaced three times in the week following November 20. During that week and the previous week broken lamps were replaced as follows:

"Roger and Sophia streets, 1; Roger and N. Sophia streets, 1; Lansdowne, opposite the Exhibition Grounds, 1; Armour road, south Smith, 6; Clifton street, 1; Smith street, bridge to Armour road, 3; Smith street hill, 1; opposite 495 Romaine street, 1; Princess and George streets, 1; Prince street, near Park, 1; Romaine street, at railway, 1.

"I might say that we are glad at all times to receive information of street lamps that are out. The public could help us a great deal in this work by telephoning information of this kind during office hours, when an order would be immediately written out and the lamp would receive much quicker attention."

This letter was referred to the Fire, Water and Light Committee.

THREATENS DESTRUCTION OF CATHOLIC BUILDINGS.

Mayor of Montreal Reports Receipt of Letters Signed "K. K. K."

MONTREAL, December 5. Canadian Press. — During the meeting of the city council yesterday, Mayor Martin referred to the suspicious number of fires that have destroyed Catholic institutions in and about Montreal. He had received, he said, several anonymous letters signed with the initials "K.K.K." They were of a threatening nature inasmuch as they contained veiled warnings that other Catholic buildings would disappear the same way.

GRIFFITH IS ORDERED TO RETURN $200

Judgment for $100 and Costs Plus the $100 in Court Given County Council in Recent Action

MONEY FOR ROADS

Restitution to the County Council of $200 by ex-Warden W. E. Griffith is the substance of the judgment delivered Monday by Judge Huycke. The defendant is ordered to repay $100 in addition to the $100 which the defendant deposited with the court prior to the enquiry last week.

The judgment follows:

Mr. F. D. Kerr, K.C., for the Plaintiffs.

Mr. E. G. Porter, K.C., for the defendant.

This is practically an action for accounting or to compel disclosure by the defendant of how certain grants had been expended, these grants being made in the years 1920 and 1921 by the County of Peterborough to the Township of Belmont and Methuen. During these years the defendant Griffith was the Reeve of the said Township, and during the last year Warden of the County.

These grants were practically gifts made to the poorer townships by the County for road improvements and other pressing necessities, the special object being sometimes specified. Under a general resolution the Reeves of these various Townships were appointed as commissioners to take charge of the money, and see that it was properly expended, and to make a return with particulars of the expenditure to the County. Under this general resolution the grants made in these years were paid to the defendant in his capacity as Reeve, and therefore as commissioner.

The Grants of 1920.

In 1920 $250.00 was paid him, $100.00 being a general grant, or the usual annual grant to this township, and $150.00 a special grant for that year only. Of this money the defendant expended on a certain road $50.00 and duly accounted for the same. Instead of expending the balance in accordance with the custom and directions he paid it into the treasurer of the township, $100.00 in August and $100.00 in December. This may not have been strictly and literally within the meaning of the terms of the grant, but eventually it reached the beneficiary township to deal with as they might see fit. No great harm has or can come from this irregularity and I therefore find that the defendant has duly expended or accounted for all the monies received by him in the year 1920.

Had Signed Voucher.

Then as to 1921. In June 1921 a $200.00 cheque was given the defendant by the County Treasurer. The defendant says he thought part of this cheque was his Wardens' indemnity and part the township grant. This canot very well be, because on the same day he received the cheque he signed a voucher for the same, which voucher stated specifically that $100.00 of it was for a general grant and the other $100.00 for a special grant to the township. During the whole year nothing was done with this money by the defendant, either as Reeve or commissioner; he did not pay any in to the township, nor did he expend any. In January following, that is 1922, he paid $100 to the township treasurer, which was duly credited him, and retained the other $100.00 until this action was brought.

Was a Commissioner.

During the year 1922 he re-opened certain negotiations with the Reeve of the Township of Burleigh, the adjoining township, as to the opening or improving of a certain road affecting both townships, with the apparent object of expending this money on that particular road construction. Nothing was done on it by the Reeve of Burleigh, or any one else, and the defendant has paid this $100.00 into court after action was brought. He contends that he did not know to whom it should go, the county or the township, notwithstanding his apparent anxiety to spend it on this special road improvement after proceedings were threatened. It was argued on his behalf and with great ability that this $100.00 was a gift by the County to the Township and that therefore it should go to the Township and not to the County. Regarding this I find that the defendant as Reeve became ex-officio commissioner for the purposes mentioned, when he ceased to be Reeve he ipso facto ceased to be commissioner and

Man, 63, Gets Bride To Leave Husband

Wife's Love for Aged Admirer Results in Divorce

LOS ANGELES, Dec. 5.—It was not flattering to Alva H. Heustis, of Long Beach, when his young wife, Gladys O. Heustis, practically a bride, permitted a man 63 years of old to win her love from him. But he could not resist her heart-broken plea to take her back. He forgave her. She vainly tried to resist the lure of her elderly admirer—a married man. She broke away again.

This time the separation was final, and Judge Summerfield granted him a divorce.

"She told me she could not understand her infatuation for the old man," he told Judge Summergeld. "She repented. One day she asked me for money to go to Los Angeles and I found that she was meeting her elderly lover."

"My God has forgiven me," she wrote him after the second time. "Will you forgive me?"

The first letter, upon which she was taken back, is an anguished appeal:

"I can bear this no longer. I simply must write to you, whether you respond to my call or not. Dear heart, I still love you. I always will love you. I have prayed night and day for some change—either for you to come back to me or for my love for you to die away, and so make it a little easier for me, but my love will not die. It grows with every passing hour.

"Oh, my dearest, I love you. Oh, I want you so. Will you not come back to me?

"Dear Jack, do you realize that Saturday will be our first wedding anniversary? Oh, dear heart, must we both go through that day alone? Oh, come back to me, please, come back. You know that you still love me, so won't you answer my call? Come back.

"Oh, if you knew how I have changed, I am sure that you would come back. Oh, come to me and answer my call and the call of your own heart and let God rule our lives henceforth. Oh, come Saturday and make it a happy day for both of us. Come and claim your bride."

PUT RELIEF UP TO GOVERNMENT

Equitable Levy on All the People is Reply From Peterborough.

Peterborough aligned itself last night with those municipalities which have taken the position that the Ontario Government should assume the responsibility of obtaining the funds required for relief in the fire-swept districts of Northern Ontario.

The Relief Committee appointed by the Government had appealed to the Council to raise $8,000, approximately the equivalent of one-half a mill on the assessment. A resolution was received from the St. Catharines Council proposing that the Provincial Government should levy for relief purposes, on all municipalities to provide the requisite amount, and "that the matter should not be undertaken in a partial manner as indicated in the available information." Proportionate contributions from both urban and rural municipalities was one object of this scheme.

A motion, presented by Ald. Turner and seconded by Ald. Jones, was very similar to the St. Catharines model, and was adopted as follows:

"That this Council believes that the needs of the people in the Northern Ontario district, which was devastated by fire, are of such a character that the necessary assistance should be given to them by the Province and the Dominion, as the relief given would then be equitably distributed over the whole people, and the work can be better carried out under Government supervision than in any other way; and that copies of this resolution be sent to the Premier of Canada, the Premier of Ontario, the Northern Ontario Relief Committee, Mr. G. N. Gordon, M.P., and Mr. T. Tooms, M.P.P.

THE 57TH REG. CHAPTER OF THE I.O.D.E. WILL HOLD A BAZAAR IN THE RECREATION ROOM OF THE ARMOURIES ON THE AFTERNOON AND EVENING OF DEC. 6TH. THERE WILL BE A SALE OF HOME MADE COOKING, AND AFTERNOON TEA WILL BE SERVED. 2d132 6979

MRS. PANKHURST ADDRESSES THE KIWANIS CLUB

Stirring Address on One of the Most Vital Questions of the Day at the Noon-day Luncheon.

KIWANIS NEWS

One of the best addresses heard at the Kiwanis Club for some time was given at to-day's noon day luncheon by Mrs. Emmeline Pankhurst on the subject of the Social Hygiene Council. This organization is largely educational in its scope and in graphic words, Mrs. Pankhurst impressed her auditors with the stern necessity of co-operation if the cause is to succeed. As a prelude to the subject of her address, Mrs. Pankhurst referred to the emancipation of women and jocularly suggested that some day, members of her sex would probably be found participating in noon-day luncheons even if it were necessary to alternate with the men each week so that the children of the home would not be neglected.

Women's place is in the home, reiterated Mrs. Pankhurst. While women's place is in the home it would not do to interpret that state men in the narrow light of an age that is past. A man's place is also in the home. When both sexes take part in the affairs outside the home they both make better citizens. The tragic barrier that divided man and women in the past is slowly being removed with the advent of a brighter day when both men and women co-operate in the development of a better and happier citizenship.

Establish Branch Here

Turning to her subject, Mrs. Pankhurst said plans were under way to establish a branch of the Social Service Council in Peterboro. The speaker made a stirring appeal to Kiwanians to support this movement and pointed out the advantages that would accrue to the nation if such a movement succeeded. One frequently hears of the fallen woman but never the fallen man. This strange distinction is one of the problems confronting the Social Hygiene Council. It has been asserted that with a more balanced code of morals at least one half of the hospitals and asylums in the country could be dispensed and in their place would be erected a monument of flesh and blood built upon a foundation of good health and unimpaired mentality.

Mrs. Pankhurst predicted that the day would come when communities would vie with each other in the development of good health among and freedom from the consequences that follow in the wake of immoral living. This latter condition is more often the result of ignorance and thoughtlessness rather than a desire to lead an immoral life.

To-day an immense amount of energy and money is being expended in dealing with results whereas it would be better if more attention was paid to causes said the speaker.

In conclusion Mrs. Pankhurst complimented the Kiwanians upon their work for the under-priviliged children and urged them also to support and endorse the work of the Social Hygiene Council when it is established in Peterboro in an active form.

Mrs. W. R. Morris, who accompanied Mrs. Pankhurst spoke a few words in commendation of the work which brought the distinguished speaker to Peterboro. Following this Mrs. Pankhurst was given a Kiwanian vote of thanks and presented with a bouquet of flowers. The lion was then permitted to roar in approved fashion all of which was gracefully acknowledged by the guest of honour.

Dr. G. L. Macdougall and President Frank Whitehouse congratulated the Kiwanis Minstrels on their recent success and Kiwanian Alex. Dick announced that a portion of the show would be staged in Knox Church next week.

Kiwanian George Henderson's recent addition to the family was duly noted and endorsed and the meeting concluded with the announcement that Ladies Night would be staged on Wednesday, December thirteenth.

WITHERS & ANGLESEY AWARDED CONTRACT GARBAGE REMOVAL

Council Runs Counter to Recommendation of Property Committee — Tender Accepted Was $50 More Than the Lowest — Overseas Service Emphasized.

DID GOOD WORK AT ALL TIMES

Contrary to the recommendations of the Property Committee, the contract for the collection of garbage next year was awarded to Messrs. H. Withers and P. Anglesey, who have carried on the work this year. Their tender was $9,000, which was $50 more than the tender of Messrs. G. C. Mitchell and Jos. Bennett who had put in the lowest bid of $8,950.

Mr. Sidney Whatley, secretary of the G. W. V. A., addressed the Council in behalf of Withers and Anglesey.

"When you are making your award," he said, "we ask that you take into consideration the fact that these men served three or four years overseas, and that you recall the promises the Council made before that where the qualifications were equal preference would be given returned men."

Satisfactory Work

Ald. McIntyre said he didn't express his opinion when the tenders were dealt with in committee. "I didn't think it a square deal. As chairman of the Property Committee I had no complaints about the work of the contractors last year. They have been giving good service, and as Mr. Whatley pointed out, they are returned men. I don't feel like having them lose the contract for a matter of $50. I wouldn't turn Mitchell down for that sum and we'd be lucky to have him, and in the same way I don't feel like turning down Withers and Anglesey."

In seconding the motion Ald. Crowe said he knew these men had done satisfactory work since they got the contract, and in addition they were instrumental in reducing the cost $750 once before.

"When they do their work well and within reasonable bounds of price, I don't feel like changing them for a difference of $50."

Building Permits

Building permits issued during November numbered 22 for a total value of $11,678. Forty-one inspections were made, City Engineer Parsons reported.

Writ For Damages

A writ for damages in behalf of Mrs. Carrie Whitlow for injuries suffered in a fall on Simcoe Street and issued by Mr. S. T. Medd was referred to the Legal Committee.

Acknowledgements

Letters of appreciation of the Council's condolence were received from Jos. R. Metheral and Mrs. W. J. Johnston.

24 Fire Alarms

In November the Fire Department responded to 24 alarms for which the apparatus traveled 70 miles. The loss amounted to $75 with no insurance.

"Drills were carried on as usual outside till this week when I discontinued them," Chief Gimblett reports, but there will be lectures on equipment while the weather is inclement. Inspections for the month totalled 209.

Lay Telephone Cables

The request of the Bell Telephone Co. for permission to open up the following streets for the placing of their cables underground was granted on Ald. Hamilton's motion, seconded by Ald. Stocker, that the work be done under the supervision of the City Engineer: Hunter street from Sheridan street to Driscoll street with necessary branches; Smith street from George east and Water with branches north on George and Water Streets; branches on Antrim, Edinburgh and Dublin streets east and west of George street, and on London street west of George street.

Mr. Alf. Smith, plant chief, informed the Council that the company intended to place underground their cables between Hunter and Driscoll streets within the next six weeks, and requested that the fire alarm wires on these poles be removed.

Home Brew Orgie North of Apsley Ends in a Mix-up

According to rumors in the village of Apsley, one of the old time orgies for which that neighborhood was notorious some fifty years back took place recently at a dance held several miles north of the village.

It is reported that home brew was plentiful and so potent in its effects that in a general mix-up that followed one of the combatants developed cannibal tendencies, chewing his opponent, when more manly measures failed to subdue him.

SUNDAY SKATING DIVIDES COUNCIL

Question Arose Over Use of Lake Street Dressing Station For Skaters on the Lake.

When Ald. Gainey communicated to the Council last night at request from the Peterborough Amateur Athletic Association for the use of the dressing quarters at the Lake street bathing place for the comfort of skaters on the lake this winter, the question was raised as to whether the building should be open on Sundays.

He suggested that a caretaker might be engaged on the permission to collect a checking fee and perhaps to sell hot drinks and other refreshment. Ald. McIntyre seconded the motion, but quickly tacked on the reservation that the dressing room should not be open on Sundays.

"I'll withdraw it if that is the intention," he said.

Ald. Holloway volunteered as seconder.

Ald. McIntyre later asked, when the motion was being drafted in detail, whether the dressing quarters would be open seven days in the week.

"Any time the people want," replied Ald. Holloway.

Ald. Crowe: "Does that mean that you are going to let the other rinks around the city be open?"

Ald. Hamilton: "Whatever we may think there's no use trying to keep people from skating. They'll go there anyway, and those who skate will be able to change their boots and check them in comfort."

Ald. Crowe observed that a mercenary spirit cropped out if the caretaker would be allowed to sell things.

Ald. Phelan: "That's the same thing as buying a cup of coffee uptown on Sunday."

Ald. Jones: "It's not for us to encourage skating on Sundays."

Ald. Jones moved an amendment, seconded by Ald. McIntyre, that the dressing station be open only six days in the week.

Ald. Phelan: "They'll skate on the lake anyway. They've been doing it every winter."

Aldermen Jones, McIntyre and Crowe voted for the amendment.

"The ayes and nays," demanded Ald. Jones, and City Clerk Armstrong recorded the following division on Ald. Gainey's motion:

Ayes—Phelan, Holloway, Turner, Hamilton, Morrison, Gainey and Mayor Taylor.

Nays—Jones, Stocker, McIntyre and Crowe.

OKA FIRE STARTED IN FURNACE ROOM.

And Spread Through Whole Presbytery With Great Rapidity This Morning.

OKA, Quebec, December 5. Canadian Press. — Fire started in the furnace room of the Presbytery early this morning and spread through the building with great rapidity. Very soon the whole structure was in flames. The gale spread sparks to the church and the Seminary near by, which were soon in a blaze.

The church was valued at $150,000. It dates back to the earliest times and was erected by the Sulpician Fathers as a Mission House for the Indians.

HE HAS NO DOUBT THAT ADVERTISING PAYS WELL

Ten Thousand Shoppers On Hand Before Klein's Store Opened.

Does advertising pay? Ask Mr. S. Klein, and he surely will say "yes!" Mr. Klein took over the old saloon corner at 14th Street and Fourth Avenue, New York. He stocked it with cloaks and dresses. He advertised in afternoon papers on Monday that he would dispose of 2,000 suits, cloaks and skirts for $1 each, 3,000 ditto for $3.95 each and an entire floor of garments at $10 each, only one to a customer, on each floor.

The women, 10,000, were on hand before the store opened on Tuesday. Sidewalks were blocked, street cars stalled, and taxi service at a standstill. A policeman called for the reserves. Every available man was sent, mounted police from distant precincts clattered down the avenue at a cavalry pace. Patrolmen were stationed at Subway exits to warn the stream of newcomers that there would be little chance of getting near the store. But the women wanted bargains and not advice. They struggled, scratched, elbowed and fought for position. The sidewalks were strewn with feathers, ribbons and hairpins, but the crowd held on.

A reporter managed to work his way through the outskirts of the crowd in an effort to get an interview with the police inspector in charge. The inspector waved his hand toward the store. "Hell," he said, "my wife's over there too".

Mr. Klein of the cloak and suit trade has arrived. As for advertising, he believes in it.

Polling Booth, No. 8, Trent Bridge, Harold Wood, D.R.O., Isaac Lawson, clerk.

Accounts were passed to the amount of $262 and an order drawn on the treasurer for the same.

The next meeting will be held on December 5th.

An American court reporter recently wrote at the rate of 300 words a minute for five consecutive minutes and then presented a transcript which contained only two immaterial errors.

Early Advertising Copy

Better service can be given advertisers who hand in their copy EARLY IN THE FORENOON or the evening before.

This is particularly true just now when Advertisers find it highly profitably to use the columns of The Daily Examiner, which goes into nearly every home in the city of Peterborough, and the outside villages and rural routes. Total circulation 7,100 copies.

A by-law for granting a bonus to the De Laval Company, Limited, which consists of fixing the assessment of the said Company, including the lands and buildings and being all those parts of Park Lots One, Two and Three in Township Lot Number Thirteen in the Twelfth Concession of the Township of North Monaghan (now within the City of Peterborough) lying south-east of the right-of-way of the Midland Branch of the Grand Trunk Railway, except the Northerly eight feet of said Lot Three, at the sum of $50,000.00 for a period of ten years, commencing on the first day of January, 1923, said fixed assessment not to include school rates or taxes, local improvement rates or taxes and patriotic fund rates or taxes. This fixed assessment is conditional upon the Company erecting a building on the above described lands on or before the 31st day of December 1923, with dimensions of 100 feet by 40 feet and in default of the Company so doing the fixed assessment herein provided shall fail after said last mentioned date.

TAKE NOTICE that the foregoing is a true synopsis of a proposed By-law of the Corporation of the City of Peterborough to be submitted to the votes of the electors at the same places as the annual election for the Municipal Council and the Deputy Returning Officers appointed to hold the said election shall take the vote.

And that if the assent of the electors is obtained to the said proposed by-law it shall be taken into consideration by the Municipal Council of the said Corporation at a meeting thereof to be held after the expiration of one month from the date of the first publication of this notice, and that such first publication was made on the 5th day of December, 1922.

And that the 30th day of December, A.D., 1922, at ten o'clock in the forenoon at the Clerk's office in the said Municipality, has been fixed for the appointment of persons to attend at the polling places and at the final summing up of the votes by the Clerk.

S. R. ARMSTRONG, Clerk.

SYNOPSIS OF BY-LAW

A by-law to provide for borrowing of $3,000.00 to purchase that part of block "A" East of Armour Road, in the City of Peterborough, and commonly known as Armour Hill for the purpose of establishing a public park. The money is to be repaid in thirty years (30) with interest in the meantime at five and one-half (5½ p.c.) per cent. per annum, involving the raising, namely of $53.50 to form a sinking fund and $165.00 for the payment of interest, making in all $218.50 to be raised annually for a period of thirty years (30) for the payment of the debt and interest.

TAKE NOTICE that the foregoing is a true synopsis of a proposed By-law of the Corporation of the City of Peterborough to be submitted to the votes of the electors at the same time and at the same places as the annual election for the Municipal Council and the Deputy Returning Officers appointed to hold said election shall take the vote.

TAKE NOTICE FURTHER that a tenant who desires to vote on said proposed by-law must deliver to the Clerk, not later than the Tenth day before the day appointed for taking the vote, a declaration under the Canada Evidence Act that he is a tenant whose lease extends for the time for which the debt or liability is to be created, or in which the amount to be raised by the proposed by-law is payable, or for at least twenty-one years, and that he has by the lease covenanted to pay all Municipal taxes in receipt of the property of which he is tenant but other than Local Improvement rates.

And that the 30th day of December, A.D., 1922, at ten o'clock in the forenoon at the Clerk's office in the said Municipality, has been fixed for the appointment of persons to attend at the polling places and at the final summing up of the votes by the Clerk.

S. R. ARMSTRONG, Clerk.
3d-5-12-19-6990.

NOTICE

TAKE NOTICE that the following question, namely: "Are you in favor of acquiring for a sum not exceeding $5,000.00 the land and premises of John W. Rome, being number 425 Mark Street and known as Lot Number Two, Plan 1A for the City of Peterborough, for the purpose of opening Cricket Place to Mark Street?" is to be submitted to the votes of the electors at the same time and at the same places as the annual election for the Municipal Council and the Deputy Returning Officers appointed to hold the said election shall take the vote.

And that the 30th day of December, A.D., 1922, at ten o'clock in the forenoon at the Clerk's office in the said Municipality, has been fixed for the appointment of persons to attend at the polling places and at the final summing up of the votes by the Clerk.

I WAS WARNED TO KEEP MOUTH SHUT DECLARED WITNESS

The Garneau Enquiry at Quebec is Progressing—Witnesses Protected.

QUEBEC, Dec. 5. — (Canadian Press.)—"I was warned by my brother-in-law that I was being 'spotted' and to keep my mouth closed," was the statement made by Michel Baribeau, Blanche Garneau's foster-father, at the Garneau enquiry yesterday. Baribeau, who is an old man of 71, was the principal witness at yesterday afternoon's session of the Royal Commission which is investigating all the circumstances surrounding the murder of Blanche Garneau in Quebec two years ago.

The witness admitted he had heard several names mentioned but feared to even whisepr those names because he knew they were those of prominent people.

Colonel H. Chasse, of the Royal 22nd Regiment, quartered at Quebec, swore Henri Casauben, alias Duval, the man who had confessed he had actually seen the murder committed, was in the military jail, at the time, and that he could not possibly have been on the scene of the crime at the time mentioned. The same fact was emphasized by Mr. Justice Archibald in a short comment on the Colonel's evidence.

Sheriff Blouin, of Quebec, testified that the number of the post office box mentioned in an anonymous letter which had been received by Detective Joseph Valade, of Montreal, who was engaged on the case, was the number of the Sheriff's own box. There was not the slightest hint that Mr. Blouin knew anything about the letter and his statement that he had not written it, only brought forth loud laughter.

During the morning session John A. Sullivan, K.C., one of the lawyers, who is looking after the interests of the general public, threatened to withdraw but after he had been assured all his clients, and in fact all those who might supply him with any information, no matter of what kind, would be fully protected, he agreed to remain.

Sir Keith is preparing for a world flight to be essayed from London April 3 next. He is now en route to Washington via San Francisco.

2715 CLAIM PRIZE FOR CANCER CURE

Lord Atholstan's Offer of $100,000 Has Brought Out Many Who Claim to Have Cure For Dread Disease.

MONTREAL, December 5 (Canadian Press). — The offer of Lord Atholstan of a prize of $100,000 for the discovery of a cure for cancer has brought 2,715 claims for the award from 41 countries.

On the advice of the Royal College of Physicians and Surgeons, London, England, claimants, to entitle them to consideration of their alleged cures as in competition for the prize, must satisfy a recognised medical faculty or leading medical society in his or her own country first that there is some scientific basis to justify experimental investigation of the professed cure, and that any cases said to be successfully treated, were in fact cases of cancer

Claimants who have satisfied these conditions should request the medical faculty or medical society to report to the Imperial Cancer Research Fund.

The Imperial Cancer Research Fund will then determine the means to be adopted to investigate the claims of the applicant.

GRAVE ROBBERS ARE HUNTED WITH DOGS

And Police Patrols Guard the Cemeteries in Vienna Every Night.

VIENNA, Dec. 5.—(Associated Press)—Ghouls have become so active in the great cemeteries of Vienna, according to the press, that police guards now patrol these resting places of the dead every night, accompanied by dogs.

The grave robbers are disinterring newly buried bodies and robbing them of clothing, the little jewelry souvenirs that loving families have sent with dear one to the grave, of gold filled teeth, and even shearing the tresses of women.

Dominion House is Evenly Divided Up

OTTAWA, December 5 (Canadian Press). — Yesterday's by-elections in Halifax and Lanark do not affect party standing in the House. In neither of the constituencies is there any party change in the representative chosen.

Unless there are developments in the interval, the next session will see a House technically divided exactly even, with a Liberal Speaker holding the casting vote.

On one side—including W. J. Hammell, of Muskoka, who recently renounced his allegiance to the Progressives—there will be 117 Liberals, on the other there will be 65 Progresives, 50 Conservatives, and 2 Labour representatives, or a combined Opposition of 117 members.

THREE ROBBERS GET A BIG HAUL

Highwaymen Get Money and Jewels Worth Over $1,800 From Alfred Lejeunesse.

MONTREAL, Dec. 5.—(Canadian Press).—Alfred Lajeunesse, aged 36 was assaulted by three highway men on St. Lawrence Boulevard early yesterday morning, and robbed of $145 in cash, a diamond ring, valued at $500, and a gem set stickpin, worth $400. The trio pounced on Lajeunesse as he was nearing his home and threw an ammonia scented blanket over his head. Anxious at all costs to retain possession of his valuable ring Mr. Lajeunesse tightly clenched his fist in an endeavor to prevent it being pulled from his finger. This act cost him a severe blow in the face, but he did not open his hand. Fearful of being apprehended and yet not wishing to forfeit so rich a prize, the bandits seized their victim and began to knock his head on the stone pavement, at the same time threatening him with even greater discomforts if he did not immediately relinquish the ring. Finally, too stunned to resist them further, Lajeunesse limply permitted his five hundred dollar ring to be wrenched from his finger. The men left him lying in the gutter.

CONSERVATIVES WIN IN KINGSTON

Made Practically a Clean Sweep of Everything in the Municipal Elections Yesterday.

KINGSTON, Ont., December 5 (Canadian Press). — What is known as the "Givens-Sowards Slate," composed of a sufficient number of Conservatives to control the City Council, made practically a clean sweep of things in the municipal election here yesterday, when they elected the Mayor, ten out of eleven aldermen whom they had endorsed, and the only school trustee who was up for election.

The campaign was an unusually acrimonious one, and Mr. Givens, who is the publisher of the Standard, and Mr. Sowards, who is a leading coal dealer here, were accused by the Liberals and the Liberal newspaper of seeking to "Tammanise" the city and of intending to turn the City Council into a Conservative machine.

The result, therefore, was awaited with interest, and showed a remarkable vote for the so-called 'Slate."

Ald. Agrove, the Conservative nominee for Mayor, defeated Mayor Corbett by 650 majority, one of the largest majorities ever given a Mayor in Kingston, while with the single exception of one alderman, the rest of the "Slate" swept the city.

This is the first time the municipal elections were held in December, and the vote was considerably larger than that polled last New Years day. The total vote for mayor yesterday was 3,461, of which Ald Angrove received 2,051, and Mayor Corbett 1,401.

The following aldermen were elected at yesterday's election: Sydenham ward, T. A. Kidd, H. F. Richardson and Dr. F. J. O'Connor. Ontario ward, H. N. Robertson, R. E. Kent and J. E. Johnston. St. Lawrence ward, Harvey Milne, H. F. Price and W. P. Peters. Victoria ward, T. H. Sargent, William McCartney and P. B. Chown.

The following aldermen were elected by acclamation: Cataraqui ward, Charles S. Anglin, W. J. Driscoll, Enoch Godwin. Frontenac ward, Rev. J. D. Boyd, Wm. Holder, Howard Kelly. Rideau ward, John Molder, George Laturney, C. C. Nash.

In the election for school trustee in Frontenac ward, Chas. Hebert defeated J. F. Leatherland.

The electors were asked if they were in favor of a city by-law to continue in force daylight saving from the first Sunday in May until Labor Day, was answered in the affirmative by a substantial majority.

SCHOOL BOARD LAKEFIELD MET

Will Charge Tuition Fee of $1 a Month For Outside Pupils.

LAKEFIELD, Dec. 5.—At the regular meeting of the Board of Education there were present J. W. Ridpath in the chair, Trustees, Mrs. Graham, Dr. Smith, D. H. Charlton and Dr. Gibson.

Moved by Trustee Smith, seconded by Trustee Charlton that the principals report be received and that the resignation of Miss Irene Madill be accepted with regret.—Carried.

Moved by Trustee Charlton, seconded by Trustee Graham, that the Board engage Miss Preston to fill the vacancy caused by Miss Madill's resignation from the public school staff at the present salary.—Carried.

Moved by Trustee Smith seconded by Trusee Gibson, that Miss Duff's request for an increase of salary be laid over till the regular meeting in January, and that the chairman and Trustee Mrs. Graham be a committee to discuss with Miss Duff the attitude of the Board in regard to the matter.—Carried.

Moved by Trustee Gibson seconded by Trustee Charlton that the secretary instruct Mr. Simpson to ascertain the number of pupils from other section now attending the Lakefield Public School, and that he collect the sum of $1 per month as a tuition fee from each pupil, the same to be remitted to this Board. Fees to date from September 1, 1922..—Carried.

Payment of Accounts

Moved by Trustee Gibson seconded by Trustee Smith, that this board appoint G. W. H. Pattrick, a member of the public library board to fill the vacancy caused by the absence of Rev. Mr. Dixon.—Carried.

The Finance Committee presented the following report and recommended the payment of the accounts.

Lakefield News, Supplies $35.60; H. G. Fiztgerald, hardware, $21.04; Tanner Drug Co., supplies, $135.05; G. Dunford cleaning grounds,$4.00; W. Sherin, Insurance, $30.00; W. Sherin, receipted accounts, $7.20; Total —$232.89.

The Board then adjourned.

LIST OF SENATORS.

DUBLIN, Dec. 5. — (Canadian Press.)— Although President Cosgrave's list of senators is still secret it is learned that he found it difficult to fill places in accordancee with the late Arthur Griffith's promise to Southern Unionists. Many prominent titled Irishmen, like Lord Iveagh and Lord Middleton, have declined nomination. Presidents list now includes fairly representative selection of prominent men, including Martin Fitzgerald, publisher of Freeman's Journal, William B. Yeats and George Russell, famous writers, and Lord Dreis.

Liberal Election Was Conceded in Halifax

HALIFAX, December 5 (Canadian Press). — At 7.10 last night, the election of the Hon. Robert E. Finn, Liberal, as the Federal member for Halifax ,to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Dr. Edward Blackadder, was conceded by a large majority.

Liberal headquarters announced the voting in Halifax City as two to one in favour of Finn.

Thirty polls out of forty-one in the county outside of Halifax and Dartmouth gave the following poll:

Finn (Liberal), 2,242.
O'Connell (Labour), 533.
Power (Ind. Liberal), 1,329.

The total for the town of Dartmouth gave Finn 846, O'Connell 494, and Power 347.

Bill Was Rushed Through Both Houses of Parliament Without Amendments or Division — Lord Carson, the Last of the Die Hards, Fights a Lone Battle Against the Measure.

TIMOTHY HEALY IS GOVERNOR-GENERAL.

LONDON, December 5 (Canadian Press). — The centuries-old struggle between England and Ireland ended last night when the legislation giving the sanction of law to the new settlement with Ireland passed its final stages in the House of Lords, which for generations has bitterly opposed any accommodation with Ireland.

The Constitution Bill has gone through both Houses of Parliament without any amendment, and even without division being challenged, Lord Carson alone, whose influence was mainly responsible for failure to settle the Irish question in 1914, and who has throughout his political career been the bitterest opponent of Home Rule, persisted to the very end in his role of "last ditcher," even when such traditional anti-Home Rulers as the Marquis of Lansdowne and the Duke of Devonshire had gracefully yielded to the Government view and resolved to give Ireland a chance to prove her sincerity under new conditions.

Devonshire frankly confessed that the short month in which he has been dealing with Irish affairs in the new Government had entirely converted him to the view that Ireland would really "deliver the goods," and he reproached Lord Carson for his denunciatory speech, which could only inflame passion and do harm.

There now only remains Royal assent, which is a pure formality, and everything will be ready for the new Irish Government o come into existence, with excellent omens in the expressed desire even of many of the "Die-hard" statesmen in England to give it every opportunity to succeed in its work, not only unhampered, but aided by England.

Even the appointment of Timothy Healy as Governor-General of the Irish Free State, which is momentarily expected to be announced officially, is on reflection recognised as an auspicious event. When Mr. Healy's name was first mentioned, it was received with astonishment and some incredulity. When a Governor-Generalship is in question, the British mind turns naturally, in the direction of some titled personage. Now it is admitted the appointment of Mr. Healy would be singularly appropriate.

In the first place, Mr. Healy, throughout his political career has been one of the strongest opponents of the British connection, and therefore cannot be suspected of the slightest sympathy with British views antagonistic to Ireland. Secondly, his appointment would link the Free State with all previous phases of the Home Rule struggle, for, besides being one of the greatest lights of the Parnell movement, he is connected with still earlier struggles, by reason of his relationship to T. D. Sullivan, author of "God Save Ireland."

Public Sympathetic.

Moreover, Kevin O'Higgins, Minister of Home Affairs, who piloted the legislation through the Dail Eireann, is Mr. Healy's nephew, and Mr. Healy's exceptional intellectual and legal gifts undoubtedly have been at the disposal of the new Irish Ministers, and are expected to prove invaluable to the new Government in its difficult initial stages.

Preparations for the formalities of inaugurating the Government and appointing an Irish Senate were afoot in Dublin yesterday, but it will probably be the end of the week before the Senate is completely constituted

On the whole, the new Government of the Irish Free State comes into being under good auspices so far as England is concerned, the press and public with very few exceptions being entirely sympathetic.

The Irish Free State becomes a definite entity through the final passage of the Irish Constituion Bill by the British Parliament and the expected immediate Royal approval of the measure. This occurs almost a year to a day from the signing of the Anglo-Irish Treaty.

On 6th December, 1921, the Anglo-Irish Treaty was signed in London. Under it a Provisional Parliament was set up in Ireland, elected by the votes of the Southern Irish people. To this Parliament a consitution for Ireland was presented by the Provisional Irish Government. It was debated at length and finally approved with but few amendments to the original draft as prepared by the legal experts under the guidance of such leaders as Michael Collins, Arthur Griffith, and their successors.

Follows the Treaty.

This constitution conforms with the general outlines of the treaty. It provides for a permanent Parliament of two Houses, with the executive authority invested in a Cabinet responsible to the Parliament, and sets up the other machinery necessary for conducting the affairs of the Free State as a Dominion of the British Empire with a Governor-General appointed by the Crown.

After receiving the approval of the Irish Parliament, the Constitution was transmitted to London, and with enabling legislation was introduced into the British Parliament. The collapse of the Lloyd-George Government came just as the Irish Bills no wbeing made law were about to now being made law were about to be taken up by the Parliament, and it was necessary to hasten the holding of the general election and the installation of a new Government so that the Irish legislation could be completed before the expiration of a year from the date the treaty was signed, this time limit being set by that document.

The legislation met with no serious opposition in its passage through Parliament, the new Conservative Government making the task of completing the legislation its first duty.

Prime Minister Bonar Law stressed the necessity of prompt action, and the passing of legislation without amendment as not to give opportunity for a conflict with the Irish Provisional authorities, through which the success of the plan for set-

A Fuel Saving Secret

This is a message to conscientious housewives, and a piece of advice to all.

The shortage and high price of cooking fuel has brought to light many things which might never have been known otherwise. Here is one thing, for instance. Did you know that good enameled ware cooking utensils heat more quickly than utensils made all of metal, such as copper, brass or aluminum? It's true. Try it!

Take a good grade of enameled ware saucepan, and a similar sized saucepan made of copper, aluminum or brass. Put two quarts of cold water into each. Set them on the fire and time them—see how long it takes each to boil. Over a moderate heat, water in the enameled ware saucepan will boil in approximately ten minutes. But the water in the all-metal saucepan, with the same heat will take approximately eighteen minutes—almost double the time—to come to the boil!

Think of the wasted heat and the amount of wasted money it must represent! Just figure what this would run into in a year!

Use enameled ware utensils for cooking and save heat and money. Don't purchase cheap, flimsy enameled ware. Get the best, either Diamond Ware, which is sky blue and white outside with a snowy-white lining, or Pearl Ware, which is a beautiful pearly grey and white mottle inside and out. Another enameled ware of really super qualities is snow-white outside and inside with deep blue trimmings. It is called Crystal Ware and is now used in many of Canada's finest homes.

All three of these wares carry a green and red shield shape SMP trade mark on every utensil. Don't buy enameled ware unless it carries one of these trade marks. You can buy SMP Crystal Ware, Diamond Ware or Pearl Ware at any hardware store. Don't accept substitutes.

THE ADOLESCENT ACT.

According to the Port Hope Guide, the agitation against the Adolescent School Act is gathering force all over the Province. The Simcoe Reformer instances a case which recently came up in the Police Court in that town: "At a recent sitting of the local Magistrate's Court a lad of seventeen appeared on the stand. He is of a family of seven sons, two of whom are at home and three at work. This lad attained proficiency entitling him to junior second standing, when he completed his public school education a short time ago. Further attendance would have been useless, especially in view of the fact that the father was called on to support five of the seven sons. The boy's mother testified that her husband found it impossible to continue the education of a youth, who while apparently ignorant at school, could substantially swell the family funds. Hundreds of such cases are militating against a successful operation of the new Adolescent Act, which in 1923 promises to entail clauses, the enforcement of which will bring untold misery into scores of homes, where families already live in comparative poverty. Overcrowding of schools and increased building costs are other features of an act which is fast becoming a storm-centre of a widespread conflict."

NO INTERFERENCE WANTED.

The theory so popular with many members of the Progressive party in Canada that the district clubs should control the actions of their representatives in Parliament is evidently not accepted by Ramsay MacDonald, the British Labour leader.

He declares that the Labour members must be allowed to attend to their Parliamentary duties unhampered by interference on the part of the people who elected them.

The Labour chieftain does not propose to have his followers handicapped by their constituents, and in that stand he is more correct than the Progressives in this country, who believe that the members should be mere puppets, operated by strings pulled by the political solons at home.

The elected members are in a better position to reach a sound decision than the machine in their constituencies, the members of which cannot possibly be as closely in touch with the situation as the men on the firing-line.

Mr. Crerar made that plain in resigning from the Progressive leadership, and the plain warning he issued at that time is confirmed by the position taken by the British Labour party.

The Progressive idea is illogical and unsound, and the sooner it is abandoned the better for the country, as well as for the Farmers' organization.

A FOOL FIRST—THEN A COWARD.

The agitation for stricter laws against reckless motorists may not be securing the results aimed at, but it is having another and quite serious effect.

Realizing that public opinion is very strongly against the motorist who through negligence or recklessness kills or badly injures someone, many drivers are adding cowardice to their other faults.

The other day a motorist whose car smashed into a buggy just outside of Peterborough put on speed and fled from the scene without stopping to ascertain the damage he had done.

In Toronto out of three automobile accidents over the week-end only one of the three drivers responsible returned to the scene of the accident. The others drove off, leaving their victim lying on the road.

The punishment meted out to men such as these should befit their crime.

The driver who after an accident is manly enough to render what assistance he can to the injured and stands his ground in spite of the consequences to himself is to some extent at least entitling himself to the respect of his fellows.

There can be nothing but contempt for the coward who by his sheer disregard of all safety first principles causes an accident and then speeds oc in a panic without waiting to see the consequences of his folly.

Instances of this kind are multiplying, and public sentiment will support a drastic sentence for every offender of this kind who may be convicted.

AN ALL-CANADIAN MACAZINE.

The advent of a new Canadian magazine — for Canada, by Canada, about Canada, and measuring up to the best standard of the favorite American publications that are so widely read in this country—should be welcomed by all Canadians.

The complaint has often been voiced that the Canadian people are in danger of being "Americanized" because most of the reading matter they peruse is published in the United States, containing articles and stories that are written from an American angle and dealing almost exclusively with American subjects.

The new magazine—its name has not yet been decided upon, but the inaugural number is now off the presses—offers itself as an antidote against the propaganda of the American publications.

From the standpoint of clever writing, fine illustrations, and excellent turnout generally, it will stand comparison with the best that is produced across the border.

And it is an all-Canadian publication, for writers, illustrations, editors, publishers, workmen and material will all be Canadian. It promises to interpret in an eminently popular reading style our Canadian ideals and ambitions, our undertakings and achievements, our conceptions as a nation and our character as a people.

The inaugural number teems with good things. There is an article that tells of the rise to power of MacKenzie King, there is a most interesting story of the grocery boy (Capt. Merton Plunkett of the Dumbells), who became a big theatrical success; Norman Harris, former financial expert of Toronto Saturday Night, tells of his experiences in answering people's questions about their own money; Courtney Savage describes the career of the Quebec girl who became America's greatest artist's model, and there are half a dozen other special features just as Canadian and just as good, while Canadian fiction is well represented by seven sparkling short stories.

The new magazine meets a long-felt need in Canada, and if its general excellence, as demonstrated in its inaugural number is maintained, as it doubtless will be, there is every reason to expect instantaneous popularity for the publication.

THE DE LAVAL COMPANY.

The request of the De Laval Company for a fixed assessment of $50,000 for a term of ten years should be granted.

When they located here ten years ago an exemption for twenty years was sought by the company, but they were told that if the shorter term was accepted, there should be no difficulty in securing a renewal of the exemption when the ten-year term expired.

This implication should be made good, and undoubtedly will be, for the citizens of Peterborough regard the De Laval Company as one of the city's most substantial and worth-while industries.

They know that every promise made by the company in locating here has been fulfilled—in fact the company has done far more than their agreement with the city called for.

Their plant in the first place is double the capacity mentioned in the agreement.

The company promised to employ an average of not fewer than 50 hands.

The yearly average during the ten years has been 200 employees, and at certain periods 400 have been employed in the local plant.

The De Laval Company has earned the reputation of being a "good firm to work for," and they are a good firm for any city to possess, it may be added.

It is welcome news that the plant is to be further enlarged in the spring, and that an increased number of employees will be required.

The company has made good every obligation it assumed in coming to Peterborough, and the citizens should see to it when the by-law is submitted to them that Peterborough makes good its obligation to the company.

It should be understood that the De Laval Company will continue to pay all school taxes and local improvements on their assessment of $192,000, as they have done during their ten years here, and additionally full rates on $50,000 of this amount.

"WHICH IS ABSURD."

Mr. H. W. Wood, leader of the United Farmers of Alberta, however resolute he may be in character and action, has all the oratorical fervor of the ideologue. In a speech at Calgary a few days ago he said: "There is a conflict right in our movement. Democracy at the bottom growing up to the top—a plant of democracy bearing the fruit of autocracy." He added: "What are we going to do? Are we going to stand four-square first, last and all the time on the solid rock foundation of organized democracy, or to be carried away by the allurements—for want of a better word—of being autocratically governed?"

This sounds alarming enough, but one cannot even see through a glass darkly. What is "the solid rock foundation of organized democracy?" Does it mean a free franchise and the civil and political equality of all classes? Or are we to understand that "organized democracy" is best expressed in the organization of a single class for the domination of all other classes? Is true and free democracy best represented by a political system which makes a member of Parliament the servant of one element in his constituency and subject to recall, humiliation and punishment if he ever ventures to disobey its commands or looks beyond the class interest to the general interest?

Mr. Wood declares that there has been an agitation to create autocratic machinery. Does he not realize that he is the leader of the agitation and the pillar of the system? What could possibly be more autocratic than a system of political organization which vests the power of government in a single class, which is openly and deliberately antagonistic to co-operation with other classes, which can recall from Parliament a member who does any independent thinking, and which degrades Parliament to the level of a registering machine for an organized class group whose chief agents are not responsible to the general community?

Mr. Wood and his allies denounce manufacturers for alleged interference in politics. He would be the last man to agree that Parliamentary control by a financial group or a Labor group was government by democracy. Yet all his preaching is a denunciation of his own practice in politics and an absolute challenge to the democracy which he exalts and the freedom which he professes to worship. Mr. Wood is a friendly man and he should remember that many people who know him and like him are distressed when he is absurd and would feel real sorrow if he should become ridiculous.—Montreal Star.

EDITORIAL NOTES AND COMMENT.

Why postpone that Christmas shopping any longer? The selection was never better than now.

London surgeons are to confess their errors for the benefit of their colleagues, thus refuting the generally accepted theory that doctors' mistakes are always buried.

There will be no surprise in Canada over the defeat of the Anti-Lynching Bill in the Unitedl States. Lynching has been accepted so long by our neighbors that it was not to be expected that a short campaign could change the sentiment.

With the Irish Parliament meeting behind barbed wire barriers, the name Free State seems to be a misnomer.

There is food for thought in the statement that Canadian penitentiaries contain over 3,000 inmates now as compared to 1,458 in 1918. Why this great increase in four years?

Mr. Raney has been asked to probe a wedding that took place in Carleton Jail. That is a fine chance for the appointment of another commission by the Ontario Government.

This is apparently an era of intemperance, so far as language is concerned. Witness Mr. Raney's use of such words as "barbarians" and "outlaws" and "traitors" to describe those who do not like the O.T.A., and Dr. Margaret Patterson's description of certain lawyers as "scavengers" and "vultures."

Another Turkish atrocity. The developments in the Near East have raised the price of the ingredients of the Christmas pudding.

FIRST WOMAN TO GET AN AUCTIONEER LICENSE

New York President Enjoys This Unique Position. Why Not, Says She.

NEW YORK, Dec. 5.—(United Press)—Miss Lillian G. Lagonarsino 25, is the first licensed woman auctioneer in Greater New York.

"Why shouldn't I sell merchandise at auction?" Miss Lagonarsino asked. "I am employed by Charles Rose, who has a large auction business and I have often wished that I could help when he had other engagements. It finally occurred to me that there was no reason why I shouldn't be an auctioneer."

Joseph P. Day, the noted real estate auctioneer, when he heard there was to be an incursion of women into the auctioneering field was enthusiastic in praise of the idea."

"Women," he said, "are better qualified than men in many branches of auctioneering. In selling out the furniture of a house for instance, practically all of the non-professional bidders are women, and a woman certainly knows more about how to talk to women about furniture and household goods than a man. I am very glad this young woman has entered the field."

ECZEMA

Hands Were Raw Would Crack and Bleed

Eczema or Salt Rheum, as it is commonly called, is one of the most agonizing of skin diseases. The intense burning, itching and smarting, especially at night or when exposed to heat, are almost unbearable and relief is gladly welcomed.

The pre-eminent success which Burdock Blood Bitters has met with in permanently removing a disease of such severity is due to its wonderful blood cleansing and purifying properties.

Mrs. M. R. Willard, Dudswell Jct., Que., writes: "For about three years I had eczema, in a very bad form, on my hands. They were all raw and would crack and bleed so that I could not do my housework. I tried everything I could think of without any results. As last I got a bottle of Burdock Blood Bitters, and when I had it about all taken I could see it was helping me; by the time I had taken five bottles my hands were all well again and I have not been bothered since. I cannot praise Burdock Blood Bitters enough."

GERMANY CLAIMS NEW PROCESS TO MAKE NEWSPRINT.

Scientists Say They Have Solved the Print Paper Problem.

By GUS M. OEHM.
(United Press Staff Correspondent)

BERLIN, (By mail to United Press)—German science claims it has solved the print paper problem.

Quantitative production of cellulose—of which paper is made—at reduced cost by means of a new invention will do the trick, German inventors declare. The new invention obtains cellulose from vegetable substances of almost all kinds and available almost anywhere, especially in the tropical and subtropical regions of North and South America.

The most common things used in this cellulose producing machine are reeds, rushes, flax stems, savannah grass, sugar cane, jute and bamboo. Almost any kind of grain stems will pass.

The actual manufacture requires only two hours, and is much more inexpensive that obtaining wood pulp from trees. Another big advantage lies in the never-ending availability of such reeds and canes, as new crops are continually available at all seasons of the year in various parts of the world. This is a decided advantage over the eighty years required to bring a tree to such maturity as to make good wood pulp material.

The price of print paper made by this process will be 60 percent less than the present price of paper made from wood pulp.

Much cardboard is also produced by this new process. More than $50,000 inner soles for shoes have been manufactured from reeds, etc., and sold in the United States.

The RED HOUSE MYSTERY

by A. A. MILNE

BEGIN HERE TODAY

Who had shot and killed the ne'er-do-well ROBERT ABLETT, within two minutes after his arrival at The Red House, the country estate of his wealthy bachelor brother, MARK ABLETT? Robert's body was on the floor of the locked office, Mark had disappeared and in the eyes of Police Inspector Birch, it was clear that Mark, who had viewed Robert's return from Australia with annoyance, had shot his brother and then disappeared.

But there were mysterious circumstances. The shot was heard just a few moments before ANTONY GILLINGHAM, gentleman adventurer and friend of BILL BEVERLEY, one of Mark's guests, entered the hall where he found MATT CAYLEY, Mark's constant companion, pounding on the locked door and demanding admittance. The two men entered the office through a window and discovered the body.

Later, Antony vaguely suspects Cayley. Bill tells him that Mark was upset a few evenings ago when one of the guests appeared as a ghost on the bowling green. Antony and Bill discuss various theories of the murder.

GO ON WITH THE STORY

"No, that's rather hopeless, isn't it?" Bill thought again. "Well," he said reluctantly, "suppose Mark confessed that he'd murdered his brother?"

"That's better, Bill. Don't be afraid of getting away from the accident idea. Well then, your new theory is this. Mark confesses to Cayley that he shot Robert on purpose, and Cayley decides, even at the risk of committing perjury, and getting into trouble himself, to help Mark to escape. Is that right?"

Bill nodded.

"Well then, I want to ask you two questions. First, is it possible, as I said before dinner, that any man would commit such an idiotic murder—a murder that puts the rope so very tightly round his neck? Secondly, if Cayley is prepared to perjure himself for Mark (as he has to, anyway, now), wouldn't it be simpler for him to say that he was in the office all the time, and that Robert's death was accidental?"

Bill considered this carefully, and then nodded slowly again.

"Yes, my simple explanation is a wash-out," he said. "Now let's have yours."

Antony did not answer him. He had begun to think about something quite different.

CHAPTER IX

WHAT'S the matter?" said Bill sharply.

Antony looked round at him with raised eyebrows.

"You've thought of something suddenly," said Bill. "What is it?"

Antony laughed.

"My dear Watson," he said, "you aren't supposed to be as clever as this. Well, I was wondering about this ghost of yours, Bill. This is where she appeared, isn't it?"

"Yes."

"How?"

"How? How do ghosts appear? I don't know. They just papear."

"But how did Miss Norris appear suddenly—over five hundred yards of bare park?"

Bill looked at Antony with open mouth.

"I—I don't know," he stammered. "We never thought of that."

"You would have seen her long before, wouldn't you, if she had come the way we came?"

"Of course we should."

"And that would have spoilt it rather. You would have had time to recognize her walk. She couldn't have been hiding in the ditch?"

"No, she couldn't. Betty and I walked round a bit. We should have seen her."

"Then she must have been hiding in the shed. Or do you call it the summer-house?"

"We had to go there for the bowls, of course. She couldn't have been there."

"Oh!"

"It's dashed funny," said Bill, after an interval for thought. "But it doesn't matter, does it? It has nothing to do with Robert."

"Hasn't it?"

"I say, has it?" said Bill, getting excited again.

"I don't know. We don't know what has, or what hasn't. But it has got something to do with Miss Norris. And Miss Norris—" He broke off suddenly.

"What about her?"

Antony knocked out his pipe and got up slowly.

"Well then, let's find the way from the house by which Miss Norris came."

Bill jumped up eagerly.

"By Jove! Do you mean there's a secret passage?"

"A secluded passage, anyway. There must be."

"I say, what fun! I love secret passages. Good Lord, and this afternoon I was playing golf just like an ordinary merchant! What a life? Secret passages!"

They made their way down into the ditch. If an opening was to be found which led to the house, it would probably be on the house side of the green, and on the outside of the ditch. The most obvious place at which to begin the search was the shed where the bowls were kept. There were two boxes of croquet things, one of them with the lid open.

Antony tapped the wall at the back of the shed.

"This is where the passage ought to begin."

"It needn't begin here at all, need it?" said Bill, walking round with bent head, and tapping the other walls. He was just too tall to stand upright in the shed.

"There's only one reason why it should, and that is that it would save us the trouble of looking anywhere else for it."

Antony began to feel in his pockets for his pipe and tobacco, and then suddenly stopped and stiffened to attention. For a moment he stood listening, with his head on one side, holding up a finger to bid Bill listen, too.

"What is it?" whispered Bill.

Antony waved him to silence, and remained listening. Very quietly he went down on his knees, and listened again. Then he put his ear to the floor. He got up and dusted himself quickly, walked across to Bill and whispered in his ear:

"Footsteps. Somebody coming. When I begin to talk, back me up."

Bill nodded. Antony gave him an encouraging pat on the back, and stepped firmly across to the box of bowls, whistling loudly to himself. He took the bowls out, dropped one with a loud bang on the floor, said, "Oh, Lord!" and went on:

"I say, Bill, I don't think I want to play bowls, after all."

"Well, why did you say you did?" grumbled Bill.

Antony flashed a smile of appreciation at him.

"Well, I wanted to when I said I did, and now I don't want to."

"Then what do you want to do?"

"There's a seat on the lawn. Let's go over there and bring these things along in case we want to play."

As they went across the lawn, Antony dropped the bowls and took out his pipe.

"Got a match?" he said loudly.

As he bent his head over the match, he whispered, "There'll be somebody listening to us. You take the Cayley view." They walked over to the seat and sat down.

"What a heavenly night!" said Antony.

"Ripping."

"I wonder where that poor devil Mark is now."

"It's a rum business."

"You agree with Cayley—that it was an accident?"

"Yes. You see, I know Mark."

"I'm." Antony produced a pencil and a piece of paper and began to write on his knee, but while he wrote, he talked. He said that he thought Mark had shot his brother in a fit of anger, and that Cayley knew, or anyhow guessed, this, and had tried to give his cousin a chance of getting away.

"Mind you, I think he's right. I think it's what any of us would do. I shan't give it away, of course, but somehow there are one or two little things which make me think that Mark really did shoot his brother—I mean other than accidentally."

"Murdered him?"

"Well, manslaughtered him, anyway. I may be wrong. Anyway, it's not my business."

"But why do you think so? Because of the keys?"

"Oh, the keys are a wash-out. Still, it was a brilliant idea of mine, wasn't it?"

He had finished his writing, and now passed the paper over to Bill. In the clear moonlight the carefully printed letters could easily be read:

"Go on talking as if I were here. After a minute or two, turn round as if I were sitting on the grass behind you, but go on talking."

"I know you don't agree with me," Antony went on as Bill read, "but you'll see that I'm right."

Bill looked up and nodded eagerly. He had forgotten golf and Betty and all the other things which had made up his world lately. This was the real thing. This was life.

"Well," he began deliberately, "the whole point is that I know Mark. Now, Mark—"

But Antony was off the seat and letting himself gently down into the ditch. His intention was to crawl round it until the shed came in sight. The footsteps which he had heard seemed to be underneath the shed; probably there was a trap-door of some kind in the floor. Whoever it was would have heard their voices, and would probably think it worth while to listen to what they were saying.

He walked quickly but very silently along the half-length of the bowling-green to the first corner, passed cautiously round, and then went even more carefully along the width of it to the second corner. He could hear Bill herd at it, and he smiled appreciatively to himself. Bill was a great conspirator—worth a hundred Watsons. As he approached the second corner he slowed down, and did the last few yards on hands and knees. Then, lying at full length, inch by inch his head went round the corner.

The shed was two or three yards to his left, on the opposite side of the ditch. From where he lay he could see almost entirely inside it. Everything seemed to be as they left it. The bowls-box, the lawnmower, the roller, the open croquet-box, the—

"By Jove!" said Antony to himself, "that's neat."

The lid of the other croquet-box was open, too.

Bill was turning round now; his voice became more difficult to hear. "You see what I mean," he was saying. "If Cayley—"

And out of the second croquet-box came Cayley's black head.

YACHT FOR USE OF SWEDISH SALESMEN

New Viking Vessel Will Shortly Leave Sweden for South America.

STOCKHOLM, Dec. 5.—(Associated Press)—The new Viking vessel from Sweden, manned with expert salesmen armed with literature on up-to-date railroad engines, will sail shortly for South America.

This unique way of finding new markets for their products has been devised by Swedish locomotive builders, who have just delivered the two hundredth locomotive on an order from the Russian Soviet. A fine steam yacht of 500 tons has been purchased in Spain, and will be fitted out for the expedition. A commander of the Swedish Navy has been secured to serve as skipper, and his crew will include several of the men who have just completed a round-the world- cruise on a sailing yacht.

The president of the company, together with several of his technical experts, will direct the work of the expedition. It is expected that most of the South American republics will be visited.

Swedish locomotives have formed a big item in Sweden's exports to Russia, and shipments are continuing though the number originally ordered by the Soviet has been reduced.

JOLLY AT HOME MEMORIAL HALL AT LAKEFIELD

Staff and Employees of Canada Cement Co. Entertain—Gather Supplies For Apsley Fire Victims.

NEWS PARAGRAPHS.

LAKEFIELD, Dec. 5.—On Friday evening the staff and employees of the Canada Cement Co. Lakefield plant gave an "At Home" in the Memorial Hall. The evening was spent in music and dancing and a delightful time was provided for the large crowd who attended. The Reeve and Mrs. Strickland and Mr. G. G. Connell were guests of the company. There are about one hundred men on the company's pay roll and a friendly spirit exists which promises well for future gatherings and work. In the summer an excursion was held to Stoney Lake which was well attended and proved the first of what is evidently a series of festivities under the auspices of the staff employees of the C.C.C. E. W. Bailey, manager of the company is fully in sympathy with these gatherings and takes an active part in the arrangements.

The Grave.

Mrs. E. W. Bailey received on Saturday, news of the death of her father, Thomas MacLean at the age of 77 years. He was in failing health for some time and his death was not entirely unexpected. A native of County Antrim, Ireland, he came to Canada as a young man and for over fifty years has been a resident of Hawkesbury. He was a staunch member of the Presbyterian church. He is survived by four daughters, Mrs. E. W. Bailey of Lakefield, Mrs. John W. Craig and Misses Agnes and Edith of Hawkesbury and one son, William of Hawkesbury.

The sympathy of the community goes to Mrs. Bailey in his bereavement.

Exchanged Pulpits.

Rev. P. L. Jull conducted the anniversary services in the Millbrook Presyterian church on Sunday while Rev. G. S. Gervan was in charge of the Lakefield church.

Apsley Fire Victims.

Mr. Brown, driver of the Apsley stage, has kindly offered to carry any parcels containing supplies for the Whitmore family of Apsley, free of charge. Parcels should be left at the Lakefield post office. The Whitmores lost all their possessions by fire a couple of weeks ago, and are fire sufferers in our county who need out help to get established for the winter.

Foreign Delegates.

On Sunday afternoon at 4 o'clock there will be a meeting in the Methodist church, Lakefield which will be addressd by delegates to the World Convention of the League Against Alcoholism. Among the speakers will be Rev. D. P. Harwood of New Mexico, Rev. Wilson Stuart of England, Rev. Alfred N. Horsfal of Australia, Gustave Canerie of France, Villon Ernst of Esthonia, Rev. Franklin Albrecias of Spain and Otto Forteret of Switzerland.

BIFOCAL EYEGLASSES SHOULD BE CHEAPER

Will Cost Materially Less Next Year, an Expert Declares.

BUFFALO, Dec. 5.—(Associated Press)—The price of eyeglasses, especially of the bifocal type, will be materially lower next year, it is asserted by Dr. D. E. Sharp ,an executive of one of the largest concerns in America engaged in the manufacture of magnifying glass. Patents which now cover this type of eye-glass will expire and with the resulting competition among manufacturers and the elimination of royalties, material reductions should come, he said.

Rapid progress has been made in America since the industry, formerly controlled by Germany, was virtually forced upon American manufacturers by the great war. Telescope lenses of all sizes are now successfully made in American plants.

IN MILLBROOK AND DISTRICT

Rev. S. T. Tucker Home From the Convention — Personal Mention.

MILLBROOK, Dec. 5.—On Sunday morning Rev. S. T. Tucker, who had been attending the sessions of the first World's Temperance Convention in Toronto last week, gave an interesting and instructive outline of that wonderful gathering, stating that the two points most emphasized were, "World Service" and "World Vision." That the convention merited the name "World League" is evidenced from the fact that not only was every State in the Union, and every Province in the Dominion, represented, but forty-one other countries had delegates in attendance as well. Mr. Tucker took, as the Scripture passage upon which to base his remarks, the story of the Transfiguration of Christ and the complimentary scene of the disciples' helplessness in healing the lunatic, until the Saviour and the chosen three, Peter, James and John, had descended to the valley once more, as told in the 17th chapter of Matthew's gospel, and showed that while the great gathering was a time of vision, and like Peter of old, the delegates would think it good to remain in that atmosphere of inspiration and enthusiasm, the call of the Master is to service.. The sight of the glory that is to be is only one phase in the training of His followers to minister the better to those held in the bondage of sin.

Delegates were allowed one minute each to tell of the progress of Prohibition in their countries, and in spite of discouragement and drawbacks, all sounded a note of optimism, but all were agreed that the crying necesity now is a propaganda of education throughout the world, for further advance can hardly be made while the liquor is being manufactured in one country and shipped into another, even though that other be "dry." The officials of the W.C.T.U. which had been in convention in Philadelphia and who came on to Toronto and addressed the gathering there, were splendid speakers, almost outclassing the men in their statement of facts, and the fervency and saneness of their appeal. The representative of the W.C.T.U. of South America made an especially fine address, commenting on the fact that doubtless the great progress made toward total prohibition in the States and Canada is accounted for from the influence of the Pilgrim Fathers who settled here in the early days, implanting their reverence for God, and their high religious ideals, while in South America it was gentlemen adventurers who came exploiting the land for wealth, bringing mixed marriages, immoral customs at which even the leading church looked with leniency, and thus making all moral progress slow and every victory hard won. Father Minnehan, who represented the Roman Catholic church of the United States, was one of the strongest advocates of total abstinence, and said it was the "social glass of the respectable drinker" which had convinced him of its necessity. "I have never been in any company," he stated, "where the social glass was circulated even once, that the moral sense was not blunted, and womanly modesty perceptibly diminished."

The honor of making the closing address was given to the delegate from Australia, and he showed that slowly, but surely, the conscience of the world is asserting itself against the liquor traffic, and once again emphasis was laid upon the need of the Christian church incorporating in its missionary programme a propaganda of education against the manufacture, use, or sale of intoxicants. "Let us set the world in our hearts for vision and service."

Ladies' Aid Society.

The Ladies' Aid of the Methodist church will hold their December meeting on Tuesday, December 5th, at 8 p.m., at the home of Mrs. G. E. Burnham; the pastor, Rev. S. T. Tucker, will address the gathering, and a full attendance is looked for. The Ladies' Aid of Grace Presbyterian church are holding their monthly meeting on Saturday, December 9th at 3 p.m. at the home of Mrs. W. W. Gillott.

Mission Band.

The "Sunshine Mission Band" of the Methodist church are meeting this week on Wednesday, at 7.30 p. m., when the Christmas box which is annually sent to Miss B. Hawken for the pupils of her school at the W.M.S. Ruthenian mission, Smoky Lake, Alta., will be arranged for, and if possible, packed. All wishing to send gifts in the box are requested to have them in on Wednesday as the bale must be expressed at least two weeks before Christmas if it is to reach the boarding school in time.

Miss Gertrude Richards, of Fenelon Falls, is spending a couple of weeks at the home of her brother, Mr. E. C. Richards, coming here last Friday.

Mrs. J. Kerr of Peterborough, was the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Jas. Dawson last week. Mr. Dawson's many friends will be glad to learn that there is a slight improvement in his health the last few days.

The members of "Golden Sheaf" Rebekah Lodge, No. 176, are holding a progressive euchre party in the I.O.O.F. Hall on Monday, December 4th, at 8 p.m. About one hundred and fifty invitations have been issued, and a good time is anticipated by all who are fortunate enough to be able to attend.

Born— At Dr. Turner's private hospital, on Friday, December 1st, to Mr. and Mrs. E. C. Richards, a son.

Mr. W. Buchanan, M.P., of Lethbridge, Alta., was the guest of Mrs. W. Archer, and other friends in town, for a few hours on Saturday. Mr. and Mrs. Buchanan were summoned from the west two weeks ago on account of the serious illness of the latter's mother at her home in Hamilton; her decease occurred on Friday and the funeral took place on Sunday, Mr. Buchanan returning in time for that sad event .

Mr. and Mrs. F. Wells, of Cambray, were guests of Mrs. W. H. and Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Byam on Sunday.

NEWS LAKEFIELD AND DISTRICT

Relief Work For Fire Sufferers in Hands of Farm Women's Organization — News Paragraphs.

LAKEFIELD, December 5. — The work of providing comforts for the fire sufferers in Northern Ontario, in Lakefield and the district, has been done entirely by the U.F.W.O. They collected from the district, made quilts, packed bales and gave of their scant leisure generously. They were handicapped by the distance between their homes but they mastered all this and sent several large shipments of goods to the north. In the past few weeks there has been an appeal for relief for fire sufferers in our own county and once more the U.F.W.O. came forward and supplies are being sent there. One cannot say too much in praise of this woman's organization. One says, —Why did not the village women start this work; why did they not take a leading part instead of leaving it to their country sisters?. The reason is easily answered. It is not that the village women are indifferent but in this "organized to death" village there is not a society which is interdenominational and open to all women. We have five churches, each with at least one or two women's societies, which are doing a great measure of the parochial work but for our village at large there is nothing. Other villages smaller than this have flourishing branches of the I.O.D.E., the Imperial Order of the Daughters of the Empire. This organization has done untold good in the cities, towns, village and rural districts of our Dominion, why not in Lakefield?

Will be Attractive.

The Yuletide Fair which is being held in the Memorial Hall on Tuesday afternoon and evening, promises to be very attractive. All the usual booths and many novelties will be there. In the evening Walter Blackburn of Toronto will provide a large part of the entertainment.

"The Bachelor's Dream" will be a feature also in which a number of Lakefield's belles will take a part.

News Paragraphs.

Rev. C. Grant King, during the Sunday evenings in Advent, will preach a series of sermons on The Second Coming of Christ.

The Woman's Auxiliary Corporate Communion was held on Sunday morning in St. John's church.

Sunday ushered in the season of Advent which is being observed in the parishes of St. Paul's Roman Catholic and St. John's Anglican churches.

Third Generation is Using Syrup Pepsin

No other Laxative can replace Dr. Caldwell's Laxative Syrup Pepsin in the confidence of those who use it

THERE are thousands of healthy, robust young men and women who have never in all their lives taken any other laxative for constipation than Dr. Caldwell's Laxative Syrup Pepsin. Their parents were given it by their parents; the grandparents are using it today. It is the one laxative ideally suited to all the family, safe for the little ones, effective in grownups, so compounded that elderly people, who are constantly forced to take a laxative because the intestinal muscles are weakening, find increased dosage unnecessary. This wonderful constipation remedy has been used continuously for 30 years, and over 10 million bottles are now sold annually, the largest selling family laxative in the world! The cost averages but a cent a dose. Every druggist sells it, and under a guarantee to do as claimed or your money will be refunded.

Millions of carefully conducted homes are never without a bottle of

ANY FAMILY MAY TRY IT FREE

Thousands of parents are asking themselves, "Where can I find a trustworthy laxative that anyone in the family can use when constipated?" I urge you to try my Laxative Syrup Pepsin. I will gladly provide a liberal free sample bottle, sufficient for an adequate test. Write me where to send it. Address Dr. W. B. Caldwell, 23 Caldwell Building, Toronto, Ont. Do it now!

Dr.Caldwell'sLaxativeSyrupPepsin. Mr. Henry Ricker, Chippewa, Ont., says it is the best medicine they have ever used, and Mrs. M. Martin of Massey, Ont., uses it herself and recommends it to her friends. There is scarcely a day that someone in a family does not need it for constipation, flatulency, auto-intoxication, biliousness, intestinal poisoning, headaches, colic and cramps, and to break up fevers and colds.

Dr. Caldwell's Laxative Syrup Pepsin is a scientifically-balanced compound of Egyptian senna with pepsin and pleasant-tasting aromatics. The formula is on the package. As the popularity of this natural vegetable laxative increases, the public discards the harsher physics like calomel, coal-tar in candy form, salt waters and powders. Dr. Caldwell's Laxative Syrup Pepsin empties the bowels more cleanly and without any danger.

INTERESTING DEBATE HELD AT BAILIEBORO

What Makes the Cost of Living High—U. F. O. Meeting.

BAILIEBORO, Dec. 5.—The regular fortnightly meeting of the U. F.O. club was held as usual on Friday evening at Centreville. There was a good attendance. An interesting debate was given. Resolved, "That it is the cost of high living and not the high cost of living, that makes the cost of living high." The affirmative was taken by Fred Barnard and Ernest Dawson, while the negative was upheld by Harold Dawson and Harry Campbell. The judges were Dawson Bebee and Geo. Berry and Alex. Anderson, who gave their decision, one point in favour of the negative. Mr. Harold Bebee took the chair and made a very competent chairman.

After the debate the remainder of the evening was spent in dancing to good music, provided by phonograph and violin and harp.

The social evening of the 15th was postponed until the 29th of December on account of the Tuxis boys' minstrel show.

FIVE DINED ON ONE FULL GROWN POTATO

But Haliburton Beat This Mammoth Spud, Which Somebody Stole.

LINDSAY, Dec. 5.—Five full-grown persons with regular Sunday appetites, dined on one regular, uniformly developed full-grown Simcoe County potato, at the home of Allan Hutchinson, Barrie representative of the Department of Agriculture, on October 29th. This great, esculent, farinaceous tuber of the Nightshade family tree Davies Warrior type, puts Sunnidale Corners in the giant class. The huge spud was grown by Herbert Culham on his farm at Sunidale Corners. It's weight when dressed for the pot was two and three quarter pounds. Mr. Hutchinson says the giant spud was grown under ordinary field conditions, and that it was regularly formed, and acted quite rationally when taken into captivity. Anyone who likes to multiply and divide will find that twenty and two of these potatoes would make a heaping bushel.

Haliburton County beats this. During the summer a potato grown in Haliburton village, and weighing over three pounds was left at the office of the Lindsay Post. It was on exhibition for a few days, when somebody carried it off.

KING'S WHARF, Dec. 5.—Mr. and Mrs. Thos. Sullivan were the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Thos. O'Neill last week.

Miss Katherine Corbett is at visting her cousin, Miss Mary O'Connell.

Miss K. A. Perdue has returned home from Ennismore, where she has been the guest of friends for some time.

Mr. and Mrs. Thos. O'Hearn and family of Toronto have returned home after spending several weeks, the guest of the latter's father, Michael Fitzpatrick.

Mr. David Morrissey of Lindsay has returned home after visiting his son, Thomas and his wife.

A large number from here attended the sale at Patrick Hickey's last Tuesday, and everything auctioned well.

S. Callahan of Lindsay passed through here last week buying turkeys. A large number sold their flocks, for which they realized 30c per pound alive.

Thos. Rowen of Omemee is in this section threshing alsike, which is panning out well. There never was such a yield in this part before. He has threshed for Messrs. Dennis Begley and Jos. Guiry.

P. O'Shea who spent the summer here, left Saturday morning for Toronto, where he will remain.

The word "sack," meaning "bag," is one of the few words that are the same in all languages; this being caused, according to tradition, by the fact that it was the last word uttered before the confusion of tongues at Babel.

There Goes the Bride

by Jack Lait

HOW we gush and blurb of our most confidential thoughts and affairs when in the warming companionship of some one pal; how comforting it is to feel that at last here is one human to whom a trust is sacred, and to whom the innermost confessions of an itching conscience may be poured forth with unequivocal impunity.

And then! Comes the kick-back, months or even years afterward, when the diverging courses of human events have separated the confider and the confidante so far that the chummy intimacies of the past have faded into threadbare memories, and we wonder what possessed us to ever let loose so volubly and so childishly to that particular person, of all impossible persons.

Well for us all that we do not have to take up all the tabs of friendship, love and comradeship that we have signed with such wide-eyed enthusiasm, with such gullible trust in the eternity of great good-will. How we might smile—or sneer—or shiver—or scratch the forgetting skull in doubt—or clench our hands or grind our teeth—if we could have laid before us in the form of mechanical talking-machine records all the promises we had ever made, all the protestations of unending devotion, and the blah, gab and gush of mush we have spilled when moved by emotions—emotions which seemed at that time to be epochal in our lives, and which we would have backed with a right eye as beyond the corroding depredations of time or the corrupting degeneration of fickle change.

Just such cronies had been Mildred Dyckinson and Leonie Leeson.

If ever two girls were born to meet, get "thick" and swear they would be buddies until the crack of doom, the pair was Mildred and Leonie.

Diametrical opposites in almost every trait and feature, yet of parallel social origin and means, they came in contact the first day of their first semester at the Misses Bradbury's Academy for Young Women. One glance at the assembled collection of the rich flappers matriculated for that year was proof that Mildred and Leonie would be the high spots of the outfit.

Mildred was tall and rangy, blonde and patrician, impertinent of expression, nervous, agile, spirited, mischievous, daring, precociously self-possessed.

Leonie was a soft, oval-faced, brown-eyed, cuddly little divinity, a child Madonna in mien, with soft and rolly hair and a demure diffidence that radiated almost a halo about her beautific head.

The Dyckinsons and the Leesons were families of wealth, culture and breeding, residing in two Mid-West cities, each the leading clan in its community. The girls were sixteen or thereabouts then, and they had lost all faculties to thrill over motor cars, platonic romances, Francis X. Bushman and one cocktail. They were nice enough sub-debs, but they felt old, much older than they already were. There are intelligent tests which are reckoned by ages as units of measure; if there had been a temperament test by the same token, Mildred and Leonie would have rated fully twenty, and they would have shrieked in horror against cutting off the ten or twenty years beyond that at which they would have set their own stage of development.

It was as inevitable that Mildred and Leonie would share quarters in the dormitory as it was that they would be drawn by an instantaneous mutual attraction. And it wasn't a week before their rooms were the heart of the life at the Misses Bradbury's. The other girls sighed to be taken into the sisterhood and some of them were, now and then; others only hoped, like a kid without his Sunday dime before a waffle-shop.

None of the others really ever wormed into the inner shrine. They were all made to feel that they were "company," and that Mildred and Leonie were still holding out those final personalities which are reserved to the elect alone. They were both inducted into the smart sorority of the academy, but the mystic and aromatic rendezvous never had the sizzling allure or the exciting atmosphere of the smart suite where Mildred and Leonie served tea (and better) and passed the cigarettes (not the perfumed sort, but the rough ones in the round packages, just like sailors smoke) to those who "made" the last gasp in preferment at the Misses Bradbury's.

The girls' scholastic reports were terrible. Nor were they distinguished in athletics, for they both regarded it as prosaic and crude to excel at divertisements that demanded exertion. Mildred knocked out a rather snappy game at golf, and Leonie tennised divinely when she wanted to whiff the open air enough to swing a racquet. But no school activities of the sort that make items in the school annual were remarkable for the records of Mildred or Leonie, whereas any pupil or teacher would have told you without hesitation or stuttering that they were the two most luminant personalities in the flock.

This went on through the three years at the Misses Bradbury's. In vacation times the girls visited back and forth, and the local newspapers made note, and Harlan Thornson, Mildred's earliest beau, took a tremendous interest.

Before Leonie left school she was engaged to Harlan. Mildred wasn't the early-marrying kind. Harlan meant nothing much more to her than a sort of Airedale who had turned against his congenital guarantee as a one-woman pet. Leonie was just the sort that men wanted to marry on second sight. Mildred was more dashing, more spectacular; but Leonie was the one that suggested rose-covered cottages in Arcady and registered the serene ending of the fairy tale.

Harlan, who had all that was becoming in the way of tangible assets and potential prospects, gave Leonie the rush of her life, and proposed the night she "came out." Leonie held him off and talked it over with Mildred.

"My dear," gurgled Mildred, "if you like the boy, hook him. He'll make you a nice, quiet, amiable old dear—he's a pacifist with smoking-jacket inclinations and dinner-at-home delusions. His complex is unalloyed and boving domesticity. By all means, take him—and if you don't crown him with a creamer after a year through just sheer ennui, may you live happily ever after and name your first twins after the Misses Bradbury."

Leonie knew her Mildred. And she knew something of her Harlan as well. Under the chestnut-haired pate, with its feminine waves and its intriguing big lights, was a brain that had not alone been given a fair shake at birth, but had been pepped up with much seeing, hearing, divining and absorbing.

They all felt a coughing, uneasy something as she draped herself over the edge of the Ottoman in the den.

"I'll think it over with due and comprehensive scrutiny, Mil," she answered, smiling. "Harlan's a rather safe sort, and that's something. When I see the way most of the married chaps extend their spheres of contact, so to say, I'm inclined to think that, whereas Harlan wouldn't be the most exhilarating sort of a honeymoon hero, still, he might wear better than most of the blase finale-hoppers, bland roues, bald bachelors and penetrating grass-widowers of our set, old thing. If now and again I miss in Harlan something that he might have been, I will at least have it on the rest of the brides in knowing where he might be. But I'll see."

"Rubbish, my child," piffled Mildred as she killed a cigarette that had smoldered to the monogram. "Are you still so abysmal, so anachronistic—in this age of enlightened vision and after the years you have been under my personal tutition—to think there's any kick in knowing that your husband adores you, only? You talk like a shoe clerk's only and love-sick child. Financial and social things being conveniently fixed, the only desirable consummation that I can visualize in a husband is something approximating bridge at a dollar a point—something sensational, terrifying, wrecking, you know—the whole old cat, himself!"

"After all, Mil," spoke Leonie, "it's a question of whether I really love Harlan."

"Oh, go soak your divinely proportioned head and pray for something as worth something in it as there is on it. Love! You're stepping out of your character, Miss Leeson. When you get cogitating on that chemically preposterous concoction of honey, dynamite, carbolic acid and apple sauce called love—that's just like looking for sunshine on the particular Sunday afternoon for which the Toothpick Sharpeners' Union sets its annual clambake; it's human enough to pray for it and want it, but who knows anything about it? If the old sun beams, fine; if it doesn't, what are you going to do about it? What you feel before marriage has about as much to do with love after marriage, as I have given it the East and West from the various grandstands in which I have spent my young life, as a Republican candidate in a New York election. Figure out every other angle, the things that answer to logic, reason and the binomial theorem of the personal equation, and trust to luck on the love gag, which is and always has to be the everlasting and unsolvable X, the unknown quantity.

"Love is an accident, and like any other miracle, should be duly appreciated when visited upon one; but anyone who has the audacity to seek it or to attempt to anticipate it, is just a chump. Leonie, my dear, you are a cute little chump. So I think that you and Harlan ought to team up great, and with careful driving and no rotten weather, should about make the matrimonial course at bogey—nothing to rave about, but not punk enough to disqualify you from the finals. Go ahead—tee off and may the wind be with you. I can tell from the tone of your eyes and the looks of your voice that you've decided to enter for the shiny tin cup of hymeneal happiness."

And it was so ordered. Mildred didn't remain for the wedding, having some important skylarking to attend to in Deauville. And by the time she had done all the peak points of Europe, Leonie was in her second full moon of rapturous bridehood.

She had decided that Harlan would like a duplex love-cote on the drive until she felt moved to open a large house and really go in for entertaining. With a few selected servants, they managed there to keep occupied with their smooching and spooning and the incidentals of sublimated serenity.

Harlan had turned out to be all that Leonie had dreamed and Mildred had threatened. Theatres, cabarets, country clubs, week-ends, all the small distractions of their set, he ignored without any interdictions—he was just completely immersed in his bride and his new estate and he wanted little more than just loafing and lounging and lolling about "the house" when he wasn't downtown in the parental offices growing up with the business.

Leonie wasn't acutely agitated with a sense of supreme intoxication over it. But she was content enough. She had seen everything and everybody that mattered, she knew that she had a long life ahead to keep up with any new curiosities that might overtake her, and Harlan was so soothing. She felt a sense of wifehood which was, of itself, a novelty, even if she did not clutch her new possession to her heart with a consuming passion such as glorifies some girls in their realization of marriage as a grand climax, an all-else dwarting inspiration this side of a line of demarkation between the inconsequential period before and the floration of life after.

And then Mildred breezed in.

Europe had done wonders for her. She was outfitted all to the Paris, churning with new impressions, a-buzz with views she had caught on the fly among the thrill-chasers and the vibration-accelerators at Monte Carlo and Carlsbad and Biarritz and those other combinations of papier mache, hot air and grand larceny that make up an itinerary on the other side.

Also, she had been away from Leonie for weeks, for the first time since their inseparable companionship had begun at the Misses Bradbury's—not only away, but with aliens and strangers; and she felt a creepy gooseflesh such as one might at meeting one's ex-husband or a sister one hadn't written to in a long while, when she bounded in on Leonie—and her Harlan—one evening betwixt dinner and lights-out.

They were glad to see her, of course, and they would have wondered if she hadn't run in the very first day. Still they all felt a coughing, uneasy something as she draped herself over the edge of an Ottoman in the den and assured Leonie that she was looking just ravishing with the same breath that told Harlan he looked just as she'd always imagined he would when married—quilted robe, and all.

Leonie jiggled an ash off her cigarette and assured Mildred that she was the smartest looking thing that had bobbed into town that season. And there was some small chaff about mutual friends, mothers and other minutia, and then into the thin ice joshing which newly married folks begin to accept as an inevitable manifestation until it is worn thin and gradually disintegrates.

"You know, Harlan," piped Mildred, "once in a while I catch myself thinking of Leonie as a wife—and I have a nifty little laugh all to myself."

"Why?" asked Harlan, dryly, without looking up from a magazine that had been on the table for days without a tumble. "What's particularly facetious about Leonie being a wife?"

"Oh, nothing—specific. But you know, she and I were pretty chummy—weren't we, Leo?"

"I'll say we were," assured Leonie, without very emphatic assurance. Somehow the trend of the talk didn't just enthuse her, though she wasn't afraid of anything Mildred might say.

"And what was there about you two girls being friends that makes it amusing for Leonie to be married?" asked Harlan.

"Oh, nothing—not a thing. But if you had been with her night and day, as I was, during the impressionable years at school—when we told one another everything—everything!"

"Of course we did—such silly stuff as girls confide to each other," explained Leonie.

"Oh, it wasn't so silly," persisted Mildred. "It didn't seem so at that time, anyway. We thought our secrets were mighty weighty. Like—do you remember the night we went motoring with those two country yokels in the rattly flivver after we met them on the road just past the eleventh hole? Wasn't that a lark?"

Harlan looked up from his magazine. He didn't say a word. He looked first at Mildred, who was smiling broadly as though to give weight to her point; then he turned slowly to Leonie, who was trying to smile at Mildred in a way that attempted to convey at once that it was just a hazy recollection of something all but forgotten, and that Mildred should please choke off.

"I'll never forget those poor yokels," beamed Mildred. "One of them was so smitten with Leonie that he wanted her to go apple-picking with him and said he had some cider in the barn that would make a deacon do a cakewalk. Remember, Lee?"

Harlan laid down the magazine.

"You never told me of any such goings-on, Leonie," he said.

"Oh, it wasn't anything—just a harmless joke We had a laugh over it at the time and forgot it."

"We forgot it," hurried Mildred. "But that poor plowboy that fell so hard for your Leonie didn't forget it so easily. He wrote her letters that—well, say, they'd have sold for the funny papers. And he hung around outside the fence, and"——

"Did you ever see him after—after that rather ill-advised flivver ride?" asked Harlan, in a voice that Leonie had never heard before—that she didn't know he had.

Leonie was on the point of snapping back an answer, but as she turned she saw Mildred, with lips apart, waiting for it; so she switched without throwing a semaphore and merely said:

"Oh, what does it matter? That was years ago, when we were a couple of boobs in school. You aren't going to get jealous about it—now, are you?"

"Oh, a bridegroom is a suspicious party, Lee, always," Mildred felt she had to get in.

"Not at all," snapped Harlan. "I've never for one second doubted or questioned Leonie. But I—well, it never entered my head that she would have engaged in such carryings-on."

"Oh, don't be silly," pursued Mildred. "This was perfectly innocent. You see——"

"I suppose it was. But it was in such deplorable bad taste. Is that what cultured parents send their adolescent daughters away to schools for—where they're supposed to be chaperoned and guarded against such—such foolhardy misconduct?"

Leonie rose to her slippered feet. And when Leonie rose—like that—it was time to make for the trenches, because beneath her womanly little structure of affability was a ton of T. N. T.

"Look here, Harlan—and you, Mildred," she flashed. "I'm not on the defensive here—in my own home—and I don't propose to rake over all the flapper escapades of my scarlet past. I dare say that if my husband's life were winnowed, or if he had kept a day-to-day diary, we might find somewhere a reference to a stenographer—or maybe even a chorus girl—somewhere in the chronicles of his pre-marital adventures. Now—let's change the subject. . . . How about a highball, Mil?"

"Grand thought," chirped Mildred. "Always did prefer Scotch to cider, though we did get a jolt out of that jug; didn't we?"

"Leonie," said Harlan, and he was trembling, "until this moment I had always idealized you; I had always thought of you as a high-minded, superior sort who wouldn't—who couldn't—have been so—so—let me say so frivolous, to put it politely. Of course, I married you as I found you; I have no right to search back in an ex post facto investigation of your every hour before you came into my life. But"——

"Yes," said Leonie. "But—what? Let's have it out."

"What I was about to say—when you leaped on me—which is something new in your attitude, too—was that something has gone that cannot ever come back."

"Yes? For instance?"

"That complete faith in you—I mean that unqualified conviction that you were perfect; that you just couldn't do or even ever have done anything—anything that you wouldn't do if I were looking on."

"You couldn't very conveniently have been looking on when we met those two rubes," suggested Mildred.

"I suppose not," sighed Harlan. "Perhaps it was all for the best, at that. And perhaps I'm a fool to fancy that my wife—just because she happens to be my wife, in spite of all I know about women—should be so different from the rest. But I did. I was just blind enough—and happy enough"——

"If you say something about having lived in 'a fool's paradise,' I'll smash a vase," said Leonie.

"Oh—you do that, too?" moaned Harlan. "Good night."

And out he marched.

Leonie and Mildred sat looking at one another for a full second. Mildred reached over and put her hand affectionately on Leonie's.

"Did I—have I done anything?" she inquired, worriedly.

"Not a thing," answered Leonie. "Not a single thing. You bachelor girls are like Caesar's wife, except that you're a merry lot—always ready to crack a whimsy or hit off a bright wheeze, You haven't done much—only chucked my life into the same whirling stew of bickerings, quarrels, jealousies, suspicions and double-crossings that go for the rest of the marriages I know of. I had hoped to forestall it—for a while at least. But now its over the top."

"Oh, I'm so sorry," yammered Mildred. "Perhaps I wasn't as diplomatic as I might have been—but who would ever have thought of such a thing?"

"Nobody," said Leonie, patting her arm. "Nobody—who isn't married, anyway."

"Well, I hope it all comes out all right. And it will. Harlan will be all right in the morning, I'm sure. Good night, dear—I'll run in some afternoon—when your'e alone—and we'll chat over old times, eh?"

"Yes—do that," invited Leonie. "Come in and get all the old college jokes out of your system. And don't ever tell Harlan about that football player from the military academy, or he'll go off a bridge."

"Say—I'd forgotten all about that one," guffawed Mildred into her kerchief.

WARKWORTH HEARS HYDRO PROPOSITION

Will Vote on the Question Next Friday—S. B. Iler Explains Situation.

WARKWORTH, Dec. 5.—A well attended meeting was held last evening, at which the proposition of the Hydro Commission for an electric power supply for Warkworth and the surrounding district was thoroughly explained. S. B. Iler, of Toronto, a Hydro engineer, discussed the project in detail and told how the power was to be obtained by installing a step down transformer at Bradley's Corners.

E. P. Cuffe and J. G. Keefer, of Norwood, were present and told of the Hydro service received in Norwood and Havelock. These communities, they said, were well satisfied with the service they have been receiving from the Commission, and they strongly recommended that Warkworth accept the proposition put before them. A number of farmers from the Warkworth district also attended and evidenced a keen interest in the proposed power and its adaptability to general use on the farm.

The citizens of Warkworth will have an opportunity to vote on the question next Friday, and it is confidently held by the promoters of the scheme that it will be carried by a large majority.

COBOURG TO VOTE ON MONEY BY-LAW.

Furniture Plant Has Been a Good Thing For the Town—Cobourg News.

COBOURG, Dec. 5.—(Special).—Longslow, Ltd., of this town, manufacturers of furniture, school desks, etc., contemplate a bond issue of $150,000, and are asking the town of Cobourg to endorse their bonds. The Longslow interests here are represented by Longslow, Limited, and the Rice Lake Canoe Company, Ltd. Their object is to increase their facilities and capacity. The company requests the support from the town on the grounds of offering assured and sufficient protection, it is stated, to the municipality. The Longslow Company came to Cobourg two years ago, stating that they would employ fifty men, but have at present on their pay roll 130 individuals. They have put capital into their enterprise here to the amount of $331,154, and their pay roll amounts to about $3,000 a week. It is their intention, after this issue is floated, to go ahead with their housing propositions in order to provide homes for their employees, it is further stated.

The matter came up before a meeting of the Board of Trade, and a motion was passed endorsing the proposition as set forth by Longslow, Ltd., and passing it on to the Town Council, so that a by-law may be submitted to the ratepayers for their approval.

Making Progress.

Messrs. Curran and Briggs are making good progress in their work of excavating for the west-end sewer. It is expected that the work will occupy about six weeks.

Cobourg is preparing to elect one boy to go to Toronto to take part in the boys' parliament at the Parliament Buildings there.

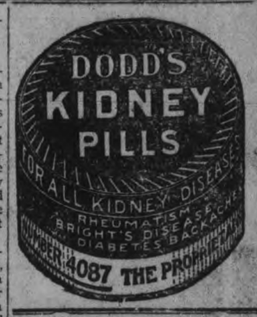
Mr. Edgar Smith, who has been accountant of the Bank of Toronto here for some three years past, has been promoted to the position of manager at Elmvale, and has assumed his new duties. Mr. Jack Clark, son of Mrs. John R. Clark, of this town, takes his position here.

Mr. Bert Clarke has purchased Mr. Robert George's property on Walton Street here, and intends to erect a number of houses in the spring.

Mr. Albert Moore has purchased the fifty-acre farm owned by William and John Westington, on the Provincial Highway between Cobourg and Port Hope. Mr. Moore owns a farm adjacent to this property.

Rotary Club.

The Cobourg Rotary Club has leased Richardson's Point, on Lake Ontario, as a camping ground for boys and girls another year. The site consists of about five or six acres, and is said to be a very desirable one for sports and for a camp. Last summer the Rotary Club leased Pine Tree Point at Rice Lake for a similar purpose.



RIBBONS

A generally acceptable gift, at the same time attractive and inexpensive, consists of lengths of lingerie ribbon wound upon a plain white card (a correspondence card will do.) The ribbons may be delicate pink, lavender, mauve, yellow and so forth. Through one of them a silver or ivory bodkin is slipped to complete the gift.

Owing to the material reduction in the cotton crop of Texas, the largest corn crop in the history of that State will be produced this year

NOT WILLING TO DITCH REPUBLIC

Stinnes Thinks the New German Government is Better Adapted For Reconstruction.

(By Carl L. Groat
(United Press Staff Correspondent)

BERLIN (By Mail). — Hugo Stinnes, Germany's greatest industrialist, is quite satisfied to have a republic run the fatherland for the time being at least.

Talks with business associates of this German Henry Ford show that he is keeping hands off any attempts to restore the monarchy, and that further he does not believe that this question should be fomented at this stage of affairs in Germany's reconstruction.

The men surrounding Stinnes are quite convinced that Kaiser Wilhelm will never come back to the German throne. They are equally convinced that the crown prince has no prospect to be kaiser. They admit that in the course of 20, 30 or 40 years there may be a new monarchy in Germany —perhaps with a scion of the Hohenzollern dynasty.

But the Stinnes theory at this time is that the republic is the form best suited to meet the requirements of post-war reconstruction and development. Monarchy, according to the Stinnes theory, can come in Germany again only through a process of evolution rather than by revolution.

If in the next decades it is found a republic does not fit the German temperament, then it is possible that a monarch will rise up who will lead the nation to a new place in the sun.

Different Monarchy

But in such case—still according to the Stinnes theory—it will be a monarchy on different lines than the Hohenzollern regime with its phantastic dreams of world conquest. Democracy has now such a solid hold upon Germany that, if a monarchy does come back, it will be patterned largely after the lines of the British Empire, where the ruler is actually little more than a figure head and where democracy prevails in the truest sense of the world.

Favors a Republic

Stinnes is far from agreeing with many of the principles and policies of the republican regime. But he is al so far from wanting to see this system ditched.

He is working mainly through his mouthpiece, the Deutsche Allgemeine Zeitung, for a united Germany In this he preaches idea that there must not be a wide breach as now exists between the conservatives and radicals. And he preaches that the workers must have the old German "Arbeitslust"—desire or love of work —and the consciousness that upon the working class rests the future of Germany as a nation.

Stinnes hated politically the murdered Rahenau, but loved him personally. And, it develops now, that his political bitterness against Rathenau was rapidly disappearing just before Rathenau's assassination. In fact according to information given to the United Press, Stinnes and Rathenau were rapidly approaching a political entente cordiale with respect to Germany's attitude toward France.

Had Rathenau lived, Germany would not have paid the entente the July 15h reparation sum of thirty million gold marks. Rathenau had a broad plan which probably would have forced the Entente at an early moment into a more favorable treat ment of the German reparations question. He believed in reaching an understanding with France, but he also believed that Germany could shape its policy so that it could have benefited from France's financial necessity.

In these respects he and Stinnes were fairly close together. The night before the assassination Stinnes and Rathenau were guests at the American embassy. Afterwards Stinnes Rathenau went to Stinnes' Hotel for a long conference, and Stinnes was so impressed by the view he then had from Rathenau that he remained up until 2 a.m. talking them over with one of his confidents.

Stinnes regarded the assassination of Rathenau as a great loss to the German nation.

ACCEPTS POST.

LONDON, Dec. 5. — (Canadian Press.)—Timothy Healy, who was in London Sunday confering with the Duke of Devonshire, in an interview with Westminster Gazette, confirmed his acceptance of Governor Generalship of Irish Free State and expressed his satisfaction over the passage of the Irish Constitution Bill.

"British Government has acted with absolutely scrupulous honor, and I am very pleased with it all," he declared.

"Ninety-nine per cent. of Irish are with us and half of the remaining minority against us, simply because of boundary partition with Ulster. Free State Government undoubtedly is acting in the best interests of country."

"I am looking very hopefully to the future. The only thing we have to contend with is roving armed parties. They will be settled very quickly now."

TO CALIFORNIA CANADIAN NATIONAL ROUTE

At this season of the year, many Canadians are planning to visit California. Of course, there are many routes, each with their special scenic interest, but, treating travel as fundamental of education, why not travel one way through Canada. It will give you an opportunity of knowing your own country better, a chance to view the finest mountain scenery in America, and to visit our own all-year-round resorts on the Pacific, Coast, Vancouver and Victoria, where the grass is green and flowers bloom and golf, motoring and all outdoor sports may be indulged in throughout the winter months. Discuss this tour with any agent of the Canadan National Railways, before concluding your plans. "The Continental Limited" which runs daily between Montreal, Toronto and Vancouver is one of the finest all-steel equipment trains in America. For full particulars, apply to the nearest agent of the Canadian National-Grand Trunk Railways.

At the close of the meeting the brethren adjourned to the dining hall where they enjoyed a dainty supper.

ARMENIAN LOSSES IN SMYRNA FIXED AT $118,000,000.

Sixty Million of This is in Real and Personal Property.

ATHENS, Dec. 5.—(Associated Press)—The losses of the Armenian community in Smyrna total $118,000,000 according to a tabulation made by a committee under the direction of the Bishop of Smyrna.

Sixty million of this total is in real and personal property, and the remainder in intangible assets like stocks and bonds in Armenian companies operating in Asia Minor. The annual income of 8,000 Armenian families in Smyrna used to be 7,500,000, whereof 15 percent was given to charities and to the church.

Smyrna, which was the richest Armenian community in the world before the coming of the Turkish army, had 20 millionaires, but today every one of these men is virtually penniless. The largest losers are the landowners, textile importers and exporters of fruits, cereals, carpets and opium.

The number of Armenia.is killed in Smyrna, according to the committee, is 4,000 and the number of persons who are missing or who have been made prisoners is stated to be 8,000 men and 15,00 women.

The most prominent Armenian business men killed were Sarkis and Kasparian, landowners and Grunlian and Panossian, textile merchants.

PROTESTS ARREST OF MINERS' OFFICIALS.

Hon. James Murdock Receives Message from Canadian Executive, District Eighteen.

OTTAWA, December 5. Canadian Press. — Hon. James Murdock, the Minister of Labor, stated this morning that he had received a message from officials of District 18, United Mine Workers, protesting against the arrest of union officials and members in the Edmonton field. He proposed to have the matter investigated.

LANARK COUNTY VOTES MEIGHEN

Dr. R. F. Preston Has a Majority of 1,394 With Four Polls to Hear From —Situation Reviewed.

PERTH, December 5. Canadian Press. — Lanark county stays Conservative. With four polls to hear from, Hon. Dr. R. F. Preston has a majority of 1394. The missing polls will probably increase the majority slightly. In the general elections the Conservatives had a majority of over 2600 when the late Hon. J. A. Stewart defeated a Progressive.

The Liberals had hoped to cut the majority considerably more than they did, but different circumstances played a part in the result. One big accomplishment of the Liberals was a reduction of the Conservative majority of 1174 in Perth town to 114. Although the majorities in other towns also came down considerably they did not approach the reduction in the county seat.

On the other hand the United Farmers went back to their former parties and in Lanark the old allegiance for the United Farmers is with the Conservatives.

The passing provincial success of the Progressives in Lanark has left no mark on its two-party politics of to-day.

Liberalism in this election made great strides but received no support from the Progressives, who were expected to give more support to the party of common ideals.

The Liberal party fought a strong battle in a constituency part of which has never elected a Liberal since Confederation, and other parts of which were usually Conservative.

The Liberals were disappointed at the showing of their candidate, David Finlay, in Carleton Place, which is the home town of both candidates.

It was expected that Mr. Finday might tie his opponent in this nominally Conservative municipality. Howeevr Dr. Preston has well over 400 majority.

Smith's Falls did about as was expected and gave a Conservative majority of over 500. Almonte went Conservative by about 200. Dr. Preston went out of towns with majority of about 1200 and added to it in the rural sections.

The old riding of North Lanark, which was supposed to be good fighting ground for the Liberals, did not by any means live up to expectations.

Several townships which gave the Progressives a majority in the last election went over to the Conservatives in this election.

CAMPBELLFORD AND DISTRICT

Willing Workers Held a Social Evening—Visitors to Town.

CAMPBELLFORD, Dec/ 5. — The social evening held last night in Parish Hall under the auspices of the Willing Workers of Christ Church was conceded by the large number present to be one of the most pleasant and sucessful events of the season. There was not a dull moment during the entire evening, and the excellent programme, which was followed by the serving of an abundance of dainty refreshments by the ladies, left nothing to be desired Mr. I. A. Humphries made a very efficient chairman in his usual manner interspersing bits of humour between the various numbers on the programme. The opening number a piano solo by Miss Faye Ketcheson won hearty applause, as did Miss Helen Bygott's solo "In a Monastery Garden", which was rendered in her usual sweet voice. Mr. O. A. Gledhill's humorous reading "The Confessions of a bashful man" brought forth hearty laughter and was heartily encored. Miss Margaret Dickson rendered a vocal solo "I passed by Your Window" in a manner that was much appreciated. Miss Reta Singer rendered the piano solo "Les Sylphes')' eliciting a hearty applause Miss Hazel Atkinson, who always delights her audiences sang "Barney O'Hay" and replied to the hearty encore with "Gray Days". Mr. O. A. Gledhill's rendering of "Old Pal" revealed the fact that he was equally capable as a soloist as well as a reader. Miss Hilda Bonnycastle in her usual pleasing voice sang "A little bit of Heaven sure they call it Ireland", very sweetly, meriting a hearty encore. Mr. John Maynard was called upon for an impromptu address, to which he replied with true Irish wit well sustaining his reputation as a ready speaker when ever called upon. The president Mrs. C. H. Harris in a fitting and gracious speech, on behalf of the Willing Workers expressed her appreciation of the large number present and to the artists who had so ably assisted with the programme and also urged all ladies of Christ Church to attend the weekly meetings of the Willing Workers and assist in sewing for the annual bazaar to be held in the Spring. The ladies then served dainty refreshments in abundance of which all did ample justice, while a very pleasant social hour was spent. The remainder of the evening being pleasantly spent in dancing.

The president and members of the Willing Workers are live wires and as their name implies they accomplish much during he year's activities as well as spending many pleasant social hours together and the determined to make this year the best yet. The proceeds of the evening amounted to twenty two dollars, which is surely-most gratifying to those who had charge.

Personals

Mr. Allan Watters of Toronto, formerly of Campbellford, was in town for the funeral of his aunt, Mrs. James Dinwoodie which took place on Monday.

Mrs. William Patrick, who has spent the past month at the home of her son at Niagara Falls, Ontario, returned home last week.

In the Methodist church next Sunday evening the pastor Rev. H. B. Kenny will give an address, specially for Young Women, his subject being "The Young Woman, her peculiarities and power."

ting up the Free State might be endangered.

Ulster Not Included.

The Irish Free State is now given the opportunity to go ahead and establish itself under the constitution its Parliament has approved, and which becomes the law of the land.

The original treaty provided for the inclusion of Ulster within the Free State, but the Northern counties were given the privilege of withdrawing and continuing their separate existence if they so desired. This they have signified their intention of doing, and a session of the Ulster Parliament has been called for 7th December, for the purpose of formally declaring Ulster out and continuing the existence of the Northern Irish Parliament and the Government which now controls the affairs of Northern Ireland.

CAMPBELLFORD AND DISTRICT

Obsequies of Late Mrs. J. Dinwoodie Largely Attended—Council Asked to Raise Road to English Church—Personal News

CAMPBELLFORD, December 5. —The funeral of the late Mrs. J. Dinwoodie took place on the arrival of the Grand Trunk train from Peterborough at 1.28 on Monday afternoon ,and was largely attended.

The pall-bearers were Messrs. W. J. Armstrong, F. W. Wood, J. D. Cummings, J. Walkinshaw, C. L. Owens, C. Bedford.

Rev. Mr. McIntosh, of the Presbyterian Church, officiated, and the remains were laid to rest in Mount Pleasant Cemetery.

Among those who attended the funeral were Mr. W. W. Cummings, Mr. Harry Cummings, and Mr. Archie Cummings, of Toronto; Mr. and Mrs. R. Harstone, of Peterborough; Messrs. Fred and Harry Fowlds, of Hastings; Mrs. French and Miss Bessie French, of Trent River; Mr. Allan Watters, of Toronto.

Road Too High Now.

A deputation from Christ's Church, composed of Rev. C. E. Clarke, Messrs. F. C. Bonnycastle, Robert Bullen, C. H. Harris, S. H. Neale, T. S. Tait, and John Maynard, waited on the Council on Monday morning and asked to have the roadway on the English Church Hill put in better condition, as at present the road was dangerous, and even the coal man was afraid to drive in, on account of the steep incline.

Mayor A. J. Meyers, with Councillor Richard H. Cole, were the committee appointed to investigate and confer with the church people to find a way to remedy the approach to this particular drive way.

Attended Funeral.

Among those from Campbellford who attended the funeral of the late Duncan Fife at Hastings on Sunday were Mr. and Mrs. Irvine Frederick, Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Johnston, Miss E. Martin, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Ormour, Messrs. Alfred and William Hore, and Charles and Claude Duncalfe.

Personal News.

Mr. A. L. Reindeau left on Monday night for Montreal on a business trip.

Mr. and Mrs. F. W. Wood were in Hastings on Sunday attending the funeral of the late Duncan Fife.

Mr. Richard Cole will be the third member of the present Council who has made up his mind what he is going to do. He will stand for Councillor, and hopes to be elected.

A CRISIS IN U.S. TRANSPORTATION.

Expected Business Boom May Not Materialize, Public Warned.

By JAMES T. KOLBERT
(United Press Staff Correspondet)

WASHNGITON, Dec. 5.—(United Press)—The expected business boom may not materialize, due to the inadequacy of railroad equipment, delegates to the eighteenth convention of the National Rivers and Harbors congress warned today. The convention opens here to-morrow for a two days sessions.

Development of the waterways of the country and extended good roads work form the solution to the problem, the convention will hold.

Experts on railroads, waterways and road transportation are on the program of speakers. From their speeches the congress will prepare a development program for submission to the administration and business at large.

The railroads alone cannot now the transportation demands of business, John H. Small, president of the congress, stated. When business after some two years of stagnation, really hits it stride, a transportation jam of almost unprecedent proportions will develop, he fears.

"The American transportation problem, unless all signs fail, will be more serious in the near future than ever before in time of peace," Small stated. "It is a problem that is many-sided and bristling with difficulties; but, if the progress of the nation is to continue and its prosperity is to be maintained, the true solution must be found. This convention is called with the hope and the expectation that its deliberations will contribute to this end."

Small quoted Vice-President Lee of the Pennsylvania as stating that the next revival of business probably would develop the most serious congestion of railroad facilities ever experienced in the history of the country. Lee pictured business men in a panic and losing sight of rates in their clamor for service.

Delegates to the convention declare it is folly for the country to place dependance "upon a single method of transportation"—the railroads—and urge immediate steps to increase water facilities. More good roads would assist in solving the problem, they hold.

Cuticura Heals Itching Burning Pimples On Face

"My face was entirely covered with pimples which not only disfigured me but bothered me with itching and burning. They were large, hard and red, and after a while began to fester. They itched so that I had to scratch them which made the burning more intense.

"I used various salves and creams but they gave no relief. The trouble lasted for nearly three months until I heard of Cuticura Soap and Ointment. I sent for a free sample. In about a week a decided improvement was made so I bought more, and two cakes of Soap with one box of Ointment healed me." (Signed) Elmer V. Foss, 7 Ocean View Ave., East Lynn, Mass.

Sample Each Free by Mail. Address: "Cuticura, Dept. 21A St. Paul St., W., Montreal." Sold everywhere. Soap 25c. Ointment 25 and 50c. Talcum 25c. Cuticura Soap shaves without mug.

HEAD OF MOSLEM FAITH

Here is an intimate photo of the new spiritual head of millions of Mohammedans, Abd ul-Medjid, former heir apparent to the Turk throne. NOISES RUIN CITY'S HEALTH

Should Be Eliminated, Says Dr. Herman N. Bundesen, Chicago.

CHICAGO, Dec. 5. — United Press)—Elimination of noisy thoroughfares is recommended by Dr. Herman N. Bundesen, commissioner of health, as a step towards reducing metropolitan sick lists.

The din of traffic, with its conglomeration of noises—sirens, horns, whistles and clanging of surface and elevated lines—is ruining the health of city people, according to Dr. Bundesen.

"A surprisingly large number of nervous wrecks are created annually in Chicago and other cities by the incessant din and clamor to which the population are subjected," he declared.

"Rest and quiet are essential to the maintenance of the health and efficiency of the great crowds of workers who spend most of their time in downtown offices in the midst of the traffic din."

Bundesen pointed to the beneficial effects derived by the thousands of city people who spend their vacations in the country.

"They always return with nerves recovered from the shocks of city din and noise and in much better physical condition generally," he said.

"The economic benefits of noiseless traffic were also added to the health commissioner's observations.

"Employers should know that it is almost impossible to attain any high degree of efficiency or concentration in any kind of mental work in the midst of constant uproar and confusion" he continued.

"The efficiency of employes who work in noisy localities is reduced

A PLEASANT EVENING AT QUEEN ALEXANDRA.

Inspector Mowat Gives Talk—Enjoyable Programme by Local Talent.

President Mrs. F. S. Touchbourne presided over the regular meeting of the Queen Alexandra Home and School Association last night, when routine business was transacted. The speaker of the evening was Public Schools Inspector A Mowat, who gave a timely address on the "Value of Education", in the course of which he stressed the importance of secondary education and urged parents to instill into their children a passion for learning as a necessary basis for good citizenship. In a musical programme, vocal solos were contributed by Mrs. Ford Turner, Mr Maurice Park, Mr. Percy Harrison and a piano number by Mr Leslie Unitt.

USED THE AEROPLANE AGAINST IRREGULARS.

CORK, Dec. 5.—(Canadian Press)—An airplane for the first time yesterday was brought into action against irregulars with disastrous results to sixty of them entrenched near Drimoleague. Call for reinforcements from National troops brought an airplane to the scene and sighting the irregulars, it bombed them out. They made their escape into a neighboring wood, but the airplane circled over them and raked them with machine gun fire. It is thought the great majority of rebels were killed or wounded. Nationals lost one killed.

STOMACH TROUBLES ARE DUE TO ACIDITY

Tells Safe, Certain, Speedy Relief For Acid Indigestion.

So-called stomach troubles, such as indigestion, gas, sourness, stomach-ache, and inability to retain food are in probably nine cases out of ten, simply evidence that excessive secretion of acid is taking place in the stomach, causing the formation of gas and acid indigestion.

Gas distends the stomach and causes that full, oppressive, burning feeling sometimes known as heartburn, while the acid irritates and inflames the delicate lining of the stomach. The trouble lies entirely in the excess development or secretion of acid.

To stop or prevent this souring of the food contents of the stomach and neutralize the acid, and make it bland and harmless, a teaspoonful of Bisurated Magnesia, a good and effective corrector of acid stomach, should be taken in a quarter of a glass of hot or cold water after eating or whenever gas, sourness, or acidity is felt. This sweetens the stomach and neutralizes the acidity in a few moments, and is a perfectly harmless and inexpensive remedy to use.

An antacid, such as Bisurated Magnesia, which can be obtained from any druggist in either powder or tablet form enables the stomach to do its work properly without the aid of artificial digesterns. Magnesia comes in several forms, so be certain to ask for and take only Bisurated Magnesia, which is especially prepared for the above purpose.

OPPOSITION TO CHURCH UNION AT ITS ZENITH.

And Forces Favouring Amalgamation Will Soon Assert Themselves.

OTTAWA, December 5. Canadian Press. — Rev. Dr. Chown, the General Superintendent of the Methodist Church in Canada, stated here last night that opposition to church union had reached its zenith and that the forces favoring union would assert themselves in the Presbyterian Church. He was not worrying over the outlook. Union had to come because Christianity of the Twentieth century was not going to be guided by the dead hand of the past.

ANOTHER MEETING OF SHAREHOLDERS

To Consider Plan for Protecting Interests in Birmingham Motors.

All shareholders of Birmingham Motors Ltd., are urged to be present at the meeting to be held this evening at 8 o'clock in the Public Library. An opportunity will be given them to cooperate in the new organization plan. In presenting this plan last Saturday night, Mr. T. R. Dubois dwelt at length on the advantages to shareholders, who would protect their present holdings by subscribing to the several interests set aside for them in the $50,000 reorganization syndicate now being formed in Montreal. The money involved in this syndicate is to be returned to those subscribing, either out of the first profits of the company or before if the directors see fit. In addition they will receive a bonus of five to one in common stock, and lastly they may exchange their shares in Birmingham Motors Ltd., for an equal equity in the new organization. This new company plans to acquire the assets of Birmingham Motors Ltd., through the co-operation of the latter's stockholders, and the opportunity is obviously one which cannot be prolonged.

DUMBWAITER VOICE THAT OF LOST WIFE.

Druggist Asks Separation From Woman He Trailed to the Bronx Apartment House.

WHITE PLAINS, N. Y., Dec. 5.—Unable to find his wife afer searching for her for four months, George Rauh, a Mount Vernon druggist of that city, heard her voice from the bottom of a shaft in an apartment house at 66 Vermilyea Avenue, the Bronx, while she was informing the janitor, whom, the plaintiff said, he had "gotten next to,' that her garbage was descending in the dumbwaiter. Rauh said he had followed his mother-in-law to this address and at first was refused admittance to the apartment. So as to be sure of his ground Rauh consulted the janitor, who conceived the plan of listening to the women's voice from the section of the house to which Rauh said he had followed his wife's mother.

This was part of Rauh's testimony in his suit for separation, started this morning. Rauh said that the first four years of married life, spent at 1,620 Hancock street, Brooklyn, and the next four years were all right. Rauh decided to go into the garage business with Frederick Shippey of Mount Vernon. The plaintiff says he owned half the stock and found it necessary to obtain the assistance of his wife, Theresa. Then the trouble started. According to Rauh his wife and Shippey developed more than a platonic friendship. They spent much time together in the garage in the early hours of the morning, he said, with only a sputtering kerosene stove for illumination.

On Nov. 11, 1918, Rauh said he left his wife after a quarrel over "early hours." Rauh told the court "she struck me in the face and knocked my glasses off and I hastily struck her back in the face and then she took a mirror reflector from the table and crashed it over my head. She also tried to hit me with a beer bottle and a chair, but her mother and the janitor intervened."

On another occasion Rauh said he was out hunting for his wife when he discovered her coming down the street with Shippey. Rauh says he told his former partner, there was going to be no more going about with his wife. Shippey had an opposite view, Rauh says. After it was all over Rauh testified he washed the blood from his hands.

OBBJECT TO DETAINING OBJECT TO DETAINING CATTLE FROM IRELAND.

Protest From Ulster Unionists to Removal of Embargo Bill.

LONDON, December 5. (Canadian Press Cable.) — C. C. Craig, leader of the Ulster Unionists at Westminster, and Timoth, Healy, Governor-General-Designate of the Irish Free State, had a conference yesterday with the Duke of Devonshire, Secretary for the Colonies, when they voiced strong opposition to the clause in the bill to remove the embargo on Canadian cattle providing for detention of Irish cattle at British ports The value of Ireland's store cattle exports is roughly twenty-five million dollars.

The Ulster Unionists intend to contest the embargo removal at every stage.

RUIN AMERICAN RACE BY CONTROL OF BIRTH

Wide-Spread Practice Prevalent Among Best People in Middle West.

CHICAGO, Dec. 5. — (United Press)—The widespread practice of birth control among the so-called "best people" is ruining the race, Dr. Joseph L. Baer gynechologist and obstretician, declared in an interview here.

"Birth encouragement, not birth limitation, is the need among these people" Dr. Baer said.

More than half the women of the country are practicing some sort of birth control, according to Dr. Baer.

While advocating larger families for some, Baer proposed a wider use of birth control methods for others.

"Wealthy women use highly scientific methods" he said. "But the women of lesser means are forced to submit to the quack doctor and the criminal operator.

"A possible solution to the problem, is regulating restraint in both directions—limitation among the indigent, the debilitated and defectives and birth encouragement among the better endowed classes."

TORONTO TO VOTE RAIL AGREEMENT

Straight Yes or No Answer to Council's Action re Hydro Radial Entrance

TORONTO, Dec. 5.—(Canadian Press).—The City Council, with 27 out of 29 members present, voted unanimously last night to submit at the next municipal election to ratepayers qualified to vote on money by-laws the following question.

"Are you in favor of the Hydro-Radical agreement passed by the City Council on Sepember sixth, 1922?"

This gives ratepayers a chance to vote straight "Yes" or "No".

Council also voted by majority of 17 to 9 against Alderman Frank Johnston's suggestion that qualified ratepayers be asked at same time to vote on following question, which Ald. Burgess said was the demand of 3500 members of the Toronto Radial Association. "Are you in favor of the city of Toronto buliding and controlling all radial railway entrances and terminals within the limits of the city, the same to be operated by the Toronto Transportation Commission and connecting up with outside lines owned or acquired for the city and granting outside municipal ities running rights over the same favorable terms?"

MOTHER!

Open Child's Bowels with "California Fig Syrup"

Hurry mother! Even a sick child loves the "fruity" taste of "California Fig Syrup" and it never fails to open the bowels. A teaspoonful today may prevent a sick child to-morrow. If constipated, bilious, feverish, fretful, has colic, colic, or if stomach is sour, tongue coated, breath bad, remember a good cleansing of the little bowels is often all that is necessary.

Ask your druggist for genuine "California Fig Syrup" which has directions for babies and children of all ages printed on the bottle. Mother! You must say "California" or you may get an imitation fig Syrup.

SANTA'S COST OF OPERATING LOWER.

He Can Fill His Pack For Less Money This Christmas.

Santa Claus will have to pay less for his toys this year.

Dolls, wheel toys, electric trains, mechanical toys of all description, stuffed animals, games and all the delights which draw the children from blocks round and make them glue their noses for hours to the windows of the nearest window toy display, are to be had at prices considerably below those prevailing last Christmas. In dolls, particularly, the reduction is marked. Talking dolls, which last Christmas could not be bought under $5 can now be had from $2.75 up, the finest English dressed dolls, gowned as exquisitely as any society beauty, can be bought for $11.50 when last year $15 was the price asked. Electric trains are about 20 per cent cheaper a fine model offered last year for $10.50 being purchaseable this year for $8.75. Stuffed animals are shown in greater variety at much more reasonable prices than 12 months ago and there is a better assortment of games at a much lower figure.

Santa will also carry round with him in Canada this year toys which have been missing from his sack since before the war. Realistic skin-covered horses and other animals, Highland dolls in kilts, in the tartans of the various clans, French novelty dolls, with every accessory correct, silk stockings, white elbow length kid gloves which will button and unbutton are some of the old friends which have reappeared.

BEAUTIFUL DOLLS

Dolls are more beautiful than ever this year and there is no end to their variety or the luxury of their gowns and accessories. Beautiful English dolls have wardrobes of georgette, silk and velvet, lace trimmed and exquisitely stitched. There are wonderful French period dolls. One, a Louis XIV. beauty is clad in correct court dress with pointed bodice of white and gold and ostrich plumes in her hair, arranged after the mode of that day. Another beauty is Madame le Pompadour. The talking dolls this year are much more beautiful than those which delighted little girls last Christmas. Then, eyes and hair were painted on the doll. This year eyes open and shut with lovely curls of dark or fair hair rival the locks of their prospective owners.

Educational toys are well to the fore and one which promises to be most popular and which has been missing since the war is the box of real pressed bricks. With these, realistic dwellings can be erected by the budding builder.

Toys that are being given a prominent place in stores are those made by returned soldiers. Some of the most artistic dolls furniture to be seen in toy departments of uptown stores is the work of the disabled man.

DEMAND CHECK OF SLAUGHTER BY MOTOR CARS

American Public Aroused By Number of Deaths in Automobile Accidents.

PROTECT PUBLIC.

CHICAGO, Dec. 5.—An aroused American public is uniting to demand that the fearful slaughter in automobile accidents—mostly avoidable—be checked, according to reports gathered from all sections of the country. Confronted by figures conservatively compiled, showing there will be more than 53,000 persons killed an injured in traffic accidents in 1922, national, state and community organizations are banding for protection of the public.

Education, simpler traffic rules and jail penalties for careless autoists are the means through which the campaign is being carried on. The National Safety Council, Highway Education Board of the U.S. Bureau of Education, National Automobile Chamber of Commerce, International Traffic Officers' Association, American Automobile Association, National Motorists' Association and other organizations are combining to spread the gospel of safety to both drivers and pedestrians.

Schools, police departments, automobile clubs and civic associations are joining in the campaign. Meantime, the cities, facing mounting death rates, are themselves taking steps to cut down their accidents.

Cities Start Campaign.

New York has just created a bureau of public safety, headed by an advertising expert, to promote safety idea. Marcus Dow, president of the National Saefty Council, is executive secretary of this department. Coordination of all schools and organizations in prevention work is the plan. Safety talks close all sessions of school in New York City now.

Atlanta, Ga., named a special traffic commission to make recommendations after it was found that there are always 30 people in the Atlanta hospitals, suffering from auto acidents.

One-way thoroughfares are being established in a number of cities where the streets are narrow and crooked.

California's percentage of accidents, last year highest in America, is climbing higher. Public feeling, running high, suggests a law making death caused by a drunken driver a first degree murder charge, with the death penalty or life imprisonment as the punishment.

Heavy Penalties.

Traffic Judge Chas. L. Bartlett of Detroit has materially aided that city's safety by jailing speeders and suspending licenses of reckless drivers. In Michigan, a state law authorizes a charge of negligent homicide in fatalities caused by carelessness, and provides a penitentiary sentence.

In Cleveland, growth of auto fatalities this year was checked only when Traffic Judge Sawicki began sending offenders to serve workhouse sentences. Recently Bartlett of Detroit sent speeders through the hospital and morgue to see auto accidnet victims. Judge Sawicki supplemented this by having convicted autoists attend the funeral of a child run down by another driver.

All over Ohio, the death toll of the prosecutors of the state have been called into session to frame more drastic traffic laws. Ohio's deaths in the World War have been surpassed by her deaths from motor accidents since the date the war started, statistics show.

Automobile associations in many states are forming "auto vigilance committees" which will investigate all accidents and assist in eliminating irresponsible autoists.

Arrest Jaywalkers.

Arrest of careless pedestrians is now possible in a number of cities, and more are adopting the plan. The "jaywalker' 'who disregards traffic and crosses streets at the wrong place is being taught that he as well as the autoist is responsible for many accidents involving pedestrians—and these constitute 90 percent of all auto mishaps.

"There is too much law enactment and not enough enforcement" says Fred Caley, secretary of the National Motorists' Association, with 225,000 members in 30 states.

"We operated railroads 50 years before we learned to eliminate deadly accidents. The element of safety was inculated into railroading through public sentiment to such exten that now the man traveling on trains is safer than the pedestrian. We must inject the element of safety into automobile traffic by the same means—public sentiment."

Double use of the highways is suggested by several experts as a possible means of reducing traffic hazards, through prohibiting daytime use of these highways to certain types of trucks and similar conveyances. These experts would provide adequate lighting for the roadways making them usable day and night.

With the whole nation aroused to the peril the automobile in careless hands has become, stringent measures to curb the speeder, drunken driver and the careless pedestrian are already being framed for many of the state legislatures that meet early in 1923.

Banishing pain
by reducing congestion

Millions are now using this simple treatment to stop pain. Sloan's, applied without rubbing, penetrates and produces a warming sensation. It stimulates new, fresh blood to and through the aching part. This breaks up the congestion, and since congestion has caused the pain—quick, grateful relief follows.

The world over, Sloan's stops rheumatic twinges and muscular aches. It eases aching backs and sharp, neuralgic pains. Good, too, for colds in chest.

PROPER CLOTHES WILL RID YOU OF AVOIRDUPOIS

(By Marian Hale)

There are two ways to get rid of your superflous flesh—diet it off or dress it off. Calories or crinolines, take your choice.

If the spirit of the early Christian martyrs is not entirely corrupted within you, you can get surprising results with the first method.

If you can't bear to make others unhappy seeing you exist on spinach when they know your inner longings you may profitably try the latter. It's surprising how many women are doing it successfully.

"Figures may not lie, but the right sort of clothes will," says Harry Collins, the fashionable New York costumer, to whose palace on Park avenue come women like Mrs. Harding, who want clothes of quiet elegance, or the most extreme dressers of the New York social and the atrical sets.

Realism vs Idealism

"Men are realists about their clothes," he explained. "hey ac cept themselves as they are. Women are idealists. No woman wants ever to look as she actually is, but as she would like to be. The successful dressmaker appeals to a woman's ideals as well as her husband's wallet.

"At least 85 per cent of the women of this country believe they are overweight. Only about 40 per cent really are.

"So 40 per cent must be made to look lighter than they really are, and the other 45 must be made to look as slim as they would like to be. The remaining 15 per cent must be made to look curved."

As I watcher the slim, graceful mannequins that parade about the show rooms like lovely peacocks it occurred to me they must really be slim—there could be no illusions about them.

All Sorts of Tricks

"They are the size the average woman would like to be," Collins said, reading my thoughts. "When a woman buys a gown her first impression of it is on her ideal self—the tall, slender, floating creature that dwells in her mind.

THE TYPE OF FROCK HARR Y COLLINS SAYS IS UNIVERSALLY BECOMING AND WILL S UBTRACT POUNDS FROM THE STOUT FIGURE.

"In the old days of the tight, fitted princess frock there was not much chance to do anything for the overweight woman To-day there are all sorts of style devices and tricks that will substract flesh from any particular part of the body where it seems desirable to eliminate it.

"Drapery, skilfully manupulated, will conceal bad lines or emphasize good ones. Loose panels add height and take away width. Uneven hemlines and longer skirts will reveal lovely ankles or artfully conceal those that are not beautiful.

"Side panels apparently reduce any hip line, and the present style of blouse makes it possible for nearly any woman to apear a perfect thirty-six.

"Remember this about clothes. You can wrap up a hat in a cardboard box and make a big package out of it, or in tissue paper and make a small one. Smartly gowned women this season are preferring to look like small packages.

HUSBAND DIDN'T DARE LEAVE HER ALONE HER HEART WAS SO BAD

Those feelings of faintness, those dizzy spells, the all-gone sinking sensations which come on from time to time indicate a weakened condition of the heart and a disordered state of the nerves.

MILBURN'S HEART AND NERVE PILLS

have no equal as a remedy to strengthen the heart, invigorate the nerves and build up the run-down system.

Mrs. C. Vanhorn, Eckville, Alta., writes:—'About a year ago I had heart trouble. My husband didn't dare leave me alone, and often I would just feel kind of faint and my heart would seem to stop beating. I would just faint away, and it would sometimes be an hour before they could bring me back to life. Someone told me about Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills. I got three boxes I took them and felt much better, so continued all Winter, and now I ever feel any such faintness. I sure ly do appreciate the good they have done for me."

A Thought

Be thou faithful unto death, and I will give thee a crown of life.—Revelation 2:10.

Men are enlisted for the labor that kills; let them be enlisted for the labor that feeds; and let the captains of the latter be held as much gentleman as the captains of the former.—John Ruskin.

JURIES DISAGREE KENNEDY MURDER

One-Time Belle of University Campus Charged With Conniving in Murder.

WOMAN ACQUITTED.

LOS ANGELES, Dec. 5.— (Special.)—Madelyne Obenchain was acquitted after five juries disagree in the Kennedy murder case.

LOS ANGELES, Dec. 5.—Eighteen months in jail have not marred the striking beauty of Madaynne Obenchain, one-time belle of Northwestern University campus who will is on her third trial which started yesterday, on charges of having connived in the killing of J. Belton Kennedy.

Madalynne, at 29, is still in appearance the Madalynne of her college days. Yet she has gone through an emotional gamut during the last year and a half that should wrinkle the face of many a stronger person.

Jail rats have figured weirdly as a gauge of her changing mental states.

"I share the common feminine horror of these beasts," she said. "But I was so stunned during my first trial that rats coming into my cell and crawling over my bed and hands failed to produce a shiver.

"Now—I am afraid of the horrid creatures again. So I know that my third trial is going to be the hardest to bear, because I am alert once more to the scampering, distressing circumstances of life and of my predicament.' '

Wants Women on Jury.

Mrs. Obenchain hopes to get a jury of six men and six women.

"Women," she excaimed, "are most reliable when a woman defendant is ready to bare her whole heart to them frankly. And that I am prepared to do, with all its foolish, but never criminal promptings."

The prosecution has stated it will try Mrs. Obenchain half a dozen times if neecssary to get a verdict. District Attorney Thomas Woolwine's staff will represent Madalynne, divorced wife of Ralph Obenchain, Chicago lawyer, as the "woman scorned" in a disastrous love adventure.

They will seek to convince the jury that, dillusioned as to Kennedy's professed ardor, she lured him to the Beverly Glen death-lair where he was ambushed and killed Aug. 5, 1921.

Holds Murder Secret.

The actual shooting was charged to Arthur Burch, a friend of Mrs. Obenchain's in her university days at Evanston, Ill. The third trial of Burch has just been concluded.

Madalynne has steadfastly maintained her innocence, and declares she is sure she knows why he was killed.

"But I have too much respect for him dead and hold our one-time great love too sacred, to make public my theory. I'd rather go to the penitentiary, unjustly convicted, than tell," she says.

CANADIAN FISH.

OTTAWA, Ont. Dec. 5.—Total value of Canadian fisheries in 1921 was $34,931,000.

Feodor Chaliapine, the Russian baritone, will make 15 preformances in America with the Metropolitan Opera Company, receiving $450 a night.

EXPORTS DECREASED.

MONTREAL, Quebec, Dec. 5.—Exports to the United States increased in value $4,000,000 and imports declined $1,000,000 in September of this year.

Proving the Biblical Story of Creation Existed a Thousand Years Before Moses was Born

Archeological Research in Ancient Babylon Reveals Written and Decipherable Evidence That the Modern Ecclesiastical Version of Adam and Eve Was Known and Engraved 2,500 B.C.

CHAP. I.

1 IN the beginning God created the heaven and the earth.
2 And the earth was without form, and void; and darkness was upon the face of the deep. And the Spirit of God moved upon the face of the waters.
3 And God said, Let there be light: and there was light.
4 And God saw the light, that it was good: and God divided the light from the darkness.
5 And God called the light Day, and the darkness he called Night. And the evening and the morning were the first day.
6 And God said, Let there be a firmament in the midst of the waters, and let it divide the waters from the waters.
7 And God made the firmament, and divided the waters which were under the firmament from the waters which were above the firmament: and it was so.
8 And God called the firmament

Bible story and the earlier Babylonian stories.

One of the most important discoveries in this field is the one just announced above. Dr. Edward Chiera, assistant professor of Assyriology at the University of Pennsylvania, has succeeded in deciphering and translating this tablet.

BY REV. DR. CLIFTON H. LEVY.

HOW did the story of Creation get into the Bible?

The book of Genesis, which contains it is called one of the "Five Books of Moses," and ecclesiastical legend credits Moses with its authorship.

But learned scholars in the church itself have pointed out that Moses could not possibly have written all of these books. In the first place, he did not live until an age long after the Creation, even by Bible chronology. In the second place, the books he himself is supposed to have written contain not only the account of his birth, but of his own death and burial, which he obviously could not have written.

The Christian church, itself keenly interested in science and archeological research, is no longer content with the simple, sweeping statement that these books were "inspired."

The universally accepted facts of geology, the "record of the rocks," the discovery of the fossil remains of human beings more than 30,000 years old, have shown, even in the opinion of many leading Christian scholars, that the Bible story of Creation is not to be taken literally.

Far from discrediting the Bible, however, these researches have shed new light and beauty on the high symbolic meaning of the Bible story, as an inspired work of genius.

But, inspired or not, the book of Genesis was written by human hands, and one of the great mysteries has been "By whose hands? How? When? And where?"

If Moses didn't write the story of Creation, then who did write it?

This question has been asked for centuries.

A new and startling answer—or, if not a complete answer, at least a remarkable new light on the subject—has just been obtained through the discovery by the archeologists of the University of Pennsylvania, of an ancient clay tablet of Babylonian origin, on which is written a part of the same story which is contained in Genesis!

And this old tablet was written more than a thousand years before Moses was born!

It is believed to prove, therefore, that the Biblical story of Creation, or a part of it at least, existed in written form, at least a thousand years before it was incorporated into what are known as the "Five Books of Moses."

The ancient Babylonians left many writings on tablets of clay and stone, especially among the ruins of Babylon and Nippur. These primitive "books" contained poems and writings descriptive of the earliest legendary ages known to man, the times of the Creation and the Deluge. Day by day, more of these tablets are being deciphered by modern science, and new discoveries are being made showing marked similarities between the

He declares that the clay tablet dates from a period about 2,100 B. C., or perhaps 2,500 B. C., but that, it is plainly a copy of a much older original.

This tablet, he explains, was written in the Sumerian language, which the inhabitants of Babylonia spoke and wrote before the Semitic Babylonians settled there. In this case, the tablet is a copy of a very old story indeed, the original of which may have been written as early as 4,000 B. C.

Thus far Dr. Chiera has translated only a part of the inscription, which he says is a dialogue between Adam and God, closely resembling the dialogue in the Garden of Eden which is found in the third chapter of Genesis, verses 9 to 19.

"I have not been obedient to thee. My heart is full of fear . . . after that . . . has been cast. . . . Fear, weeping, has been cast. At the sending of thy call. And I after thy call. From my appearance I was fleeing."

Note that, like the Bible story this is a story of a disobedience and a fall, of fear and fleeing. . . . Adam's fear of his own appearance. Remember that in the Bible story one of the first things Adam did after eating the forbidden fruit was to realize that he was naked, and to fly and hide because of his nakedness—because of his appearance.

Then according to the translator, God speaks:

". . . Thy humanity. Thy body has not been freed. For mankind the words of wisdom are not (adapted). Finish thy weeping. From my presence, go to the desert.

An Ancient Babylonian Seal of 4,500 B. C., Supposedly a Scene of the Temptation of Adam and Eve in the Garden of Eden.

Adam and Eve Driven from the Garden of Eden, from the Famous Painting by Loewe Marchand.

. . . to me forever for taking the tree which (gives knowledge of good and evil?) The plant which free from death, inferior beings shall not take. Thou shalt never take. In no way whatever, after this, thou shalt obtain. To my ox, for leading it as an outcast, thou shalt not return. To the land for working it, as a chased one, thou shalt not return. To my field for irrigating it, as an outcast, thou shalt not return. Go work the land, raise food for eating.

Thou shalt never reach me. Men like thee will work the land, their mothers and their fathers . . . will eat the food of God. Since the hand of the sons of the lowly ones has reached the food, their eyes have been opened. The low servants of the chief of their fathers; ten measures of barley each have been filled as their portion. To each of their fathers, barley has been multiplied. Barley, oil, wool, sheep have been brought unto them. Humanity, thou art to know abundance."

Note the many startling similarities, in fact rather than use of words, with the Bible story. God says wisdom "the tree of knowledge" is not for mankind. Man, having sinned, is told to go into the desert (away from the Garden of Eden). He is prevented from eating "the plant which frees from death," described in the Bible story as the "tree of life." He is sent out as an outcast, "to raise food for eating." The Bible version says, "In the sweat of thy face shalt thou eat bread."

At this point, the Babylonian story becomes different. Its God is kind and promises that future generations of mankind shall "eat the food of God" and shall have many good things in abundance.

In the story in Genesis of the fall and the driving of Adam from the Garden of Eden, God is more severe. His sentence is a curse. He says: "Cursed is the ground for thy sake; in sorrow shalt thou eat of it all the days of thy life; thorns and also thistles shall it bring forth to thee."

And in that particular Bible dialogue with Adam, God makes no promise that Adam's children and descendants shall be any better off. The curse is supposed to be permanent.

The greatest difference, however, between the Biblical account of the Creation and the various older Babylonian legends on this and other previously translated tablets, is that in the Bible version, God is the One and only God, while in the Babylonian stories there are many gods, and in some of the legends there is a great conflict going on among the gods themselves as to the wisdom of creating man.

Opinions differ about the extent of the similarity between the Babylonian and Semitic stories, and Dr. Albert T. Clay, a distinguished American archeologist, believes that the Hebrew version is an original story that was not derived from the Babylonian at all.

Dr. Chiera, on the other hand, who translated this latest Sumerian version, believes that the Bible story was derived from Babylonian origins.

The discovery of the Babylonian accounts of the Creation have stimulated interest in the Biblical account, and helped in some ways to clear up some difficulties connected with the interpretation of the Bible narrative. For instance, the tale of the temptation of Eve by the serpent is really not fully comprehensible until we know something about the Babylonian idea of the great fight between Tiamat, the primaeval dragon (or serpent of the Bible) and the great god Merodach or Bel. We learn from the Babylonian tale that there was a great battle between this monster and the god about the wisdom of creating man, and that only when the dragon had been driven by the thunderbolts of the god did the creation begin. Pictures of this mighty battle are shown upon the Babylonian monuments and there too we have a picture which has been identified as showing a later development of the story, along the same lines as the story in the Bible.

Road Race Prizes and City Track Trophies Presented To the Winners Last Night

Capitol Theatre Scene of Presentation By Dr. A. W. McPherson to the Successful Athletes.

VALUABLE PRIZES.

Immediately after the show at the Capitol theatre last evening the winners of the Senior and Junior Examiner Road Races and the City Track Championships were presented with their prizes and trophies by Dr. A. W. McPherson, president of the P.A.A.A.

Senior Road Race.

First prize—A ninety-six piece dinner set presented by the Examiner as well as the Examiner Shield which is held for one year, won by Dick Bates.

Second prize—A gold watch presented by the Examiner, won by J. Ward.

Third prize—A ruby ring presented by the Examiner, won by G. N. Grose.

Junior Race.

Second prize—A signet ring presented by the P.A.A.A. won by Lorne Combe.

Fourth prize—A silver clock presented by the P.A.A.A. won by Jack Thornton.

City Track Championships.

The Peck Cup and a silver mounted shield for boys fourteen and under won by Roy Lewis.

Bronze mounted shield for second in this class won by Jack LeBarr.

The Hnycke Cup and a silver mounted shield for boys sixteen and under won by Grant Miller.

Bronze mounted shield for second in this class won by Robert Sturgeon.

The Eastwood Cup and a silver mounted shield for boys under eighteen won by Jack Thornton.

Bronze mounted shield for second in this class won by Ted Outram.

The Howden Cup and a silver mounted shield for those over eighteen years won by Arthur Tingler.

Bronze mounted shield for second in this class won by Richard Bates.

In presenting the prizes Dr. McPherson told of the good showing made by many Peterboro boys not only in the city but also in many outside athletic events and pointed out the necessity of support from every one if the boys and girls of the city are to have a good clean athletic training and so grow to manhood and womanhood with a sound, strong body and a clear mind. He paid a tribute to the support given by many of our local public spirited citizens, telling of the work that they had done to forward the work among the boys and girls of Peterboro.

He told briefly the history of the Road Race and of some of the well-known runners who had been developed by this race.

The shield for first place in the senior road race and the cups for the City Championships will be held for one year, the other prizes and trophies being held permanently. The track events were competed for during the summer and the winner determined by the number of points won in the various contests.

HOOSE AND MICKEY.

In connection with the rumored move of Clair Hoose from Leaside to Peterboro, it is stated on good authority that the Peacock crew will not make any effort to hold this player who did not live up to all expectations. Added to this they have secured a new catcher from a town west of Toronto. Mickey Murray is, however, a different proposition and will be seen again in a Leaside uniform. Shaw, Dillon, Hines and Culleton will also be there, also one of the best pitchers from a Toronto Senior League, who made such a good impression last season ,which was his first year in senior ball.—Lindsay Post.

VARSITY SURPRISED CHAMPION GRANITES

TORONTO, Dec. 5.—In this year of sporting surprises the Varsity senior hockey team did not fail to upset the dope in the opening game of the S.P.A. series at the Arena, Toronto on Saturday night before a packed house. They defeated Granites, last year's O.H.A. champions and Allan cup holders, by a score of 3 to 1, and if the score had indicated the play, Varsity should have had a couple more goals.

It was a fitting game for the opening of the hockey season, and the boys went at it hammer and tongs showing a great deal of stamina, pluck and cleverness, which had the crowd on their toes making the rafters ring with their shouts of encouragement to the battling teams.

DELAVAL DEFEATED BY THE ENGINEERS

Rally in the Eighth Gave the Winners Three Runs Which Were Sufficient to Win.

The DeLaval nine went down to defeat before the Engineers with a score of 5 to 3 in a soft ball game last evening at the Armoury. The game was a battle royal from the start but the Separator gang weakened in the eighth and three runs were sent across the plate, which with one in the fourth and one in the sixth proved enough to carry off the honors. The DeLaval team failed to score until the seventh and netted one run in each of the remaining frames. They looked dangerous in the final session when they showed sufficient strength to score one run and get two men on bases, which would have been enough to tie the score. The necessary wallop to bring them home failed to materialize and the side was retired with two runners high and dry on the sacks.

The players were:

Engineers—McCarney rf, Carruthers lf, Metherat ss, Batten ss, Frost 2b, Langley p, Jackson 3b, Munro 1b, Helson c.

DeLaval—Perks ss, Galbraith ss, Fitzgerald rf, Frick 1b, Doughty 3b, Bell 2b, McIntyre lf, McGee c, Pierce p.

Score by innings:

Engineers .... 0 0 0 1 0 1 0 3 0—5

FIREMEN TRIMMED THE LAWN BOWLERS.

A five inning soft ball scrap at the Armoury last evening between the Firemen and the Lawn Bowlers resulted in a victory for the Smoke Eaters with a score of 11 to 7. The Lawn Bowlers went to bat in the final frame with the almost hopeless task of an eight run lead to overcome. They went at it with a will and staged a great rally which netted half the desired total before the side was retired.

The players were:

Firemen—Mason rf, McBride lf, Carr 1b, Gimblett, Sr., c; Rose ss, Gimblett, Jr. 2b; Rolo ss, Meehan 3b, Dunkerly p.

Lawn Bowlers—Gilliam 2b, Curvin 1b, McArthur 3b, Freeman c, Fox p, Martin ss, Maynard lf, Elliott rf, Hendry ss.

Score by innings:

Firemen ..... 2 3 0 2 4—11
Bowlers ..... 1 2 0 0 4— 7

Hornsby Broke Many Batting Records in National League

Official Averages, Released To-Day, Show That Hornsby Had One of the Greatest Seasons in the History of the Game.

By HENRY L. FARRELL, United Press Sports Editor.

NEW YORK, Dec. 5.—(United Press)—Rogers Hornsby, the great star of the St. Louis Cardinals, was the outstanding hitter and slugger of the 1922 baseball season.

For the third successive year, he led the National League hitters, according to the official averages released yesterday:

His average of .4013 is the highest mark made by an National League hitter since Ed. Delehanty was the champion is 1899 with .408.

With 250 hits over the season's run, he also broke the record of 243 hits made in 1897 by Willie Keeler.

His total of 42 homers made his baseball's slugging king for the season and broke all National League records.

Hornsby also led in run scoring with 141 runs to his credit, Max Carey, the fleet Pirate being just one behind him.

Hornsby also led in doubles with 46, while Jake Daubert, of the Reds, had the honors in triples with 22 with Rabbit Maranville, Pittsburgh, second with 15 and Hornsby third with 14.

* * * * * * *

General improvement in batting is noticed in the average, although the number, although the number of .300 hitters in 1921 was 58 against 53 for the past season.

With the exception of Hornsby, almost a new race of batting kings came into power in 1922.

Among the first twenty on this year's roll of honor, Emil Meusel, the Giant outfielder, was the only one who did not better than his 1921 average. He fell down only slightly, however, from .343 to .330.

* * * * * * *

Casey Stengel, the rejunevated orphan of the National League was one of the biggest sensations of the year. Working as a regular with the Giants he jumped his average form .248 to .368.

Fonesca, the Cincinnati infielder, hopped from .276 to .361, but he is a young player and his improvement was more to be expected. Another youngster who came fast was Tommy Tierney, the Pirate infielder, who hopped his average from .298 to .345.

The following table shows what improvement was made among the firsty twenty batters:

Name	1921	1922
Hornsby, Cards	.397	.401
Stengel, Giants	.248	.368
Fonesca, Reds	.276	.361
Grimes, Chicago	.321	.354
Roush, Reds	.351	.351
Bigbee, Pirates	.323	.350
Mann, Cards	.328	.347
Tierney, Pirates	.298	.345
Snyder, Giants	.320	.343
Hollocher, Cubs	.288	.339
Walker, Phils	.301	.337
Daubert, Reds	.306	.336
Wheat, Robins	.320	.335
Young, Giants	.327	.330
Barnhart, Pirates	.258	.330

Among the newcomers, Rebel Russell, the old pitcher, who came back to outfield for the Pirates, rapped for a good average of .368 and landed in second place.

Hack Miller, the huge Chicago outfielder, was seventh with .351 and Harper, the young Cincinnati outfielder, was among the select with .339.

* * * * * * *

Many of the outstanding batters of 1921 fell off during the past season and dropped down considerably in the standing. Among those who had a bad season were:

	1921	1922
Mueller, Cards	.352	.270
Christenburym, Braves	.352	.250
Reuther, Robins	.351	.208
Cruise, Braves	.346	.278
Fournier, Cards	.343	.294
Frisch, Giants	.341	.326
Smith, Giants	.336	.277
Groh, Giants	.331	.265
Johnston, Robins	.325	.319

* * * * * * *

With Russell, Tierney, Barnhart, Carey, Schimdt and Gooch hitting .300 for the season and Maranville, Traynor and Grimm right in the shadow of it, the Pittsburgh Pirates led in the league in team batting with .308.

The Giants aided by the .300 stickwork of Stengel, Snyder, Young, Meusel, Kelly, Cunningham, Frisch and Bancroit finished second with .305 and the St. Louis Cards with .301 were the only other club to get in the elite group.

Meeting Tomorrow For Girls' Hockey

A meeting of all girls interested in ice hockey for the coming winter has been called at the Y.W.C.A. for Wednesday evening at 7 o'clock. The local girls had a strong team last year and have the prospects of an even better one this season. It is understood that a competent and experienced coach is available and with plenty of good hockey material in the city it looks as if Peterboro should have one of the fastest ladies hockey teams in the province. Other ladies teams in the district have already made their preliminary preparations and are only waiting for ice to get into active training for the winter sport.

Workers in iron and steel mills have increased 35.8 per cent over a year ago. An increase of 48.5 per cent is reported by automobile and land vehicle concerns.

BIG SCRAP ON TO REINSTATE BATTLING SIKI

French Boxing Federation Takes Exception to the Accusations of Deputy Diagne.

SAYS FIGHT FRAMED.

PARIS, Dec. 5.— (Canadian Press)—The Affaire Siki, surrounding the big Senegalese fighter who won the light heavyweight championship of the world by defeating Georges Carpentier, but recently had his title taken away from him by the Boxing Federation and also was denied the right to engage in pugilistic contest for nine months, is to be threshed out before the courts.

A complete investigation of the circumstances surrounding the Carpentier-Siki fight, which the Senegalese Deputy, Diagne, qualified in the Chamber of Deputies last week in open debate as a "frame-up" is to be made by the Civil Tribunal.

The Boxing Federation has called a special meeting for the purpose of discussing the accusations made against it by the Deputy Diagne, and announces that it will take legal proceedings against the Deputy. On the other hand Diagne himself has engaged counsel to sue the Federation in an attempt to obtain the rehabilitation of Siki and to prevent the Federation from placing the Senegalese fighter in the position of being unable to earn his living, thus leaving Siki, his wife and child, "facing starvation."

[illegible]s accusations in open session of the Chamber of Deputies to [illegible] Federation takes exception are quoted in the report published by the Journal Officiel, as follows:

"Siki refused to carry out instructions which would have caused the public to be fooled and swindled of its money. Suddenly becoming conscious of his own strength while in the ring, he refused to lay down in the fourth round and abandon to Carpentier another victory."

Deputy Diagne explains that his words as quoted above cast no reflection on the honesty of the members of the French Boxing Federation.

"The overtures made to Siki to get him to lay down did not come from that quarter,' the Deputy added, but he said he had absolute proof of his charges.

During the long negogiations for the meeting between the Senegalese fighter and Carpentier there was much talk in sporting circles of an alleged "frame-up." Prior to the fight Hellers was asked concerning the rumor.

"No propositions have been made to me to have Siki lie down," said Hellers. "If any are made between now and the day of the fight, I of course, will have to accept them in order to get Carpentier in the ring against my black man. But I will double cross them. I swear to you that we are going into this fight to win."

Siki told the correspondent on Saturday evening, the night before the fight took place, " Iam going into this fight to win. If those who are betting 6 to 1 against me think I am going to "dive" they will get an unpleasant surprise tomorrow."

ATHLETICS PLAY IMPORTANT PART IN COLLEGE LIFE

Class Work of the Majority of Noted College Athletes is Far Above the Average of Non-Athletes.

WELL ORGANIZED.

By "BO" McMILLIN

Many colleges are being accused of over-playing athletics. This question has caused many worries to the college presidents. It is of vital interest to all of those who are interested in the advancement of public education in our colleges and universities. I would like to put in a good word in favor of the college athlete. I believe that the athletes in the colleges of today have proved that they are a very important cog in the school life.

Now it is not my intention to infer that athletics are as important as the academic program, but they do help to promote an interest in the class work. Nowadays nearly all of the schools require their athletes to have a certain high scholastic standing before they are eligible for a contest. This, of course, helps to keep the student's interest in his work up to a higher point. It is mighty hard on a good man to have to stay out of a contest on account of low grades and the one who amount ot anything at all will work their heads off just to keep off the delinquent list.

Many will advance the argument that he will not have time to spend many hours on his studies after giving so much time to the work on the field. But if you will notice the scholastic records made by the majority of the noted athletes you will find that their class work is far above the average.

During my four years at Centre College there were two of our star football players who graduated as valedictorians of their classes. The scholastic standing of our team was above the average as compared with that of other organizations. Of course, there were reasons for this. The honor and self-respect of an athlete demand that he maintain the grade required by the faculty. Another line of reasoning that will usually work out is that it takes a bright student to be a successful athlete.

My main thought in covering this subject is to bring out the necessity of having organized athletics in an institution. If we can educate the public to this fact then we will not accuse the schools that have been successful along athletic line of using unfair means in getting a team together. Where a school has a permanent organization in athletics it will have a good publicity bureau and they will get big help in the securing of new students.

Take as an illustration Penn State. There you will find a wonderful organization and it has done much toward helping to build up the school. In 1921 they not only excelled in football, but competed successfully in all branches, and I am told that 85 per cent of the student body participated in some branch. If this is true, then 85 per cent of the Penn State students must have passed 12 or more hours of work in order to be eligible for the various teams. This in itself shows that organization along these lines plays a prominent part in the program of a school.

TANK RECORDS NOT TO BE RECOGNIZED

Weismuller-Bauer Exhibition Held Up by Lack of Official Sanction.

TORONTO, December 5. Canadian Press. — Lack of official sanctions from the proper body almost sq.elched the Johnny Weismuller-Sybil Bauer swimming exhibitions at the West End Y.M.C.A. Saturday night. Though Johnny Walker had permits from five different bodies he neglected the one he really needed—the Canadian Amateur Swimming Association's permit—and the result was vexatious delays.

The two world's champions gave a marvellous exhibition, but their records and that made by Tommy Walker will not be recognized by the C.A.S.A. because of the lack of proper sanction. Miss Bauer did 220 yards back stroke in 3.05 4-5, reducing her own wolrd's record by 1 3-5 seconds, a wonderful feat. Weismuller did 60 yards in 29 2-5 seconds, culling three-fifths of a second off Daniels' records. Weismuller did 40 yards in 17 4-5 seconds by th official watches but unofficial watches at the the end where he finished caught him in 17 2-5 second.

Weismuller is a positive freak in —the swimming game. Tall and lithe he is perfectly proportioned and he certainly loves the water.

Miss Bauer is slight. Her physical makes up gives up little hint of her power in the water.

Tommy Walker clipped five seconds off the Canadian record of 1.15 3-5 for the 100 yards back stroke, held by Harold Fiske of Montreal.

Though Walker's time will not be recognized by the C.A.S.A., it will probably be a Canadian Y.M.C.A. official record.

The University of Toronto relay team, composed of Uren, Wells, Harston and Keefler (captain), defeated that of the West End Y.M.C.A. composed of Nimmo, Web, Walker and Henderson (captain), The distance was 160 yards and the time 1 minute 24 3-5 seconds. Mendelson, the last West End man to finish, was beaten by inches only.

Harold Nimmo, failed to break the Canadian 50 yards speed record of 25 seconds. He made a good attempt however and is one of the most promising of the city's junior swimmers. Albert Webb, Cyril Kenneth, the Carter Brothers and Brunell, gave diving exhibitions.

Kathleen Norgate, who won the gap-to-gap and across the bay women's races last summer, was best in the women's 40 yards' speed race, the final of which resulted as follows: 1, Kathleen Norgate; 2, Jean Kirkpatrick; 3, Alice Hardy. Time 26 4-5 seconds.

P.A.A.A. WILL PUT ON A BOXING TOURNEY.

The P.A.A.A. hope to put on a boxing show at an early date, and boxers of the city wishing to take part in the competitions are invited to meet the Boxing Committee at the Armouries to-morrow evening. The boxers will meet in the band-room, as the recreation-room will be in use.

TWO PLAYERS REPORT.

SASKATOON, December 5 (Canadian Press). — "Rusty" Crawford, veteran puck chaser, and Tommy Murray, former Coast League goalkeeper, reported to the Crescent Hockey Club on Sunday.

They were out for practice yesterday.

This brings the total of players here now up to 12.

DOBBIN STAGES BIG COMEBACK

Horses Again Popular as an Adjunct to Sport — Buffalo to Enjoy Polo Under Glass.

BUFFALO, Dec. 5.—(Associated Press)—The horse is finding it way back to popularity in this part of the country as an adjunct to sport. Five polo fours, five new horse shows, a hunt club and a saddle and bridle club with five acres of stables and grounds, are among the more recent additions to pastimes in which equestrianism figures.

The club house of the Saddle and Bridle Club, located on the site occupied by the Pan-American exposition, is said to be one of the largest privately owned riding enclosure in the United States. It is of the Tudor style of architecture, the stables surrounding a huge enclosed ring under a glass roof. Polo will be played in the ring during the winter months.

The horse shows scheduled for next year are the Erie county fair, the Hunt Club show in September, the Genesee County show at Batavia, Troop M show at Genesco and Troop I show here. Avon and Rochester also will hold horse shows next season.

AMERICAN LEAGUE TO MEET IN CHICAGO.

NEW YORK, December 5 (Canadian Press). — John A. Heydler, President of the National League, declared in a statement to-day that he did not construe either as a "slap at Commissioner Landis, or as a sign of strained relations between the two major leagues," the action of Ban Johnson, President of the American League, in changing the scene of the latter organisation's meeting from New York to Chicago and thus preventing a scheduled joint session between the two bodies here.

The National League's annual meeting will be held in New York, on Tuesday, 12th December, while that of the American League, as a result of President Johnson's decision, will be held n Chicago, on 14th December, the date on which it was to have been held here.

The joint conference originally slated for the following day, thus has been automatically cancelled.

ESCAPES JAIL BY MEANS OF WINDOW.

Clara Phillips, Convicted Murderess, Makes Good Her Getaway.

LOS ANGELES, Canadian Press. —Clara Phillips to-day climbed out of the window in the women's section of the county jail, where she was serving from ten years to life imprisonment after conviction of the hammer murder of Alberta Meadows, and made good her escape.

REVISED FIGURES GIVE PRESTON 1,350 MAJORITY.

Three Polls Yet to Hear From—Farmers Return to Former Party.

PERTH, Dec. 5. Canadain Press. The revised figures of the Lanark bye-election make the majority for Dr. R. F. Preston, Conservative 1350 with three rural polls to hear from. The tendency of the farmers to return to former party affiliations when no progressive is running, is much commented upon. It was in evidence in all parts of the riding. The southern portion of the riding when Conservative as it has been ever since confederation. Carleton Place and Perth also went Conservative. The northern portion was Liberal in spots.

POWER MATTER TO COMMITTEE

R. R. Hall's Letter Will Be Discussed—Ald. Morrison Was "Curly Under the Collar."

Mr. R. R. Hall's letter to the Council requesting that a public meeting be called to discuss local Hydro matters was referred to the Manufacturers' Committee last night virtually with power to act as they may deem advisable.

Ald. Hamilton said that the questions raised by Mr. Hall were for the most part being investigated by the Gregory Commission which was appointed by the Drury Government "Mr. Hall has said that Dams 4 and 5 could be united in one head and give us four or five thousand horse power. That must assume that the Dominion Government would build such a dam at an outlay of half a million dollars or possibly a million, and give us the use of it.

Ald. Morrison—How about the use of the water?

Ald. Hamilton—There would be a charge for the water. Suppose we got 5,000 h.p. Last December we used 5,300 h.p. If we hadn't the Hydro we'd be in trouble. Besides they have built a 10,000 h.p. unit at Ranney's Falls, and they can develop 4,000 h.p. at No. 8. So there is far more available power than they had before. People think that power is being taken from Peterboro and sent to Trenton and Belleville. The opposite is the fact. Auburn is the only producing plant and we are bringing in more than 3,500 h.p. from the Trent now. I think this letter should be looked into, but I can't see any advantage in calling a public meeting."

Ald. Hamilton recalled that Dam No. 5 had been operated by the Hydro, but the cost proved so high that the plant was dismantled.

Mayor Taylor said he was satisfied with having the Manufacturer's Committee take up the questions in Mr. Hall's letter and consider them.

Ald Morrison's Statement

"I came here to-night just a little bit curly under the collar at a few remarks made by Ald. Hamilton in the Finance Committee as I read it in the paper", was Ald. Morrison's preface to a little speech that wound up in close harmony. He was alluding to a comment in regard to the details of the Suburban Area Commission's expenditure.

"I'd like to tell Ald. Hamilton that I have been prepared to give the fullest report as far as we have gone", Ald. Morrison said. "I have it in my pocket now. I didn't like the way it read in the paper. Everything has been above aboard. I asked Mr. Elliott for a report. I don't know whether it has reached the city treasurer or not, but I think it probably has. No one ever suggested that I should make a report to the Council I can give you all the figures, and get you any information you want regarding the suburban area."

Ald. Hamilon replied that in his remarks in committee he was not criticising Ald. Morrison personally. It was rather the system that had been established. He didn't think there had been any special details from Mr. Whitehouse when he was on the Commission. "I said I objected to the way the county was running the whole road system of the town. I am not objecting to roads built four or five miles out of the city, but I understand they are going much beyond that."

Ald. Morrison informed him that the Chemong Road was carried to Bridgenorth.

Ald. Hamilton— I don't object to them going out a certain distance if the county would do its part and carry on these roads as county roads.

As a final remark Ald. Morrison said there were men on the county council just as wise as those in the city council.

"They're too wise", Ald. Hamilton rejoined.

YARMOUTH THREATENED WITH CONFLAGRATION.

YARMOUTH, December 5, Canadian Press. — The business section of Yarmouth was threatened this morning by fire that destroyed the new Princess block and was still burning at noon but thought to be under control.

GRIFFITH ORDERED

had no further authority either to retain or to expend this money, and his negotiations looking in that direction were improper and illegal. If he had turned the money over to the township, the township could probably have retained it, it being in the nature of a grant by gift to them, but as it is, the gift never was completed. The money was given to the defendant as a commissioner to expend for certain purposes; this he did not do and the purpose being unfulfilled, and the gift to the township incomplete, the plaintiff county is entitled to recover back the money, which to all intents and purposes the defendant had converted to his own use. The rest of the money has all been sufficiently accounted for with the exception of this $100.00.

Judgment will therefore be entered for the plaintiffs against the defendant for $100.00 and costs of action. The money in court will be paid out to the county treasurer or his solicitor, and be applied on this judgment.

ROYAL SANCTION FOR IRISH FREE STATE.

LONDON, December 5. Canadian Press. — King George this evening gave the royal assent to the legislation setting up the Irish free state as a Dominion of the British Empire.

THEATRES

GRAND — John Barrymore in Sherlock Holmes, a remarkable Goldwyn picture. Also 3-act Pantages vaudeville.

ROYAL— William Fox presents Tom Mix in "Just Tony," a story of the highest interest-holding order, staged with an unusual scenic background. Also comedies and educational features.

CAPITOL —"To Have and To Hold." Mary Johnston's famous story shown on the screen—a romance of Crown colony days full of thrills.

REGENT— Alice Lake in "The Golden Gift," Charlie Chaplin in "His New Job."

AT THE ROYAL.

MIX WESTERN SCORES WITH FAMOUS "TONY."

That western melodrama which possesses artistry in its pantomimic silence and charm in its unfoldment is still the most favored of motion picture themes, was clearly demonstrated at the Royal Theatre last night, where Tom Mix, the William Fox star, and his far-famed steed, "Tony" returned in a feature length Fox production, "Just Tony," adapted from the familiar novel, "Alcatraz," by Max Brand. Spontaneous cheers from the audience and prolonged applause repeated throughout the running of the picture gave evidence of the popular enjoyment which such clear-cut drama carries with it.

The story is that of a horse whose feelings are so stirerd by the cruelty of his human captors that he turns against them, and enters upon a career of devastation and ruin of all man's belongings.

The training of the horse is superb, and the intelligence exhibited by the quadruped is beyond belief. "Just Tony" is a picture exceedingly entertaining. It is more than worth seeing.

Capitol Entertainment

The screen version of the popular historic novel, "To Have and to Hold," opened at the Capital last night, with Betty Compson and Bert Lytell in the leading roles. The scenario writer, in adopting this story to the screen, has taken less liberties with the original text than is usual in such cases, and all the stirring incidents of the plot which opens in the royal court of King James and reaches all the way to the primitive colony of Jamestown, in Virginia, are admirably portrayed. Betty Compson, as Lady Jocelyn, is a splendid interpreter of the part of a member of the English court family, who finally wearies to the point of desperation of the festivities which constitute the main part of the daily life. None but a British woman would have had the hardihood to adapt the means which she did to escape from it all, especially from the unwelcome attentions of the King's favorite, and none but a British woman could have imparted herself with so much courage and dignity in all the novel experiences and dangerous situations through which she passed. There is an excellent representation of a naval battle between a pirate vessel and a King's ship, none the less deadly though the canon were of the type in use several centuries ago. The wreck of the pirate craft by an explosion is one of the most realistic pictures ever shown on a screen. The plot works out to the entire satisfaction of the audience, whose sympathies from the start are with the heroine and her colonial husband. There is no wavering in the interest throughout the entire presentation.

The bill at the Capitol for the first three nights of this week is fully up to the standard which this popular theatre has always endeavored to maintain.

Besides the usual illustrations of the leading events in the world's history of to-day, the programme includes a racy and laughable sketch, based upon the life led by members of the mounted police and other residents of the Canadian West.

SPLENDID PROGRAMME.

The Grand's special programme of Pantage's vaudeville and super pictures got away to a flying start yesterday, a big audience finding the bill full of interest and enjoyment.

In securing the film version of "Sherlock Holmes," with John Barrymore heading an all-start cast, as the opening feature, the management of the Grand made a ten strike, Sherlock Holmes has always been a popular figure, first with the reading public and then through the instrumentality of William Gillette's play, with theatre-goers. Now the hero of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's wonderful detective stories appears on the screen and is portrayed in a most convincing and effective manner by Mr. Barrymore, whose work in this offering has been widely acclaimed as the best acting he has done for the silver sheet.

The film version closely follows the stage performance, which was based chiefly upon "A Scandal in Bohemia." The fight on the part of the famous detective to overcome Professor Moriarty, the evil genius who directs London's underworld, provides thrill after thrill, climaxing in a stirring fight in the dark from which the detective of course emerges victorious. It is a gripping picture and the interest never flags. The cast supporting Mr. Barrymore is one of the finest that has been gathered together. Roland Young appears as Dr. Watson and Carol Dempster as Alice Faulkner. Gusave Von Seyffertitz, whose work in "The Four Horsemen" was a feature of that production, scores heavily as the villainous Moriarty. The greater part of the film was photographed in London and there are some notable scenes. "Sherlock Holmes" is a notable film offering that should be seen by every movie fan.

The vaudeville acts are clean and clever. Florrine, piano accordianiste, was heard to great advantage in an offering of standard and popular music that is splendidly played, and she was recalled several times. The Ozaos had a comedy juggling act that was away above the average, both performers contributing some clever, acts while their funny patter added to the enjoyment.

A comedy picture rounded out a bill that was full of entertainment.

VOICE OF PEOPLE

POULTRY ASSOCIATION.

Editor Examiner:

Dear Sir—It is interesting to learn from the executive of the Poultry Association, Peterborough, that this year's activities have been one of the most enthusiastic and progressive in its history. The meetings were well attended, and instructive demonstrations were given. Asked the reasons for this, one reply was the people are getting behind the organization, and for that reason the poultry show to be held in January promises to be a record breaker. There are, I am informed from 15 to 16 silver cups to be competed for; one of the most interesting features is that a very nice silver cup has been presented by the members of the Fire Hall; and by the way, Fire Chief Gimblett is a poultry enthusiast, and an acquisition in that most thrify business poultry keeping. The committee are pleased the way the citizens get on to the prize list which, I believe, is likely to be a forty-page booklet this year. The association is to be congratulated upon this year's work, especially in bringing to Peterborough the government heads of the poultry section of the Agricultural Department of Ottawa, also the successful competitors who have been advertising Peterborough by sending birds to the different poultry shows throughout the province. The work of this association can be seen on the country roadside by the higher type of standard bred fowl. This association is doing much good work and deserves every encouragement.

MAY BE PREHISTORIC ANIMALS IN AFRICA

Untouched Eden For Game Might Reveal Thousands of Them.

LONDON, Dec. 5. — (Associated Press).—An untouched Eden in the mouth of a burned-out volcano in the heart of Africa, providing a place of refuge for thousands of animals, many of them possibly extinct in other parts of the world, is to be explored by scientists. The land forming the mouth of the volcano has been purchased by an Englishman who will organize an expedition to probe the secrets of the crater.

The volcano is the giant Ngoro Ngoro, the largest crater on this planet. The mouth is ten miles across, and a veritable paradise for wild animals. The Germans knew of it before the war, but kept its existence a secret.

There is a wild range of possibilities as to what a thorough exploration of the crater may bring forth. Prehistoric animals, believed to have perished from the earth thousands of years ago, may inhabit its caves and scientists hope to find live creatures of which only the skeletons have been discovered in other parts of the world.

The explorer photographer, T. A. Burnes, and Mrs. Frederick Dalziel, both of New York, were members of a party which recently made an expedition to the crater. They estimated that 75,000 animals inhabit this strange land. The crater, in fact, is a city of animals which have lived there for centuries, safe from attack. The steep sides of the volcano make a natural barrier against the outside world and there are few men, white or black, who have dared to penetrate the surrounding forests even to look into this paradise for animals.

GRECIAN COIFFURE

Winter coiffures are being copied effectively from ancient Greek headdresses The hair is parted at the center and knotted loosely at the back of the head. Bandeaux of flowers and leaves in silk or metal tissue contribute the distinctive touch.

CORSAGE

One of the loveliest corsages which deft fingers can evolve is a gorgeous six-petaled tiger lily of ribbon. The lily has two or three accompanying buds and leaves. It need not necessarily be developed in the colors natural to the "tiger". It may combine delicate shades of shell pink, Nile green pale blue mauve or yellow

FOR HIM

A morocco tie rack may possibly solve the Christmas problem of the woman at loss for something to give "him." It folds up compactly and may be slipped easily into drawer, trunk or traveling bag.

A SUGGESTION

To keep the wind-shield clear in rainy weather try rubbing a sliced onion over the glass, using an up-and down stroke. Be sure to coat the entire surface of the glass with th juice of the onion.

OBITUARY

CLARA A. HETHERINGTON

Ther passed away at 2.30 this afternoon at her home, 33 Jackson avenue, Clara Alice Hetherington, in her eighth year, youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Hetherington. Funeral announcement to-morrow.

MRS. MASSEY-COOKE.

The funeral of the late Mrs. Constance Mabel Massey-Cooke took place from St. John's church yesterday afternoon at 2.30.

Deceased leaves a sorrowing husband, Captain Edwin Massey Cooke, two daughters, Barbara and Betty, and two sisters, in England, to mourn her loss. She passed away very suddenly, at the age of forty-three, last Friday, at 7 p.m.

The late Mrs. Massey-Cooke was an ardent worker in St. John's church and for the last five years had been on the visiting committee of the Ladies' Auxiliary of the G. W.V.A. Her loss as a member of the Ladies' Auxiliary of the G.W.V.A. was indeed a great shock and her place will be one that will be extremely difficult to fill. She was one of the most willing and sympathetic workers with a cheerful smile and a willing hand in giving relief to all needy cases. There was never a returned soldier or his family refused help or assistance from the late Mrs Massey-Cooke, who had gained an enormous number of life long friends in the city.

In connection with the Ladies' Auxiliary she was pianist for the female voice choir and was associated with the Queen Alexandra Home and School Association. She was always willing to render her services for any worthy cause, and made it a regular practice to visit the sick in the hospitals every week.

Her smiling face, her cheerful word and her helping hand will be greatly missed by her many friends, as well as by the whole community.

Her body late in state in St. John's church from 10.30 Monday morning. The funeral service was conducted by Rev. R. C. Blagrave and the Rev. Connor-Fenton of Norwood, who was a personal friend of the deceased. The service was most impressive and the floral tributes were many. The coffin was completely covered with flowers, and on the body was a bouquet of roses from the husband and family, while a Ladies' Auxiliary of the G.W.V.A. badge was pinned on her breast by one of the oldest members of the Auxiliary and a co-worker with her for years.

Capt. Whatley honored the dead by covering the coffin with the Union Jack, a most unusual honour to be shown to a woman. Six veterans in uniform acted as pallbearers and accompanied the body to the grave at the Little Lake cemetery.

MONTHLY MEETING OF PATRIOTIC LEAGUE.

Endorses Proposed By-law for Purchase of Armour's Hill.

The Women's Patriotic League of Ashburnham held their regular monthly meeting last night at the home of Mrs. Peter Glover, 367 Mark street. A delegation was sent to the City Council to endorse the proposed by-law in connection with Armour's Hill for a park. After the delegates returned the business of the meeting was concluded and a social hour spent, when refreshments were served.

ROOM AND CONTENTS DAMAGED BY FIRE.

A fire last evening at 5.45 brought the local fire brigade to the residence of Mrs. Gordon Elliott, 230 George street. On the arrival of the firemen they found a bedroom and all the contents in flames. Mrs. Elliott stated that she had just left the house when the alarm was turned in. The damage was estimated at $100. The origin of the fire is unknown.

At 7.05 p.m. yeserday on alarm was received of a small fence fire on Lansdowne avenue, just west of Sacred Heart Church.

THE 57TH REGIMENTAL CHAPTER BAZAAR WILL BE HELD NEXT WEEK.

Child Welfare Is the Special Object of the Organisation.

The 57th Regimental Chapter of the I.O.D.E. (the mother of the Peterborough Chapters) as will be seen from advertisements in this week's Examiner issues, announce their annual bazaar and sale to be held in the recreation room of the Armouries on Wednesday, Dec. 6th, opening at 3 p.m. For many years to the fore in good works, this Chapter intends this year to give special attention to the assistance of the Peterborough Rangers and the Child Welfare work in this city.

Mrs. (Col.) Jos. Mills, the Regent, with valuable co-operation, has arranged a bazaar that will hold its own easily with those that have gone before. Mrs. Hounsell has beautifully decorated the room, providing the most necessary setting. The work table, which has entailed much arduous although pleasant labour, presents a most attractive appearance, being gaily set out with beautiful articles both useful and ornamental which at this season of the year will surely command a ready sale, under the able management of Mrs. Young. Mrs. McKee Bingham has really choice candy, Miss Revell home-made cooking and a novelty and handkerchief table, with Mrs. Hounsell in charge, completes the list of articles.

Mrs. Walker and Mrs. Hill will preside at afternoon tea. A musical programme convened by Mrs. Geo. Evans will be presented at intervals.

A cordial invitation to all is extended by the Regent and members of the Chapter.

Peace Conference May Decide on Conditional Freedom of the Dardanelles--Details of Project

CHANGE IN FRONT

LAUSANNE, Dec. 6—(Canadian Press).—Entente plan for keeping open Straits of Dardanelles and Bosphorus in times peace and war provides for appointment of international commission of control composed of great powers including United States as well as Turkey and countries bordering on Black Sea. Lord Curzon of Great Britain acting for the allies, present the details of this project. Change in front on part of Turkish delegates was forecast while conference in session. Turkish men spokesmen outside auditorium said Turkish position on control of Straits probably be found to be nearer to allied plan than to Russian.

Change of Turks is because suddenly they realize the Russian plan for control of the Straits by Turkish navy would force Turkey to build a navy. Allied control plan provides a scheme for limiting the number of warships to be allowed in waters under control and gives Turkey and Black Sea countries the right to say how long warships may remain in their ports. It suggests demilitarization of Straits. Foreign Minister Tchitcherin opposed the Allied plan to-day and the conference adjourned until Friday to give the Turks a chance to study the proposal.

THE WEATHER

To-day at noon the thermometer was down to 10 degrees, the lowest point this season, and a biting northwest wind gave a feeling reminiscent of an old time winter day. This cold spell is probably good for several days, as severe weather extends at present all over the west and north. To-morrow will be the first Thursday in December, and is believed by many (especially the older farmers of the country) to foretell the weather for the next three months. The weather conditions on that particular day, it is claimed, are the conditions that will generally prevail during the winter. This does not mean that there will not be occasional lapses, but it is believed the weather on the first Thursday of December, and especially the direction the wind blows on that day, will be closely followed for the following three months. Personally I do not see any particular reason for having any faith in such a Thursday (or any other day) but I have noticed from observation that the weather has an uncanny fashion of following in the lead of the first Thursday in Dec., March, June and Sept. There may be no scientific basis for such a belief, and it may be a mere coincidence, but it will do no harm to take notice what weather prevails to-morrow, and what generally follows this winter.—W. LOOKING FOR HUSBANDS FOR 150 HAREM LADIES.

Ex-Sultan's Household an Embarrassment of Which New Government Will Rid Itself.

CONSTANTINOPLE, Dec. 6.—Rafet Pasha is trying to find husbands for 150 members of the former Sultan's harem. The women range in age from 17 to 35 years. All of them are penniless.

Rafet also is anxious to solve the fate of the former monarch's numerous progeny, as well as that of twenty princes and princesses of the royal blood. Since the Sultan's flight the Nationalist Government has been supporting these women, in addition to 100 eunuchs and many servants. The Government now has decided that these people must shift for themselves.

Ladies of the harem who are able to find husbands will be permitted to remain in Constantinople, but the remainder of them will be sent to their homes in the interior. Most of the women are Circassians, and are described as "strikingly attractive."

"It ought not to be difficult to find husbands or helpmates for these women," said "a palace functionary. "They all were selected for their beauty, youth and figure. Most of them were gifts to the Sultan from Governors of the provinces. They have matchless complexions, dark eyes and long chestnut-colored hair. All of them are very religious, faithful and affectionate.

"Since their imperial master has left them without support we must find husbands for them, or they will starve. All they expect is a modest dowry. This, under our law, will be returned to the husband if he should desire to divorce the woman he marries."

POOL LICENSE IS SUSPENDED

Council Will Investigate Exit and Sanitary Facilities.

Tascho Lazaro's application for the renewal of his pool license has been withheld by the Council pending a detailed enquiry and report by Fire Chief Gimblett and Sanitary Inspector Stapleton. This action developed out of Ald. Gainey's reminder of the Council's intention, expressed several months ago, to investigate more carefully the local pool room conditions when the question of renewing their licenses next arose.

Applications were received from W. J. Welsh, G. N. Graham and Lazaroff, and with them three requests for eating house licenses from L. Yeotes, W. H. Suddards and Jim Hum. The pool room license forms carried the usual approval of Chief Newhall.

Ald. Gainey asked whether the Council purposed investigating the conditions of the Royal pool room with respect to fire exists and sanitary facilities as previously mentioned.

"It's a dugout", was Ald. Stocker's description.

Ald. Hamilton remarked that the police report was merely a form, and Ald. Phelan and Holloway raised the point of Lazaroff's lease and the loss he would suffer if his license was cut off.

"I'm willing to pass any license approved by the police", said Ald. Phelan. 'If we are to go into this so particularly we should look into all these premises."

Ald. Jones — We should satisfy ourselves that this is a fit and suitable place for people to get out of in case of fire. I don't know that the Chief of Police has anything to say on that point.

Ald. Hamilton moved that Lazaroff's application be left in abeyance until a triple inspection had been made by the City Engineer, Sanitary Inspector and Fire Chief, and that Lazaroff be permitted to carry on his business in the meantime. Ald. Gainey seconded it.

Ald. Phelan moved an amendment seconded by Ald. Holloway that Lazaroff's application be granted with the others.

The ayes and nays were asked for by Ald. Phelan and the following vote was registered in the minutes:—On the motion, Ayes—Ald. Turner, Jones, Hamilton, Stocker, Crowe, and Gainey. Nays—Ald. Phelan, Holloway, McIntyre and Morrison and the Mayor.

FIFTH ANNIVERSARY OF HALIFAX DISASTER.

Explosion That Snuffed Out Two Thousand Lives Recalled on Anniversary Date.

HALIFAX, Dec. 6.—(Canadian Press)—Five years ago to-day shortly before nine o'clock in the morning the Belgian Relief steamer "Imo" collided with the "Mont Blanc" heavy laden with the powerful explosive "TNT" in the narrows directly opposite the thickly populated Richmond section of the city. Followed a terrible explosion that a few moments snuffed out lives of nearly 2,000 people, blinded and maimed thousands more, rendered twenty thousand homeless and did property damage amounting to millions. Today little remains to remind one of that fatal December 6th, unless it may be offices of Halifax Relief Commission or an occasional meeting with sightless or crippled survivor. A new Halifax has sprung up.

One Dime Pays a Month's Rent

Here is one of the five houses near May's Landing, N. J., which are rented for ten cents a month—the record low rate in the United States. Here's the explanation: since "time immemorial" the families have occupied these houses and no rent was charged by the owner. Now a corporation has bought the land and to protect its title decided to charge a nominal rent.

TO CONSTRUCT SKATING RINK FOR THE P.C.I.

Board of Education Will Encourage Hockey For Both Boys and Girls This Season.

NEW TEACHERS

No comment whatever was made and no action taken by the Board of Education last evening on and resulting from the City Council turning down their request that a questionaire on the projected building for increased P.C.I. accommodation and provision for vocational training be submitted to the electorate at the January elections. This problem now probably remains for the incoming board to wrestle with, if any action at all transpires in the near future, as this board is not scheduled to meet again this year. There will be one other meeting, after the elections, when the financial statement for the year will be presented and acted on.

Old Time Social.

Queen Mary's Home and School Association invited the board to attend their old-time social next Friday, which invitation was generally accepted.

The King George Home and School Association being handicapped for want of adequate room for holding their meetings and social functions, pointed out in a communication the advantage which would acrue were it possible to connect two rooms by sliding doors.

Mr. Denne pointed out that even if feasible this work could not be done until next summer, but Mrs. W. R. Morris spoke in support of the request, and suggested that the chairman of the property committee inquire into the matter and report [illegible] feasibility.

On motion by Mrs. Morris and Mr. Denne, the property chairman will be so instructed.

Collegiate Hockey.

The board gave their property committee power to act on Principal H. R. H. Kenenr's representation of the advantages from an educational and physical standpoint were provision made for both boys and girls in the Collegiate Institute engaging in hockey this winter.

Mr. Kenner stressed the benefits derived by the 50 boys who indulged so heartily in football this year, deplored the lack of a gymnasium in which they might keep up altogether desirable physical exercise, and urged that a skating rink for students of both sex be constructed at the rear of the Institute. The initial cost would be small, he pointed out, while the lumber could be used other years.

E. B. Fowler was heartily in sympathy with the project and emphasized the fact that the school is fortunate in having teachers capable and willing to supervise the sport.

FOODLESS FOUR DAYS LINDENFELD GIVES UP.

Man Brought Back from Poland Breaks Ellis Island Hunger Strike With An Apple.

NEW YORK, Dec. 6.—Wolfe Lindenfeld, known also as William Linde, relaxed his hunger strike at Ellis Island long enough to eat an apple, the fourth day of his detention at Ellis Island, where he was brought from Poland for questioning as to his knowledge of the Wall Street explosion plot.

The keepers who offered Lindenfeld breakfast were met with a curt statement that he would not eat. At noontime after refusing luncheon Lindenfeld asked for some hard candy. There was not any, but he accepted an apple, which he ate slowly and topped it off with several cigarettes. His keepers expressed the fear that within a day or two he would collapse unless he took some nutritious food.

Officials at Ellis Island maintained their silence concerning Lindenfeld's case.

THE WAR VETERANS ELECTED OFFICERS

Harvey Staunton Was Re-elected For Another Year —De Laval Bylaw Endorsed.

Harvey Staunton, a former member of the 16th Battalion, C. E. F., and one of Canada's first contingent, was last evening re-elected president of the local branch of the C.W.V.A. Corporal Staunton filled this position last year and his re-election for the ensuing term was a tribute on the part of his comrades to the efficient and highly satisfactory manner in which he carried out his duties.

He will be assisted by the following officers: H. Duke, first vice-president; H. Graham, second vice-president; T. Waterhouse, sergeant-at-arms, and an executive committee composed of Dr. N. H. Sutton, Harold Burrows, Ian Murray, T. Guerin and P. McGroaty. The new officers will assume their offices at the New Year.

At the regular meeting of the Great War Veterans' Association a resolution was passed in which the association expressed themselves as heartily in support of the proposed fixed assessment of $50,000 for the De Laval Company.

Another resolution was also passed in which it was requested that when crimes are committed and the perpetrator is an ex-service man, the newspapers refrain from publishing the fact that he had seen service. This action was taken because it was felt that the public are inclined to judge the many by the faults of a very few and that by continually calling attention to the fact when former soldiers make a small slip the whole body of veterans suffers.

ASK FOR REFERENDUM ON THE SALE OF BEER.

Also on Light Wines in the Province of Manitoba.

WINNIPEG, Dec. 6.—(Canadian Press.)—Newspaper advertisements to-day indicated a petition would be submitted to the Manitoba government asking for a referendum on the proposed sale of beer and light wines in hotels. This is in addition to the request for a referendum on the government sale of liquor for beverage purposes.

ASKS ARREST IN GARNEAU MURDER CASE

L. G. Belley Demands Warrant for Apprehension of Henri Duval, Alias Casaubon.

CLEAR UP STORY

QUEBEC, Dec. 6. — (Canadian Press). — At the opening of the session of the Royal Commission investigating the murder of Blanche Garneau this morning, L. G. Belley, of Quebec, presented a motion calling upon the Government to have a warrant issued for the arrest of Henri Duval, alias Casaubon, on the charge of murdering the girl.

Aime Geoffrion, one of the lawyers for the Attorney-General's Department, remarked it was not opportune to issue such a warrant. In the case of Duval, said Mr. Geoffrion, there was a strong alibi and little chance of obtaining a verdict of guilty before a jury.

Armand Lavergne, K.C., counsel for John H. Roberts, strongly supported Mr. Belley's motion. He claimed the Attorney-General's Department did not want to punish the murderer of Blanche Garneau, and that was why the Government did not want to issue a warrant.

Eusbe Belleau, K.C., one of the lawyers for the general public, also expressed the belief that a warrant should be issued. The public, he said, wanted the whole Duval story cleared up.

BIRMINGHAM MOTORS SHAREHOLDERS APPROVE.

Will Turn Over Interests to the Projected Syndicate in Montreal.

Shareholders of Birmingham Motors, Limited, held another meeting last night in the Public Library, to consider the plan presented by Mr. T. R. Dubois for protecting their interests vested in the bankrupt company.

Mr. Dubois outlined his plan to a large number of shareholders present, and also submitted a report of the meeting of shareholders in Hamilton last Monday evening. Those others in the surrounding district, Mr. Dubois stated, are perfectly willing to co-operate with Peterborough people affected, to buy the several interests set aside for them in the $50,000 re-organisation syndicate.

Mr. A. E. Dixon who has been making investigations for the local shareholders ,presented a favourable report of the situation in Toronto and district.

The proceedings last night culminated in Peterborough shareholders voting unanimously in favour of $1.50 being paid on each share of Birmingham Motors stock held by them, to assist in securing the several interests of the $50,000 re-organisation syndicate.

A committee was appointed to handle this money before turning it over to the Montreal company, and to make sure that it is spent in the way outlined by Mr. Dubois.

The following men were appointed to act on the committee: Messrs. T. A. DeForge Roberts, and Bradley.

Mr. DeForge, who is chairman of the committee, will handle and collect all subscriptions made by the shareholders to purchase their interests in the syndicate.

BOARD DISPOSES OF A GRAND CIRCUIT DRIVER.

NEW YORK, Dec. 6.—(Canadian Press.)—National Trotting Association Board of Review yesterday expelled Vic. Fleming, widely known grand circuit driver of Dundas, Ont., for an indefinite period, for alleged misconduct in participating in racing while under suspension for previous violations of racing rules.

SUES TWO FOR DIVORCE IN THE SAME COURT.

Farmer's Daughter Isn't Sure Which One Is Her Legal Husband.

OWOSSO, Mich., Dec. 6. — Pretty June Woodman doesn't know whether she has one husband, two husbands, or none. The only thing she is certain of is that she went through marriage ceremonies with two men. In her perplexity she has appealed to the Circuit Court to determine if one or both ceremonies were legal and, if they were, to dissolve both of them.

June, the daughter of a Shiawassee County farmer, eloped with Gustaff Claerhout, to Windsors, in April, 1921. The day after their marriage she returned to her home. April 21 she sued for annulment of the marriage, but the case never came to trial.

Last fall she met John Harding, a Corunna youth. She succumbed to his court, agreeing to marry him as soon as she was legally free from Claerhout. Later, she says, Harding assured that an attorney had advised him that the fact that neither she nor Claerhout was a resident of Canada invalidated their marriage and that she was legally a single woman. Believing this, she married Harding September 27 last. He has since deserted her, she says.

Now June is in the pecular circumstances of suing two husbands for divorce at one time.

IRELAND TOOK A NEW STATUS

Has Now a Place Among the World's Commonwealths--Treaty Established.

DUBLIN, Dec. 6. — (Canadian Press.)—Ireland took her place today among the world's commonwealths. The Provincial government ceased to function and permanent Parliament and Cabinet of Irish Free State took its place. The new commonwealth was formally proclaimed an established government. There were no important demonstrations. Silence and restraint on the part of populace which has been noticeable throughout recent course of events, continued. New Irish postage stamps went into circulation to-day.

Freeman's Journal says Free State begins life under constitution of Irish manufacture and all intrigues to make trouble failed when it was realized the British Parliament could not change it without Ireland's consent. The much abused treaty has disestablished the domination of the British Parliament. Other Irish papers comment along similar lines.

TRAFFIC IS RESUMED ON THE GREAT LAKES.

SAULT STE. MARIE, Dec. 6. — (Canadian Press.)—Gales yesterday, which reached their worst about noon, died down before evening and traffic has been resumed. Ten vessels passed through the American canal eastbound and seven westbound. One westbound passed through the Canadian canal. There is no indication when traffic will close. About the same number of vessels on the lakes now as a year ago, but are about six million tons of general freight behind last year. Expect traffic will be continued as long as possible.

NICHOLLS SCHOLARSHIPS ARE WON BY 10 STUDENTS

Awards Will Be Presented at Collegiate Commencement Exercises to Be Held on Dec. 15 This Year

Principal H.R.H. Kenner of the local Collegiate Institute reported to the local Board of Education last night that the Institute's annual commencement exercises will be held on Friday, December 15, this year, instead of in the spring as heretofore. Commencing at 3 o'clock p.m. in the Collegiate's capacious hall, tea will be served to the graduating class and parents at 5 o'clock.

A feature of this coming function will be the presentation of the Nicholls scholarships. The names of the successful students and the amounts of their several cash awards are as follows:

UPPER SCHOOL
LEONARD GRIME, $12.00.
Wren Robertson, $8.00.
SENIOR MIDDLE SCHOOL
ROBERT FOWLER, $12.00.
JEAN KIDD, $8.00.
JUNIOR MIDDLE SCHOOL
WILLIAM BREYFOGLE, $12.00
SADIE STEELE, $8.00.
SENIOR LOWER SCHOOL
FORRESTER PARSONS, $12.00
BERTHA SANDERS, $8.00.
JUNIOR LOWER SCHOOL
HELEN STUART $12.00
MARGARET DENNE, $8.00.

The foregoing scholarships are based on marks earned at the departmental examinations last June.

Board of Education Emphasizes Fact That Defect Slips From Their Physician Do Not Constitute Authority for Professional Attendance

A DENTIST'S BILL

That the defect slips issued by Dr. A. W. McFherson to parents of children in the public schools are not authority for treatment at the Board's expense was made quite clear last night at the Board of Education's regular meeting, when the question of two accounts from a local dentist was raised. It appears that this dentist had no authority from the Board for giving his professional services in one of the cases and it was advanced that perhaps he and the little one's parents mistook their defect slip for an order for free dental treatment.

J. A. McKone wanted to know exactly what authority is needed, and Roland Denne replied that it was generally understood that the Board's Supervision Committee constitute the only authority for free medical or dental treatment of scholars. Should a poor family report to School Nurse Jory their inability to pay for treatment advised by School Physician McPherson, then the former is to report to the Supervision Committee, whose chairman may issue an order for treatment free of charge.

The Dental Association understands this, Mr. Denne and his colleagues agreed, but the dentist in this particular case is comparatively a new comer.

Mr. J. M. Greene—"No dentist should undertake any work claimed to be chargeable to the Board unless so notified by that body or its chairman of the Supervision Committee.

Many Examinations.

School Physician Dr. A. W. McPherson reported that during the first three months of this school year he had made 806 examinations, and issued 309 defect slips to parents of children, the majority of which slips were referred by the parents to their family doctor. The defections found included many of the minor ills to which flesh is heir to, such as defective teeth, enlarged tonsils, enlarged glands, round shoulders, skin disease and defective sight, with a few more serious cases, comprising heart trouble, goitre and malnutrition.

The report was received as satisfactory.

In this connection Mr. J. A. McKone enquired of Inspector A. Mowat if school attendance is favorably affected, and the health of scholars improved by this medical supervision.

Mr. Mowat replied that attendance has been good this year, but Dr. McPherson would be better able to reply as to the health phase of Mr. McKone's query.

J. M. Greene noted that school attendance last month did not compare favorably with that in September.

THE GOLDEN GATE BOHEMIANS SHY AT HIGH RENTS

San Francisco Landlords Cannot Emulate Property Owners in New York.

By ROBT. A. DONALDSON (United Press Staff Correspondent)

SAN FRANCISCO, Dec. 6 (United Press).—"I wouldn't know a high rent if I saw one," moaned the landlord of several structures in the Telegraph Hill district of San Francisco—commonly reputed to be the home of "Bohemia."

His remark was in reply to a question whether he had been able to emulate the landlords of Greenwich Village in New York City, who capitalized Bohemia to such an extent that rents were soared out of sight—in fact, way beyond the pockets of the Bohemians themselves, who were threatening to take their masterpieces that wouldn't sell and free verse that was too deep for shallow magazine editors, and emigrate to some other section of Manhattan Island.

"The trouble here is that the Bohemians are cheap," said the landlord. "When they want to starve in a garret, they want to pay a garret rent. Usually they starve for several months, and then go to work again, leaving art to struggle along without them. They get some money from a regular salary and move into a room somewhere else—usually up on Russian Hill, where they can put on a bit of dog, and have the same view of the Golden Gate, only be standing on a carpet at the time.

"Then the other class—the ones that have money—come down here for a time and paint rooftops, and the bay, and the sloppy children across the street or some Sicilian busy making his yearly wine on the back stoop, and then take all the canvasses and go down to Carmel-by-the-Sea for the winter, where they exhibit them, and toy with the teacups before a fireplace in comfort.

"These Bohemians in a few weeks get stuff strewn from one end of the place to the other, and besides that are slow in paying their rent. The writers are worse than the artists about paying their rent. The artists can always do a bit of commercial work, but masterpiece novels seem kind of a drug on the market but you can't get the authors to lay down their pens long enough to go out and write car ads. or something else that will bring in rent money. When the Bohemians leave, the place looks like a whirlwind had hit it—they don't dust from the time they get in to the time they get out.

"The trouble is, San Francisco's too much Bohemia—you find it everywhere—on the fringes of Nob's Hill, on Russian Hill, on Telegraph Hill, way out by the Ocean, and all over the hills back of Berkeley—not to speak of Carmel."

"DAREDEVIL" OF THE MOVIES TO QUIT; TOO OLD AT 29

Aching Bones Warn Slim Cole It's Time to Retire—Judged by All Standards of His Calling He's An Old Man.

CHICAGO, Dec. 6.—Nathan Cole Herbert of St. Louis is about to retire on account of old age.

He was 29 his last birthday.

Judged by all the stands of his calling he is an "old man" though one would travel far to find a more upstanding figure that that of the tall muscular and sun tanned Nathan Cole Herbert, better known to thousands of moving picture fans as "Slim Cole."

For the last seven years he has been a "daredevil" in motion pictures serials, and he has at least one broken bone to show for each year of service—possibly more, for he cannot remember exactly how many times he has been hurt.

Now he has returned to St. Louis, of which his grandfather, Nathan Cole, was once mayor and has resolved to ride no more on his "demon motorcycle", to climb no more rope ladders to airplanes, and to rescue no more heroines—after the picture which he is now making is finished.

Too Old for Business.

"I'm just getting too old for the business. I'm only 29, but I've been through a lot, and I don't want to wait for a physic hunch. My bones give me all the hunches I need. I have aches and pains wherever I have had breaks and these warn me that it is about time to quit. A daredevil must be in good physical shape to do his work well, especially in the serials, where the stunts must be the real thing or fall flat. You can't fool the serial fiend with camera tricks and substitutions."

Nathan Cole Herbert didn't start out in life as a movie daredevil. The opportunity to take up the fascinating pursuit came to him quite accidentally.

"I joined up as a forest ranger out in the San Bernardino mountains in Southern California," he said. "All the rangers were using horses to cover their patrols, but I got the idea I could do it just as well or better on a motorcycle. It was a mighty rough going, but I mastered the trick."

How He Broke In.

A couple of years of this sort of life hardened the young St. Louisan's muscles to the tenseness of steel and developed his perceptions and faculties so that he was considered to be a wonder man of the mountains, but he was unknown to fame until a moving picture company chose certain fastnesses of the San Bernardino range as "locations" for shots. Along came the young range rider on his motorcycle.

An astute motion picture director watched him as he rode seemingly impossible trails up and down and around the mountains. Before the day was over the motorcycle ranger had signed up to play a part in the picture then under way and at that instant Nathan Cole Herbert was transformed into "Slim Cole." The most difficult thing they made him do in that picture—"The Daughter of the Law"—was to jump over a chasm with his motorcycle. He was almost ashamed to take the money, he says, because little things like that had been part of his day's work as a ranger for nearly two years. This chasm was eighteen feet wide and 200 feet deep.

"Slim" stayed in the movies and when his intensive training had proceeded far enough to suit the exacting requirements of the films they took him to the top of Fremont's pass. The director showed him a chasm 35 feet wide and 400 feet deep.

A Real Thriller.

"Of course," said Slim, "the company carpenters helped me some. They built a runway of boards to take off from. This was carefully concealed so that it didn't get into the picture. In order to get over the chasm I had to hit up a speed of about ninety miles an hour to the jumpoff, keep perfect control of my machine while in the air and land right side up on the other side of the chasm.

"From the picture standpoint it was a great success. The film as the public saw it showed me going over and landing safely on the other side. What it didn't show was that after landing I had great difficulty in retaining control of the machine and finally got a bad spill and three broken ribs.

"One of the stunts I did with Miss Grace Cunard makes me shiver now when I think of it. The villain was feeling extra mean that day, and decided to give us a real race for life. With Miss Cunard on the rear seat of my motorcycle I was to ride down a narrow forge in the mountains. In a desperate effort to check our flight in a way that would call for the services of the coroner, the villain was to dislodge a huge bolder and send it rolling after us. There was not the least bit of faking in working out this stunt.

A Narrow Escape.

"We made that ride, but luck alone saved us. With all the speed I could put on, that boulder came thundering along behind us, getting closer all the time. Above the noise of the engine and the rushing boulder I could hear Miss Cunard laughing—actually laughing out loud, as if in great glee. It may have been hysteria, but I don't think it was. That boulder would have got us sure, but about two-thirds of the way down it hit some obstructions and went caroming off against a tree. It hit with such force that the boughs high up on the tree were actually broken off. This episode made a great hit with the fans, and I'll bet few of them realized that only the swerving of that boulder prevented two lives from being crushed out."

U. S. RELIEF GOODS REACHED SALONIKE

SALONIKI, Dec. 6.—(Associated Press).—One thousand tons of supplies for the relief of refugees from Turkey have been unloaded here recently, and will help care for the needy until the arrival of the American Red Cross shipments from the United States. The unloading was done under the direction of R. M. Davidson of Ashland, Kentucky, local representative of the Near East Relief.

At Kavalla a committee of American tobacco men have done heroic work in the distributing of refugee supplies.

At Dedeagatch Doctor W. V. M. Wright of Philadelphia is directing the American relief effort.

Although the world's average death rate is decreasing, the standard of physique is no better than it was 10,000 years ago.

NOTICE OF REGISTRATION OF BY-LAW

Notice is hereby given that a by-law was passed by the Council of the City of Peterborough on the 4th day of December, 1922, providing for the issue of debentures to the amount of $37,800.00, for the purpose of paying for the construction of a sewer on Park Street from King George to the Otonabee River, and that such by-law was registered in the registry office of the County of Peterborough on the 5th day of December, 1922. Any motion to quash or set aside the same or any part thereof must be made within three months after the first publication of this notice, and cannot be made thereafter.

RUMORS PROVED FALSE REGARDING GARNEAU MURDER

Iron-Clad Alibis Established By Two Prominent Young Men of Quebec.

NO JUDGMENT.

QUEBEC, December 6. Canadian Press. — The principal rumors which circulated in Quebec and other parts of the province after the murder of Blanche Garneau, two years ago, were laid low, and the names of the sons of prominent local men were cleared of all suspicions, and the honor of their families fully vindicated at the morning session of the royal commission which is investigating all the circumstances surrounding the crime committed in 1920.

Stories had persistently been circulated that the sons of Martin Madden, M.L.A., for Quebec West, and Arthur Paquet, M.L.A., for St. Sauveur, Quebec, were the authors of the murder.

By establishing perfect alibis before the commission this morning, Alexandre and Joseph Papuet and Magella Madden, the former the two sons of the Member for St. Sauveur, and the latter the son of the member for Quebec West, entirely disproved and destroyed all those stories, and were actually proclaimed innocent by one of the commissioners, Mr. Justice Robidoux, who stated that no judgment was necessary to prove that they had no connection whatever with the crime since the evidence was such that the general public could not fail to be convinced of their innocence.

The enquiry will proceed as the commissioners have been given the necessary power to investigate who may have been the actual murderers of the young girl, Blanche Garneau.

CANADIAN RYE BEST AT CHICAGO EXHIBIT

EMIGRATION HAS ATTENTION AGAIN

Matter of Emigration From England to the Dominion is Fully Discussed.

LONDON, December 6 (Canadian Press). — When questioned in the House of Commons yesterday regarding emigration matters, Capt. G. A. Ormsby-Gore, Under-Secretary to the Foreign Office, said he had presided that morning for the first time at a meeting of the Overseas Settlement Committee. He would do his utmost to accelerate the progress of the various Empire settlement schemes.

Capt. Gore said the policy of the Empire Settlement Act was regarded more as a constructive plan for developing the resources of the Empire and inter-Imperial trade than as a means of dealing with the present abnormal unemployment in Great Britain.

A member urged that in view of the shortage of man power in the Dominions the Empire settlement scheme should be made a central feature of thes development of the Empire's resources.

Captain Gore said he entirely agreed in regard to the emigration of women and juveniles. The matter would be pressed in every way possible, and would be submitted for consideration of the Imperial Economic Conference.

Replying o a question in regard to Earl Haig's statement at Manchester on December 1 that some ex-service men who had emigrated were now in distress, Capain Gore said the Earl had referred to emigration before the operation of the Land Settlement Act.

KU KLUXERS DENY INCENDIARY FIRES.

Thornton Says No Political Interference of Any Kind Either Direct or Indirect in Affairs of Canadian National Railways

New Head of National Railways Was the Guest of Honor at Montreal Board of Trade Banquet Held Last Evening.

PREMIER KING PROMISED FREEDOM.

MONTREAL, December 6 (Canadian Press). — "Let it be emphatically understood, now and for once and for all, that there is to be no political interference, direct or indirect, in the administration and working of the Canadian National Railways."

Speaking as the guest of honour at the banquet tendered him by the Montreal Board of Trade here last night, Sir Henry Thornton, newly appointed president of the Government-owned Railways of Canada, made the above emphatic declaration, adding that he could not put his position more forcibly without transgressing the rules of polite speech, "and if I knew of any words that would make this point more clear, I should unhesitatingly employ them."

He stated that the Right Hon. W. L. Mackenzie-King, Prime Minister of Canada, had solemnly assured him that there was to be no political interference, and that it was with that distinct understanding that he had accepted the post which the Government had offered him.

Sir Henry said that the din of battle and the clash of political arms led him to suspect that there were political disturbances going on in the land, "and I have reason to believe that something of the kind is going on at the moment, or has taken place during the last few days."

After referring in these terms to the recent Federal by-elections, in the course of one of which his appointment had been subjected to criticism, Sir Henry said that neither he nor any officer of the Canadian National Railways, had nor should have any concern with these periodical political disturbances, and that their job was to devote themselves entirely and with tranquility to rendering to the people of Canada an honest and efficient railway service.

In regard to sectional differences, he said that it would be him conscientious effort to meet the reasonable demands of all sections of the Dominion and contribute to the utmost to their development. But he pointed out that decisions would have to be made that would be distasteful to certain sections of the Dominion.

What Is Needed.

Sir Henry then stated "four factors which constitute the sum of successful railway administration." These were adequate net receipts, development of the property to meet the burdens of future traffic, relations between the railway and its men, and relations between the railway and its clientele. He hoped that the kindly feeling already existent between officers and men would be placed at that point from which "the Canadian National Railways can be most efficiently and consequently most economically worked."

An executive would be placed in each one of the grand divisions into which the property might be divided and his policy would be centralisation with respect to policies, decentralisation with respect to details.

The present objective was to stop the drain on the Canadian taxpayer, and to do this "our national railways must earn roughly $40,000,000 annually."

E. W. Beatty, K.C., president of the Canadian Pacific Railway, and Sir Henry's railway rival, proposed the health of the guest of the evening, and said that in the larger problems concerned with the relationship of all companies to the public they served, "I am confident that the officers of the Canadian Pacific and National Railways can work in substantial accord to the mutual advantage of their respective companies and the public."

Mr. Beatty added that he would like to assure Sir Henry and to "make the assurance now before he proceeds farther, to portions of the country where the people are just as estimable but probably less free from prejudice than those of Montreal ,and therefore more likely to endeavour to poison his mind with suspicion than in the solution of common problems, he may be assured of frankness and candour and an honest expression of opinion and desire to co-operate on the part of officers of the Canadian Pacific Railway Company."

Sir Joseph Flavelle, late chairman of the board of directors of the Grand Trunk Railway, one of the constituent items of the present national system, referred to the announcement of the Hon. W. C. Kennedy, Minister of Railways, that the National system should be "administered without fear or favour, without thought of politics, and in the general interests."

Sir Joseph remarked that his was satisfactory, but stated that frankly he had seen no evidence of its observance.

William Birks, president of the Board of Trade of Montreal, acted as chairman of the banquet.

Bootleggers Hire Own Bodyguards

NEW YORK, December 6. Canadian Press. — Bootleggers of New York, whose stuffed currency pockets and diamond covered cravats attracted the attention of bandits, are surrounding themselves with corps of armed guards, and move about in constant fear of assassin's guns, the police have been told.

Two men, Michael Florentino and Joseph Viola, arrested recently charged with carrying concealed weapons, said that they were employed as body guards by wealthy bootleggers, whose various alcoholic concoctions were bringing to them great amounts of money.

Low-type criminals, they said, were turning their hold up, sandbag and gunning efforts toward the bootleggers, because they knew that the hauls were always big.

CUBA HAS ANOTHER VOODOO MYSTERY

Little White Girl Who Was Stolen is Believed to Have Been Offered Up as a Sacrifice.

CAMAGUEY, Cuba, Dec. 6.—(Associated Press)—Failure to discover any trace of Cuca Lisea, the little white girl who was stolen by a negro from the thatched hut of her parents on Yamaqueyes plantation, near Santa Cruz del Sur, early in November has given rise to another voodod sensation.

Nobody doubts that the child has been sacrificed on a rude jungle altar to some gruesome African Moloch, and fantastic tales are being told of the secret practices of one of the three Haitien negroes who, with two Cuban blacks, are under arrest as suspects in the kidnapping mystery. The unrest has been increased by the publication of reports from Palmira that the ignorant population of that district is terrified by evidences of the power of negro sorcerers. Those with doctors are protected in their rites, it is charged, by political elements who, in return, claim their support at the polls.

COUNCIL SIX NATIONS MET THIS MORNING.

Discussed Behind Closed Doors —Terms Laid Down by Hon. Stewart.

BRANTFORD, Dec. 6.—(Canadian Press)—The Six Nations council of chiefs met at Ohsweken and discussed behind closed doors terms laid down by Hon. Charles Stewart, Superintendent General of Indian Affairs at the conference here yesterday. An announcement made at noon says the terms in so far as they applied to the appointment of a British subject only as representative of the Six Nations, on an investigation committee to inquire into the finances of the Six Nations, would be accepted, and the decision reached would be accepted as binding. George P. Decker of Syracuse, against whom Hon. Mr. Stewart protested yesterday, was present at the council meeting Tuesday morning.

TERRIFIC STORM.

OGDENSBURG, N.Y., Dec. 6. — (Canadian Press.)— Navigation on the St. Lawrence River was virtually suspended yesterday when a 60-mile north-west gale swept the river and north country. Two hundred passengers were marooned here and at Prescott, ferries being held in port until the storm had abated.

The steel ice-breaker Marquette, and Bessemer No. 1, of Cleveland, loaded with 2,200 tons of structural steel, was floated yesterday after being aground in Coteau Lake in the Lower tS. Lawrence since last Tuesday.

KILLED IN AUTO.

SHERBROOKE, Que., Dec. 6.—(Canadian Press)—Amedee Dupont, of Garthby, was instantly killed when his automobile turned turtle about a half mile outside the village. Two companions, Paul Gosselin and H. Early were also injured, the former still being in a critical condition.

SEIZE AMMUNITION.

LIVERPOOL, Dec. 6.—(Canadian Press)—Local police seized large quantities of rifles, ammunition and explosives discovered on ships sailing for Southern Ireland.

STRINGENT RULES RE SHIPMENT OF CATTLE.

To Be Examined Daily on Board Ship to See if Disease-Free.

LONDON, Dec. 6.— (Canadian Press)—The bill for the removal of the Canadian cattle embargo now before Commons provides that store cattle from Canada may be landed in Great Britain without being requiered to be dealt with and slaughtered in accordance with provisions of diseases of the animals act, if the cattle be shipped from Canadian ports and isolated three days before shipment and thoroughly examined to see that they are free from disease. Stringent regulations are laid down in the bill with regard to the condition vessels used for the purpose of carrying cattle, and separation of the animals during the voyage. Cattle are to be examined daily on board ship to see they continue free of disease. They must be landed at a port approved of by the authorities and isolated for a long enough period to enable veterinary inspectors to thoroughly examine them and issue licenses for the removement forward to their destination.

TIRED LAND BIRDS FIND HAVEN AT SEA

Thousands Sought Safety on Decks of the Cunard Liner Scythia.

LIVERPOOL, Dec. 6.—(Associated Press).—Thousands of American land birds, blown out to sea by unfavorable winds, sought safety on the decks of the Cunard liner Scythia on her last trip from New York, and stayed on board until she docked in Liverpool. When misfortune overtook the feathered travellers they were migrating, probably from the north Atlantic States to the warm lands bordering on the Caribbean. Now many of them again are free, but in England, thousands of miles from their destination, and those who were supposed to be wise in bird lore have not yet been able to give satisfactory answers to the questions of interested passengers as to whether the birds would still endeavor to reach their summer haunts in the West Indies, or join the robins and linnets of England in their winter flight to Southern France and Northern Africa.

The great flock, several thousand in number, settled on the Scythia's decks when the steamer was about 400 miles from the American shore, and transformed her into a floating aviary. Wild canaries, robins, linnets, thrushes, sand pipers and juncos fluttered around the decks, perched on the rigging, and even penetrated the lounges and engine room. The passengers and crew cared for them, giving them warmth, food and shelter, but even so many of the smaller birds died from exhaustion. Three owls and a score of pigeons were easily captured.

Old sea travellers say they never have known birds to alight before in such large numbers on a single ship.

CAPT. HENRY, PETERBORO HAS RETURNED HOME

Landed At St. John On Board C. P. Liner Melita.

An officer on the Melita was Captain C. A. Henry of Peterborough, Ont., who is returning to his home after almost eight years of active service.

The Canadian Pacific liner Melita has arrived from Antwerp via Havre and Southampton.

On board the liner this trip there was also Brig.-Gen. Garnet Hughes, C.M.G., D.S.O., a son of the late Sir Sam Hughes, who is returning to Canada from France and Belgium after being there in connection with the Canadian war memorials for the last two years.

IRISH BILL WAS SIGNED BY KING IS NOW A LAW

All the Ancient Ceremony Followed in Obtaining the Royal Assent--Healy is Declared Governor-General.

Proclamation To-Day.

LONDON, Dec. 6. — (Canadian Press).—The Irish Constitution became the law of the land yesterday when, following the ancient ceremony of responding to a summons from "The Black Rod", the Speaker of the House of Commons headed a procession of the members of the Lower House to the Upper Chamber of parliament to hear the King's assent to the two Irish Bills—the Constitution and the Consequential Provisions Bill —read by a royal commission

Immediately after the ceremony announcement was made of the appointment of Timothy Healy, a native born Irishman, famous as a parliamentarian and lawyer, as the first Governor-General of the Irish Free State.

The entire ceremony took only a few minutes. The Constitution Bill had passed both Houses of Parliament unanimously and unamended. The Consequential Provisions Bill had been subjected to minor amendment in the Upper Chamber, but those were agreed to by the Lower House.

As the procession was returning to the House of Commons from the House of Lords some strangers in the lobby of Parliament House began singing, "The Red Flag." They were promptly elected by the police.

King George will make a special journey from Sandringham to-day to hold a Privy Council in Buckingham Palace, at which he will sign a proclamation declaring the adoption of the Irish Constitution by the British and Irish Parliaments. The Constitution will come into operation immediately on the issue of the proclamation.

BACHUS BUYS PULP.

PORT ARTHUR, Ont., Dec. 6.—(Canadian Press), Reports are current in local pulp and paper circles that E. W. Bachus has purchased the supply of pulp on Isle Royle. The island, although only 45 miles from Port Arthur, forms that part form Port Arthur, forms that part of the territory of the state of Michigan and Mr. Bachus is reported as having gone direct to the State officials. Confirmation of the report is not available in Port Arthur.

UNITED STATES HAS A HIGH TAX RATE.

NEW YORK, December 6. Canadian Press. — One-sixth of the national income of the United States went into taxes in 1921, according to a report which has just been isued by the National Industrial Conference Board.

"The tax bills in the United States is fast making inroads on the surplus necessary for economic progress," the report declared, and threatens materially to hamper our growth, especially in view of the interrupted rise in local government's taxes."

According to the report, the United Kingdom stands first in the burden of taxes, with the United States second; Germany comes third and France fourth on the list.

LIBERALS WILL NOT SUPPORT BRACKEN

Manitoba Liberals Are Sore Because Two of Their Number Were Discharged From Government Positions.

WINNIPEG, Dec. 6.—(Canadian Press)—Liberal, support of the Bracken administration which was outlined in a statement issued by Hon. T. C. Norris, soon after the election last July, is in danger of being withdrawn, according to an article in the Free Press.

This action, the paper states, is a concrete method of voicing criticism of some of the Bracken administration.

Two particular cases have been stressed. The discharge of Colonel J. G. Rattray, former head of the Provincial Police and the relieving of G. A. Gilroy of his position as head of the government liquor dispensary at Portage LaPrairie.

The latter action taken in the interest of economy, according to the government statement is not in keeping, Liberals said, with needless increases in salary.

PORT WILL BE TURNED OVER TO CHINA TO-DAY.

TEINSTSIN, China, Dec. 6.—Reports reaching here say that Chinese bandits have taken control of Tsingtao, Shantung, the Kiaochow port whose stormy career in war and diplomacy was to culminate in its return to China after twenty four years of alien rule, first sixteen under Germany and last eight under Japan. Population is reported fleeing from the city.

CLEVELAND, Dec. 6.—(Canadian Press).—Dr. Charles, aged 78, known as king of Canadian organists, died here. He was president of Windsor College and Conservatory of Music.

BARGES WRECKED ON ONEIDA LAKE IN A TERRIFIC STORM

Three of a Fleet of Five Are Total Wrecks and No Trace Has Been Found of the Other Two.

CARRYING WHEAT.

UTICA N.Y., Dec. 6.—(Canadian Press).—Five barges carrying 60,000 bushels of wheat were caught in a terrific wind storm on Oneida Lake, off Lewis Point late yesterday afternoon and are apparently lost with all the cargo. The boats are the property of the Inland Marine Corporation of New York City.

Three of the vessels were washed ashore at Verona Beach near the scene of a similar accident a fortnight ago and the other two were reported drifting toward Sylvan Beach. Efforts were being made by life savers to rescue four of the crew.

ONEIDA N.Y., Dec. 6—(Canadian).—Three barges of a fleet of five scattered by a storm on Lake Oneida yesterday afternoon, are stranded on a sandbar five hundred feet off shore with crew of the tug Waterport of Syracuse attempting to get a line to two members of the barge fleet crew who are still aboard No trace has been found of the other two boats.

The barges were in tow of the steam canal boat Martin Glynn, commanded by Captain Fred Clark of Buffalo, bound from Buffalo to New York with a cargo of grain. The fleet entered the lake with threatening weather at 10 o'clock this morning. The storm struck at four o'clock

MAY REPORT DELORME TO BE QUITE SANE.

Superintendent of Beauport Already Expresses Opinion to This Effect.

QUEBEC, Dec. 6.— (Canadian Press)—Superintendent of Beauport asylum, where Rev. Adelard Delorme is interned, announced the probable application to Lieutenant Governor to request a report by the superintendent on Abbes condition. The superintendent has already expressd his opinion that Abbe is sane and in event of confirming this opinion the next step will be to ask for an expert commission to study the mentality of the patient.

A BYLAW THAT SHOULD CARRY.

The ratepayers of Peterborough are to be given an opportunity at the January elections of authorizing the purchase of Armour's Hill for park purposes, and in the best interests of the city the measure should be carried.

It is, of course, not a good time for spendinng bylaws.

The fate of a large number of such bylaws in Ontario municipalities where voting took place on Monday indicates a widespread desire for a period of retrenchment.

The high cost of municipal administration and the steadily growing tax rate and assessment have made the ratepayers reluctant to endorse any measure that involves further expenditure.

That feeling is not difficult to understand, and on the whole it is a healthy sign.

But there is such a thing as false economy, of carrying the policy to a degree that is illogical.

When a chance is presented of securing a property such as Armour's Hill, admirably adapted in its location and other advantages for conversion into a park of which the city might well be proud, the people cannot afford to allow their anxiety for retrenchment to blind them to the desirability of adding this property to Peterborough's park system before it passes into other hands and is lost for all time.

The amount involved is not large enough to be noticeable in the tax bills, and in this instance at least the ratepayers should have no hesitation in endorsing the purchase.

TOO MUCH PUSSYFOOTING.

With nomination day little more than two weeks away, Peterborough aspirants for municipal honours are even more coy than usual in declaring themselves.

That there will be an election for the mayoralty the curbstone prophets are firmly convinced.

While the Examiner does not want to force anybody into the field, it cannot help expressing its conviction that if the usual custom of allowing a mayor a second term by acclamation is to be departed from on this occasion it is in the public interest that the fact that there is to be a contest should be known as soon as possible.

There is general lamentation over the refusal of the electors to take a keen interest in municipal elections.

For that condition of affairs municipal candidates are themselves largely to blame.

There is too much pussyfooting about the annual campaign, too much hesitancy and secrecy, and behind the scenes there are manoeuvres and negotiations and juggling that continue until nomination day.

A man who believes that he is capable of good service on behalf of his fellow-citizens in a municipal office, who is willing to accept the responsibility and to give the best that is in him for the civic welfare should have no hesitation in declaring himself a candidate—yet most aspirants hang back until the last possible moment.

No wonder the public is slow to respond when the composition of the field is at last revealed.

EARLIER ELECTIONS.

From the municipalities who took advantage of recent legislation to hold their annual elections on the first Monday in December rather than in January, the report comes that the experiment has been a gratifying success.

The change was made in the hope that it would result in the polling of a larger vote and in increased interest in the selection of municipal rulers.

These results have been achieved in a large measure.

Guelph reports that the setting of the date of polling a month ahead has been fully justified.

The vote polled was 20 per cent. larger than for several years and keener interest was displayed.

In Kingston it is announced the vote was much bigger than that polled last New Year's Day.

These returns should be of interest locally, for the comparatively small percentage of votes registered in municipal elections here indicates that New Year's Day as a date for the annual contests has not proven the success anticipated when it was selected.

Theoretically a holiday should be the ideal day for voting, but a thorough trial has shown the reverse to be the case.

By adopting the early-in-December plan the campaign does not interfere with Christmas business, nor does the voting conflict with holiday festivities, and from the experience of the municipalities who have been the pioneers in the movement the shift seems to be worth careful consideration.

Any policy that would shake the electors out of their apathy and make them see that the selection of capable civic legislators is a paramount duty should commend itself.

COME TO WRONG PLACE.

A correspondent is alarmed over the report that the Ku Klux Klan intends to invade Canada, and appeals to us to dip our pen in "nitric acid" in writing against the menace, says the Hamilton Spectator. We do not think, however, there is any reason for so much excitement. It is true that the Klan is a thing to be combatted by all lovers of law and order, and that bigotry and spite should have no place in the lives of the law-abiding citizens of Canada. But for that very reason, it is not necessary to become unduly perturbed by the activities of the agents of this secret organization. The people of Canada have an innate respect for authority, and have an efficient administration to watch over the enforcement of the laws. There is no need in this country for self-appointed censors and judges, and there will not be many recruits to the ranks of the bogey-men from among the people of Canada. Such ridiculous proceedings are foreign to the national mentality, and no movement so founded will gain much headway in this country.

Nevertheless, the authorities should keep a sharp eye on the organizers. We have cranks enough without permitting the recruiting sergeants of this preposterous organization to get busy with their secret propaganda. If these self-constituted critics of morals and opinions were to exercise their reforming zeal on the legitimate work of improving governmental methods, trying, by constitutional means, to advance the high purposes they claim to have at heart, they might possibly be an asset instead of a nuisance. Operating as they do, according to their own sweet will, and with a very prejudiced outlook on things in general, they cannot be welcomed in any decent, self-respecting society.

PASSING THE BUCK.

The decision of the City Council in regard to the Northern Ontario Fire Relief Fund is a compliment o their business instinct rather than a revelation of largeness of heart.

From one viewpoint the Aldermen, of course, are on sound ground.

The task of restoring conditions in the fire area to something approaching their former status should be assumed by the Provincial Government.

The Examiner has taken that position from the beginning.

But the difficulty is that when a delegation of municipal representatives, of which Mayor Taylor was a member, toured the stricken district and discussed the question of ways and means with the Relief Committee and Premier Drury, they, after hearing Mr. Drury declare that the raising of the money should be undertaken by the municipalities, accepted the responsibility on behalf of their municipalities and went home to wait a notice from the committee as to the amount they would be expected to provide.

The deputation, if it was convinced that the Government should handle this most vital matter, should have made its stand then and there.

If the representatives had informed the Premier and the committee that they flatly refused to accept a responsibility that they consider was a Provincial one, the situation would have been clear.

But they agreed upon the plan advocated by Mr. Drury and left for their respective cities with the mutual understanding that the quota asked for would be raised.

Now the majority of their cities are repudiating the agreement by taking no action to implement the verbal assurances given during the conference.

It is not a very elevating exhibition this game of passing the buck when fellow-beings are facing a Northland winter without proper shelter and the other necessaries of life.

GOVERNMENT BY MINORITIES.

Denouncing "America, the Backslider," John Jay Chapman says in The Spectator: "America is a land where active, well-drilled minorities seize sudden power and pass drastic legislation, as in the case of the liquor law—a land where doctrines are fanatically trusted and crass remedies gain acceptance, where the total will of the people is apt for six months to be focussed upon some abstraction, as, for instance, on free speech, or on the suppression of free speech, or on some aspect of Turkish atrocities or of Indian rights. America is the playground of the agitator, and our education is so rudimentary that we are the dupes of clever Europeans of all varieties."

This is truth itself. But are we certain that the language does not in degree apply to Canada? No other country in the world has so many laws to the square acre as has the United States and no other people have such faith in the omnipotence of legislation. A few excited crusaders can drive Legislatures as chaff is driven before the wind and even stampede Congress itself. The fever passes, but the law remains unobserved and dishonored.

It is as clear as can be that the United States was not ready for such extreme liquor legislation as the Volstead Act represents. But in a time of high emotional fervor politicians were intimidated and the position of the extremists fortified by a Constitutional amendment. To repeal such an amendment is almost an impossibility, while to enforce the law is only less difficult. It has always been assumed that sumptuary legislation to be effective must be supported by a dominant public opinion. In many of the States, however, as the Congressional elections have demonstrated, no such opinion exists and apparently the Administration at Washington is greatly concerned to find means of enforcing the law in communities which demand repeal or radical modification of its provisions.

Substantially, the demand for modification means that Congress shall deliberately defy and practically set aside a Constitutional amendment. It is asked to do exactly what would be done if Congress should decree a partial restoration of slavery in the South. Flagrant violation of a particular law brings all law into contempt and dishonors a whole people. No one can desire that the saloon which for generation was a social curse and a political tyranny should be restored, but surely it passes the wit of man to discover how a law which affects only the habits of a people, and practices which are not criminal, can be enforced. Multitudes of people were driven by fervid moral appeals and inflammatory speaking and writing into voting for restrictions upon their personal freedom for which they were not ready and which they will not observe and now find themselves in a situation from which it is difficult if not impossible to extricate themselves.

The lesson is that in the United States as elsewhere the majority too easily surrenders to organized minorities. The voice which cries most loudly in the streets is the voice that prevails. Dr. Hearnshaw, in "Democracy at the Cross Roads," examining what he describes as the inevitable evils of the group system in government, says: "In place of a homogeneous majority you behold a conspiracy of concurrent minorities; instead of government in accordance with public opinion and the general will you have a government controlled by a combination of sectional fanaticisms. The preventive of log-rolling is the two-party system; and if only the two patriotic national parties can be constituted on any basis and can be kept healthy and pure by a sound public opinion and the existence of a strong, independent electorate, no more is needed."—Montreal Star.

GILSON PIPELESS FURNACE

Let Me Show You This New and Better Furnace

IT will cost you less than any other efficient heating system. And I'm convinced. I can show you many features of superiority.

I'm enthusiastic about this Gilson Pipeless Furnace. It can be installed in any home, old or new, in less than a day. Only a small cellar is needed.

Instead of using dusty stoves that only heat one or two rooms and waste a lot of fuel, have the whole house heated cosily with moist, warm air. The Gilson Pipeless Furnace will soon pay for itself in the fuel it saves.

Get in touch with me and I'll show you for how little money you can have your home heated properly by this modern heating system.

WHO BEGIN HERE TODAY

Who had shot and killed the no'er-do-well ROBERT ABLETT, within two minutes after his arrival at The Red House, the country estate of his wealthy bachelor brother.

MARK ABLETT? Robert's body was on the floor of the locked office. Mark was not to be found and, in the opinion of Police Inspector Birch, it was clear that Mark, who had looked forward with annoyance to Robert's return from a 12-year stay in Australia, had shot him and then disappeared.

But there were mysterious circumstances. The shot was fired a few moments before

ANTONY GILLINGHAM, gentleman adventurer and friend of BILL BEVERLEY, one of Mark's guests, had entered the hall where he found

MATT CAYLEY, Mark's constant companion, pounding on the door and demanding admittance. The two men enter the room through a window and find the body.

Mysterious circumstances puzzle Antony. He and Bill investigate and Antony discovers that a secret passage leads from the house to a bowling green. Antony discovers Cayley using this to overhear a conversation between him and Bill.

GO ON WITH THE STORY

Antony wanted to shout his applause. It was neat, devilish neat. For a moment he gazed, fascinated, at that wonderful new kind of croquet-ball which had appeared so dramatically out of the box, and then reluctantly wrigled himself back. There was nothing to be gained by staying there, and a good deal to be lost, for Bill showed signs of running down. As quickly as he could Antony hurried round the ditch and took up his place at the back of the seat. Then he stood up with a yawn, stretched himself and said carelessly, "Well, don't worry yourself about it, Bill, old man. I daresay you're right. You know Mark, and I don't; and that's the difference. Shall we have a game or shall we go to bed?"

Bill looked at him for inspiration, and, receiving it, said, "Oh, just let's have one game, shall we?"

"Right you are," said Antony.

But Bill was much too excited to take the game which followed very seriously. Antony, on the other hand, seemed to be thinking of nothing but bowls. He played with great deliberation for ten minutes, and then announced he was going to bed. Bill looked at him anxiously.

"It's all right," laughed Antony. "You can talk if you want to. Just let's put 'em away first, though."

They made their way to the shed, and while Bill was putting the bowls away, Antony tried the lid of the closed croquet-box. As he expected, it was locked.

"Now then," said Bill, as they were walking back to the house again, "I'm simply bursting to know. Who was it?"

"Cayley."

"Good Lord! Where?"

"Inside one of the croquet-boxes."

"Don't be an ass."

"It's quite true, Bill." He told the other what he had seen.

"But aren't we going to have a look at it?" asked Bill in great disappointment. "I'm longing to explore. Aren't you?"

"Tomorrow and tomorrow and tomorrow. We shall see Cayley coming along this way directly. Besides, I want to get in from the other end, if I can. I doubt very much if we can do it this end without giving ourselves away . . . Look, there's Cayley."

They could see him coming along the drive toward them. When they were a little closer, they waved to him and he waved back.

"I wondered where you were," he said, as he got up to them. "I rather thought you might be alone this way. What about bed?"

"Bed it is," said Antony.

Bill left the rest of the conversation, as they wandered back to the house, to Antony. He wanted to think. There seemed to be no doubt now that Cayley was a villain. Bill had never been familiar with a villain before. It didn't seem quite fair of Cayley, somehow; he was taking rather a mean advantage of his friends. Lot of funny people there were in the world—funny people with secrets. Look at Tony, that first time he had met him in a tobacconist's shop.

But what on earth had Miss Norris got to do with it?

Miss Norris, who had proposed to catch an after-dinner train at the junction, in the obvious hope that she might have in this way a dramatic cross-examination at the hands of some keen-eyed detective, was encouraged tactfully, but quite firmly, to travel by the earlier train with the others.

Why?

Well, that question was not to be answered off-hand. But the fact that it was so had made Antony interested in her. By sheer luck, as it seemed to him, he had stumbled on the answer to his question.

Miss Norris was hurried away because she knew about the secret passage.

HE MADE A POLITE APOLOGY FOR DISTURBING HER.

The passage, then, had something to do with the mystery of Robert's death. Miss Norris had used it in order to bring off her dramatic appearance as the ghost. Possibly she had discovered it for herself; possibly Mark had revealed it to her secretly one day, never guessing that she would make so unkind a use of it later on; possibly Cayley, having been let into the joke of the dressing-up, had shown her how she could make her appearance on the bowling-green even more mysterious and supernatural. One way or another, she knew about the secret passage. So she must be hurried away.

Why? Because if she stayed and talked, she might make some innocent mention of it. And Cayley did not want any mention of it.

Why, again? Obviously because the passage, or even the mere knowledge of its existence, might provide a clue.

"I wonder if Mark's hiding there," thought Antony; and he went to sleep.

CHAPTER X

ANTONY came down in a very good humor to breakfast next morning, and found that his host was before him. Cayley looked up from his letters and nodded.

"Any word of Mr. Ablett—of Mark?" said Antony, as he poured out his coffee.

"No. The inspector wants to drag the lake this afternoon."

"Oh! Is there a lake?"

There was just the flicker of a smile on Cayley's face, but it disappeared as quickly as it came.

"Well, it's really a pond," he said, "but it was called 'the lake.'"

"By Mark," thought Antony. Aloud he said, "What do they expect to find?"

"They think that Mark—" He broke off and shrugged his shoulders.

"May have drowned himself, knowing that he couldn't get away? And knowing that he had compromised himself by trying to get away at all?"

"Yes; I suppose so," said Cayly slowly.

He added dryly, "From what I've read of detective stories, inspectors always do want to drag the pond first."

"Is it deep?"

"Quite deep enough," said Cayly as he got up. On his way to the door he stopped, and looked at Antony. "I'm so sorry that we're keeping you here like this, but it will only be until tomorrow. The inquest is tomorrow afternoon. Do amuse yourself how you like till then."

"Thanks very much. I shall really be quite all right."

Antony went on with his breakfast. Perhaps it was true that inspectors liked dragging ponds, but the question was, Did Cayley's like having them dragged? Was Caley anxious about it, or quite indifferent? He certainly did not seem to be anxious, but he could hide his feelings very easily beneath that heavy, solid face.

Bill came in noisily—

Bill's face was an open book. Excitement was written all over it.

"Well," he said eagerly, as he sat down to the business of the meal, "what are we going to do this morning?"

"Not talk so loudly, for one thing," said Antony.

Bill looked about him apprehensively. Was Cayley under the table, for example? After last night one never knew.

"Is—er—" He raised his eyebrows.

"No. But one doesn't want to shout. One should modulate the voice, my dear William, while breathing gently from the hips. Thus one avoids those chest-notes which have betrayed many a secret. In other words, pass the toast."

"You seem bright this morning."

"I am. Very bright. Cayley noticed it. Cayley said, 'Were it not that I have other business, I would come gathering nuts and may with thee. Fain would I gyrate round the mulberry-bush and hop upon the little hills.'"

"It's a touch of the sun, I suppose," said Bill, shaking his head sadly.

"It's the sun and the moon and the stars, all acting together on an empty stomach. Do you know anything about the stars, Mr. Beverley? Do you know anything about Orion's Belt, for instance? And why isn't there a star called Beverley's Belt? Said he mastlessly. Re-enter W. Beverley through trap-door."

"Talking about trap-doors—"

"Don't," said Antony, getting up. "Some talk of Alexander and some of Hercules, but nobody talks about—what's the Latin for trap-door? Mensa—a table; you might get it from that. Well, Mr. Beverley"—and he slapped him heartily on the back as he went past him—"I shall see you later. Cayley says that you will amuse me, but so far you have not made me laugh once. You must try and be more amusing when you have finished your breakfast. But don't hurry. Let the upper mandibles have time to do the work." With those words Mr. Gillingham then left the spacious apartment.

Bill continued his breakfast with a slightly bewildered air. He did not know that Cayley was smoking a cigaret outside the windows behind him; not listening, perhaps; possibly not even overhearing; but within sight of Antony, who was not going to take any risks. So he went on with his breakfast, reflecting that Antony was a rum fellow, and wondering if he had dreamed only of the amazing things which had happened the day before.

Antony went up to his bedroom to fetch his pipe. It was occupied by a housemaid, and he made a polite apology for disturbing her. Then he remembered.

"Is it Elsie?" he asked, giving her a friendly smile.

"Yes, sir," she said, shy but proud. She had no doubts as to why it was that she had achieved such notoriety.

POLICE SEEK THE OWNER OF DRUGS.

OTTAWA, Dec. 6. — (Canadian Press.)— The Royal Canadian Mounted Police are trying to place the responsibility of the party or parties who imported the large quantity of drugs seized by them in Montreal yesterday, according to Col. C. Starnes, acting commissioner of the force. Detectives of the force are working on the case and a number of persons are under suspicion, he said. The seizure was made by the officers who have been working with the customs authorities. Until the responsibility has been established on the guilty parties the drugs will remain in the hands of the Royal Canadian Police following which they will be turned over to the Department of Health. News reports indicate that the seizures made during the year are valued at several million dollars.

Ten thousand, seven hundred and thirty-one passengers were carried to and from England in airplanes last year.

ENDEAVOR MEET IN CAMPBELLFORD

Interesting Occasion Was Largely Attended—Preparing Excellent Cantata—Personal News.

CAMPBELLFORD, Dec. 6.—Tomorrow evening, Dec. 7, the 12 O'clock Club will hold their second dance of the season in the Opera House. The last dance was very successful, and no efforts have been spared in trying to make this one even better.

St. Andrew's Endeavor.

As usual, a large number was in attendance at the meeting of the Young People's Endeavor of St. Andrew's Church on Monday night, when the chair was occupied most capably by Mr. Gilbert Stephens. The topic, "Better Speaking," was ably taken by Miss Margaret Anderson, who strosngly emphasized the fact that only through much practice, can one become a good public speaker. Next Monday evening Miss Verna Hay will have charge and the topic will be, "Immigrant Builders in Canada." All the young people are cordially invited.

The young people of the Baptist Church are busy preparing the cantata, "Cheer Up, Cornelia," which they purpose giving at their Christmas entertainment on Tuesday evening, December 19.

You Won't Cough After Taking Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup

On the first appearance of a cough or cold do not neglect it; get rid of it at once before it has a chance to grow worse and gets settled on the lungs, causing bronchitis, pneumonia, or other serious lung troubles.

In Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup you will find a remedy that will relieve the cough or cold on its first inception by soothing the irritation, and healing the diseased lining of the lungs and bronchial tubes.

Mrs. Percy McRae, Little Shemogue, N.B. writes:—"Three years ago I had the "Flu" which left me with a very bad cough. I tried different medicines which did me no good, so I took Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup. It relieved me of that awful cough in a short time."

"Dr. Wood's" is 35c and 60c a bottle at all dealers; put up in a yellow wrapper; three pine trees the trade mark; manufactured only by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

VIGGO KIHL'S RECITALS.

Very direct are the praises showered on Viggo Kihl by those who have attended his Piano Recitals in Stratford, Kitchener, and elsewhere. His rendition of two Mendelssohn selections brought forth repeated encores everywhere. Kihl in all his recitals uses a Heintzman Co. grand piano—the choice of famed artistes like Tetrazzini, De Pachman, and others.

Kihl comes to us from Copenhagen and London, England.

Heintzman Co. are jus now making a fine exhibit of their Art-Pianos for the Christmas season at their Piano Salon, Peterborough, Ontario.

TURKS PLAN TRADE DIRECTLY WITH U.S.

Constantinople Conference To Take First Steps.

CONSTANTINOPLE, Dec. 6.—Turkish business men, bankers and farmers from all over the country will hold a national conference here early in January to consider direct trade relations with the United States.

Heretofore local Greeks and Armenians have acted as middlemen for American firms, but the Turks now prefer to deal directly with American houses, avoiding commissions and other expenses. Large quantities of flour, foodstuffs, automobiles, agricultural machinery and various manufactured articles are imported by Turkey from the United States and the Turks believe prices to consumers can be greatly lowered by the elimination of Greek and Armenian jobbers and the establishment of direct negotiations with the Americans.

At the conclusion of the conference a national association of business men will be formed and steps taken to establish chambers of commerce, including an American chamber.

CROP REPORTS

Following is a summary of reports made by the Agricultural Representatives to the Ontario Department of Agriculture:

One of the brightest features of the season is the fact that owing to the remarkably open fall farmers have their work well in hand for entering the winter. Fall plowing was done last week in several counties. In some quarters both east and west, however, alarm is expressed at the scarcity of water for live stock and for household purposes, a number of wells having practically dried up for the time.

Prices for apples in Halton are quoted as follows: No. 1 Spies, $6 a barrel; No. 2, $4; No. 1 Baldwins, $3.50; No. 2, $4.50; Snows, No. 1, $8; Russets, No. 1, $5; Domestics, $3.50; Keiffer pears, from $5 to $6 a barrel.

Brant says: "There have been far less roots hauled since winter set in as farmers are reluctant to sell at the low price of 8c per bushel."

Hay is selling at prices ranging from $12 to $16 a ton.

Peel has a place in the front rank of raisers of alfalfa seed, six of the eight first prizes in that line at the recent Royal Show held in Toronto having been awarded to growers from that county. Growers there have a considerable quantity of first-class seed on hand.

Frontenac puts the local yield of honey at about ten per cent. below the average per colony.

Lambton says: "The farmer's income this year falls below normal. The consequent result is reflected in many lines of business. However, the men of the county are confident of the future. Every farmer is feeding the normal number of cattle of previous years. The demand for young cattle, brood sows and herd bulls is very good, but at prices corresponding to the farmer's buying power."

Peel and Waterloo also state that a number of cattle are being brought in for feeding. Kenora says that some farmers went to Winnipeg and brought back cattle to use up the surplus fodder. One farmer secured seventy-nine head at prices ranging from 1 1-2 to 2 3-4 cents a lb.

Brant says: "A very large number of cattle have been shipped in to this county this fall for feeding. One drover alone who pretty well supplies the district north of Paris has sent in other sixteen carloads. Feeders recently have been sold at about 5 1-2 cents laid down, while at the same time fairly good butcher cattle are bought locally from 6 to 7 cents. Fat cattle fitted for the Winter Fair recently sold at 10 1-2 cents per lb., while lambs for a similar purpose sold at 16 cents. This, of course, is above the market price."

Halton reports an increase of ten per cent. in the price of milk paid producers.

Leeds states that many cheese factories have shut down for the winter, but that a few are running once or twice a week.

Fresh cows are selling in the Fort William district at from $90 to $110, but there is no demand for dry cows.

Grey says: "Considerable interest is being taken in the hog grading work, and we find everywhere farmers are asking for information and breeding stock of the approved bacon type."

Some heavy shipments of hogs were made last week from South Simcoe, prices running around $10 a cwt.

Turkey days were held in Napanee on the 29th and 30th of November. It is estimated that 106 tons of dressed poultry of all classes, valued at approximately, $73,000, were sold on the market during the two days.

CANADA CEMENT CO. SAFETY CAMPAIGN

Lakefield Plant Won Honor Flag For Month of August.

LAKEFIELD, Dec. 6.—Following the programme at the recent social, under the auspices of the Canada Cement Company's employees here, Mr. Creasor, construction engineer of the plant, gave a very interesting address on our "Safety Campaign" and the plan adopted by the company of rewarding the plant that goes one calander month without a lost time accident with a suitable flag, which is to be flown as long as no accident occurs. A second flag is awarded when two calander months pass without an accident and the third month wins the "Honor Flag," which stays up until a lost time accident occurs—when it must come down.

The Lakefield plant was by special permission allowed to qualify for the "Honor Flag" and succeeded in winning a flag for the month of August. The flag was here displayed by Mr. Creasor amid great applause.

Reeve Strickland addressed the employees on the good results to be gained by social events like the present and the results of co-operation between employer and employee. He hoped that the employees would continue to hold such gatherings and work to the interests of the Canada Cement Company, which had already done so much for Lakefield.

Dancing followed till 11 o'clock, when refreshments were served, after which the dancing was restmed. Much credit is due the committee for the success of the entertainment and to Messrs. G. G. Connell, Sullivan and Summers who provided the excellent dance music. At 1.30 the first social evening of the Cement Company's employees was brought to a close by singing God Save the King and three cheers for the company.

The Best Cough Syrup is Home-made.

Here's an easy way to save $2, and yet have the best cough remedy you ever tried.

You've probably heard of this well-known plan of making cough syrup at home. But have you ever used it? When you do, you will understand why thousands of families, the world over, feel that they could hardly keep house without it. It's simple and cheap, but the way it takes hold of a cough will quickly earn it a permanent place in your home.

Into a 16-oz. bottle, pour 2½ ounces of Pinex; then add plain granulated sugar syrup to fill up the bottle. Or, if desired, use clarified molasses, honey, or corn syrup instead of sugar syrup. Either way, it tastes good, never spoils, and gives you 16 ounces of better cough remedy than you could buy ready-made for $2.50.

It is really wonderful how quickly this home-made remedy conquers a cough—usually in 24 hours or less. It seems to penetrate through every air passage, loosens a dry, hoarse or tight cough, lifts the phlegm, heals the membranes, and gives almost immediate relief. Splendid for throat tickle, hoarseness, croup, bronchitis and bronchial asthma.

Pinex is a highly concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine extract, and has been used for generations for throat and chest ailments.

To avoid disappointment, ask your druggist for "2½ ounces of Pinex" with directions, and don't accept anything else. Guaranteed to give absolute satisfaction or money refunded. The Pinex Co., Toronto, Ont.

CORNS

Lift Off with Fingers

Doesn't hurt a bit. Drop a little "Freezone" on an aching corn, instantly that corn stops hurting, then shortly you lift it right off with fingers. Truly!

Your druggist sells a tiny bottle of "Freezone" for a few cents, sufficient to remove every hard corn, soft corn, or corn between the toes, and the calluses, without soreness or irritation.

SALTS FOR KIDNEYS BETTER THAN DRUGS

If your Back hurts or Bladder bothers, drink lots of water.

When your kidneys hurt and your back feels sore, don't get scared and proceed to load your stomach with a lot of drugs that excite the kidneys and irritate the entire urinary tract. Keep your kidneys clean like you keep your bowels clean, by flushing them with a mild, harmless salts which helps to remove the body's urinous waste and stimulate them to their normal activity. The function of the kidneys is to filter the blood. In 24 hours they strain from it 500 grains of acid and waste, so we can readily understand the vital importance of keeping the kidneys active.

Drink lots of water— you can't drink too much; also get from any pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast each morning for a few days and your kidneys may then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations so clean and stimulate clogged kidneys; also to neutralize the acids in urine so it is no longer a source of irritation, thus often ending bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is inexpensive; cannot injure; makes a delightful effervescent lithia water drink, which everyone should take now and then to help keep their kidneys clean and active. Try this, also keep up the water drinking, and no doubt you will wonder what become of your kidny trouble and backache.

A Detective's Clever Ruse Traps Murderer Who Kills With Germs of Rare Disease

Sherlock Holmes was puzzled over the death of Victor Savage. The cause of death had been certified as Tampanule fever, an obscure Asiatic disease, but one which was invariably fatal. How, Holmes wondered, could Savage have contracted this strange malady in London.

Inquiry revealed the fact that Savage stood between his uncle, Culverton Smith, and a large fortune. Finding that Smith was an expert on Oriental diseases ,Holmes disguised himself and called on the scientist. Smith penetrated the disguise and, tearing it off drove Holmes from his study at the point of a revolver. As he departed, Holmes flatly accused Smith of killing Savage and declared that he would trap him yet.

Several days later Holmes was thinking over the case when Mrs. Hudson, the house-keeper, brought him a "present, delivered by a messenger boy." It was a little box with a quaint sliding top. He opened the box carefully with a pair of pliers, and as he did so a needle sprang up beside the handle. He set aside his lunch and began a chemical study.

Three or four days afterwards Dr. Watson was summoned home by a message from Mrs. Hudson, saying that Holmes was dying of fever. Watson found his old friend writhing in bed, haggard and wan. The detective told Watson he was suffering with a fever which he had contracted from a poor wreck of a Chinese in the East End, and begged him to get Culverton Smith.

'He is an expert on Asiatic disease, Watson," said Holmes. "You don't understand them. Beg him to come, for my life depends on him, but be sure to return before he gets here."

At Watson's request Smith called on Holmes that evening. He saw nobody in the room except the dying detective, and after satisfying himself that Holmes was really a victim of Tampanule fever, began to laugh.

"Perhaps, Mr. Holmes, you'll be interested to know how you caught the disease,' Smith said with a sneer on his face. "When you left after threatening me the other day I made up my mind that you should die so that you could never take the stand against me. And then I made up my mind how you should die.

"Do you remember when you received that little box,' he said, pointing to the little Oriental contraption which was lying on the table, 'that the spring snapped? That is what is causing your death."

Smith then explained how he had arranged the box so that when the lid was opened the little needle would spring up and scratch the hand that was opening it. He had carefully treated the needle with the bacteria of Tampanule fever.

'Oh, yes, I remember that the spring drew blood," moaned Holmes with a look of horror on his drawn face.

'And now that you will not live to take the stand against me, my friend and since you know so much about Victor Savage's death, you may as well know the rest," declared the scientist, and he then explained to Holmes how he had scratched Savage's arm, apparently accidently, with a hypodermic needle while they were at work in his laboratory.

"But, Smtih, save my life, I beg you," cried the detective. 'Save my life and I swear I will forget about Victor Savage and about the box. I beg you spare my life."

After Holmes had pleaded with him for some time Smith seemed to relent, and declared that he would do what he could and would get his bag from the car downstairs. But as he walked around the room to give Holmes a glass of water he spied, lying on a chair, a high silk hat that belonged to Dr. Watson.*

Back in the room, he was surprised when he was covered with a revolver by Holmes and saw Dr. Watson appear from behind a curtain with a note-book in his hand, in which he had been taking down what Smith had said. Holmes got out of bed, stretched his arms, and with a handkerchief wiped from his face all traces of a clever make-up.

His prisoner, however, scoffingly informed him that he was not Smith but Smith's valet, disguised to look just like his master, and described how they had changed places in the car.

"Smith is well on his way by this time,' said the valet with a laugh.

"You'll never make a detective, my dear Watson," said Holmes. "Your hat there frightened him away."

"But as for you,' he said, turning to their prisoner, "your story is wrong in one essential detail. You changed places wth Smith, all right, but he is not well on his way away from here. In fact, he will be in this room in a minute. There have been three detectives watching you and Smith ever since your car drew up in front of my house. You changed coats and hats with Smith and otherwise made yourself look like your master, but when the car began to move away I am quite certain that three good men were there to stop the chauffeur and Smith.'

Just as said it there was a noise on the stairs outside, and when they opened the door they saw Smith, hand-cuffed, being ushered up the stairs by the detectives, to the amazement of Mrs. Hudson and the amusement of Holmes and Watson.

"I've starved for three days to make myself look ill and otherwise infuse reality into this little drama Mrs. Hudson," said Holmes as the detectives led away their two prisoners, so alike in stature that a false moustache was enough to make the valet look like the master.

A few minutes later Holmes and Watson were enjoying a big dinner, the first Holmes had had since he began his successful play at illness.

Can't End Thirst of City 'Rarin' For Rum With Law

TUSLA, Okla., Dec. 6.—Home brew and corn whisky flowed freely here.

"There is no use trying to make the country dry when the citizens are 'rarin' for their booze," W. F. Seavers, county attorney said, explaining why all charges against alleged bootleggers had been dismissed in the County Court.

"Booze can run down the streets, as far as I am personally concerned," Seavers declared.

"Stories have been circulated that I am bought and paid for" continued the official, "but I have never taken a penny for dismissing a case against anyone. It is the good people of the community who put the obstacles in the way of liquor law enforcement, not the bootleggers.

"I have lived 74 years and have just finished two years in the county attorney's office and I have come to the conclusion that people want liquor, and there's no use trying to force prohibition down their throats."

The attorney's action was the climax to hectic days during which mass meetings were held to drive out bootleggers; special detectives were hired to gather evidence, and a hooded band of 200 men had midnight courts and whipped bootleggers.

The night riders patrolled the hills to head off booze runners who were said to be running stills all over the neighboring hills. Stills and alleged moonshiners were seized in wholesale lots as a result of this activity.

Seavers was defeated for re-election and took it as a verdict against prohibition enforcement.

OKLAHOMA CITY, Dec. 6.—Gov. J. B. A. Robertson yesterday instructed Atty.-Gen. Short to proceed to Tulsa to investigate dismissal of liquor cases there by W. F. Seavers, county attorney, who announced yesterday that the citizens of Tulsa County did not want prohibition and he would not force it on them. The Governor characterized the action of Seavers as "an outrage and anarchy."

GIRL TELLS HOW SHE WINS STOCK PRIZE RECORDS

Chester White Hogs Are Blue Ribbon Entries—Industrious How Women Can Compete With Men.

BY FRANK RIDGWAY

CHICAGO, Dec. 6.—Ten years of experience in exhibiting hogs at stock shows has convinced Miss Justine Mosse of Leavenworth, Kas., that the surest way for women to win blue ribbons in competition with men is to feed, groom and exhibit their own animals. She is going to demonstraate her theories to sage exhibitors when she enters the ring with her herd of Chester White hogs at the International Live Stock exposition, which opens next Saturday at the International amphitheater, Union Stock yards.

"Where is the man in charge of this load of hogs" called out the head boss at the unloading chutes at the Union stockyards yesterday morning when the trainload of live stock of seventy carloads rolled in from Kansas City, where the American Royal Agricultural show has just closed. "Here he is", said Miss Mosse.

She's Used to It.

"All alone," asked the big unloading chute boss, pushing back his hat and bashfully tapping the stock car with his cane. "I'm used to this —just roll the car door back and turn them loose. I can handle them better than you strangers," snapped the woman exhibitor. "I have lived right with these pigs on road or in the pens at the shows since last August; they ought to be getting used to me by this time" she added, reaching over and gently squeezed the ear of one of her champions.

Miss Mosse has made the hog showing business pay, winning more than $10,000 cash prizes in the last few years. He older sister, Miss Bonnie Mosse, is now exhibiting a herd of Berkshire hogs at southern fairs. With her Chester Whites, Miss Mosse, showing at the international under the name of Mosse & Mosse, won the grand championship, at the recent American Royal Agricultural show at Kansas City. During the last two years the Kansas girl exhibitor has won twenty grand championships.

Not Easy for a Woman.

"I believe this is the highest record of grand championships of any breed of hogs owned by one exhibitor' said Miss Mosse, who is a graduate of the University of Kansas. "I have made money by showing hogs, but it is serious work and not easy for a woman."

Miss Mosse believes that if a woman is to go into the business of exhibiting live stock they should be willing to compete with men on an equal basis. She goes dressed in a khaki suit, high top laced boots and enters the pens like she meant it.

Her Business Attitude.

"I regard this business of showing hogs as other women look upon the work of a secretary, a saleswoman, a hat trimmer, etc. and I dress accordingly. I feed my own hogs, wash and brush them off before showing, and see that they look their best when the judge comes along."

All of Miss Mosse's show winnings are invested in land. Last week she bought a farm of 16 acres near Warrensburg, Mo. In partnership with her father she also owns land in Kansas and Canada.

PASTOR URGES 30 DAYS TO GET WEDDING LICENSE.

DETROIT, Dec. 6.—A marriage license is as easy to get as a dog license and far easier than one for an automobile, the Rev. W. F. Crossland, pastor, said Sunday evening at the Ninde M. E. Church. Such a situation, Mr. Crossland said, makes a joke of the seriousness of marriage. As remedy, he suggested that application for marriage license be required 30 days before it is issued and that it be published, together with all licenses, and a stiff penalty provided for false statements.

Divorced persons should be required to wait a year, before remarriage and all should have to submit a certificate of health, following examination by a registered physician, he said.

PRINCESS MARY AN EXPECTANT MOTHER.

LONDON, Dec. 6. — (Canadian Press.)—Rumor that Princess Mary (Viscountess Lascelles) is an expectant mother, was given foundation by the information that "an announcement of great public interest is expected within the next week from Harewood Hall, Yorkshire," where the Princess is staying with her husband.

PROGRESS MADE BY CAN. SHOE INDUSTRY.

The U. S. Consul Reports Canada's Success in Meeting Competition.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 6.—(Canadian Press)—The progress which the Canadian shoe industry has made in meeting the competition of U. S. manufacturers is reflected in a report received by the Department of Commerce from Jose de Olivares, U.S. Consul in Hamilton.

The consul, after reviewing conditions in the shoe industry in his district, which he declares "from the dealer's and consumer's viewpoint, is, in general, satisfactory," continues:

"Existing conditions seem to hold out little encouragement for revival of American export trade in boots and shoes in Canada. The consensus of the opinion of close observers of the situation is to the effect that during recent years, when the abnormal depreciation of Canadian currency proved so great an obstacle to continued trade with the United States, the production of Canadian factories has grown so much in public favor as to preclude the necessity of resuming the importation of many American lines of footwear which were formerly regarded as staples in the Canadian market.

"Added to this are the effects of the long and persistent campaign on the part of the Canadian Government and numerous commercial organizations throughout the Dominion in favor of Canadian-made commodities, including boots and shoes, and the existing high duty on the importation of American products. In many instances retail boot and shoe dealers have entirely eliminated American-made footwear from their stocks, while others carry only a few of the higher-priced lines imported from the United States to supply certain established demands.

FORD PAYROLL FRAUD CHARGED.

Clerk Accused of Obtaining $10,000 By Keeping Former Employees on Books.

DETROIT, Dec. 6 — Payroll frauds which may erach $20,000 have been uncovered at the River Rouge plant of the Ford Motor Co., with the arrest and alleged confession of George W. Pemmitt, 786 Wheelock avenue, a Ford timekeeper, Springwells police believe.

According to his story, Pemmit used 11 men as accomplices in his frauds, three of them University of Michigan students. In Chief Richard Burguson's report of Pemmitt's confession to him, Pemmitt kept the 11 men on the payroll after they left the plant, Sept. 1. In the three months subsequent, he has defrauded the Ford company of $10,000, he is said to have admitted.

Each of the 11 men has made restitution of his share of the spoils, $350 each, police report. Pemmit is believed by the police to have received the remainder. Ford officials, checking up the books, declare there is a further shortage of $10,000, which may not be chargeable to Pemmitt, however.

Pemmitt, in his confession, is said to have been actuated at first merely by a desire to help college students through school. Later, however, he felt that he would obtain gain himself, inasmuch as it appeared so easy, he is said to have told the police. A warrant for his arrest has been applied for.

SERENADE BY MISCHA ELMAN.

Ordla's Serenade is happily one of those compositions that can be classed as popular without being crude.

Its graceful, swift, right and left rhythm is announced by the piano, the violin, in the skilled hand of Mischa Elman, leaping into the first phrase with joyous confidence, followed, after some deft turns of melody, by bits of repetition from the accompanying instrument, then vising into harmonies.

PASS TWO BY-LAWS TO RATEPAYERS

Proposed Armour Park and De Laval Fixed Assessment Will Be Voted On.

Two bylaws passed through the Council on their way to the ratepayers at the municipal elections. One is for the purchase of Armour's Hill for a public park and the other is the granting of a fixed assessment of $50,000 to the De Laval Company.

Mr. T. Tooms, M.L.A., with a deputation from the Ashburnham Patriotic Society, exhorted the Council to approve the Armour park scheme. Dr. E. E. Harvey of the Chamber of Commerce and Mrs. W. R. Morris also spoke in favor of it.

Mr. Tooms stated that Dr. Zavitz, head of the Forestry Department of the O.A.C. at Guelph, will visit Peterborough on Thursday afternoon and will examine the Armour property. The Government is willing to plant it with trees and to assist in developing it as a park.

Change Box 12.

Ald. Turner suggested that fire alarm box 12 at St. Andrew's Church was out of its latitude in regard to its number. The first digit should, according to the system, indicate the ward in which the box was located. No. 12 was now in ward three. Ald. Crowe promised to take this suggestion up with Chief Gimblett.

BROTHERS END LIVES TOGETHER ON FARM

Inseparable, One Hangs, Other Burns Himself.

NORWALK, O., Dec. 6.—Isaac Swick, 61 years old, and Jacob Swick, 56, bachelor brothers, were found dead on their farm in Richmond Township, about three miles southwest of Williord, Coroner C. L. Bell of Norwalk has rendered a verdict of suicide

The body of Isaac was found hanging by a rope from a rafter in a barn near the house.

A quarter of a mile away in a corn field the charred body of Jacob was found. Near the body of Jacob was found a gallon can about half full of coal oil.

Coroner Bell believes Jacob poured coal oil all over his body and set fire to his clothing. Which one died first the authorities are unable to learn.

The body of Isaac was found first. Neighbors, who made the discovery, said they thought they would also find the body of the other brother.

Coroner Bell found cash, notes and certified checks in the sum of more than $4,000 in the house. The brothers owned nearly 200 acres of land. They had no debts. No notes or letters that would throw light on the affair were found. Coroner Bell was told that two other brothers had committed sucide some years ago.

Neighbors say the brothers were deeply attached to each other and were inseparable.

CAMPBELLFORD AND DISTRICT

The Municipal Elections Arouse Some Interest—Traffic Signal Broken.

CAMPBELLFORD, Dec. 6.—The Women's Missionary Society of the Methodist church held a meeting on Tuesday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Ed. Morton, Queen street. There was a good attendance and a very interesting Christmas programme consisting of solos by Mrs. Fred Smith and Mrs. J. E. Glover, also a reading by Mrs. J. A. Irwin, which was very much appreciated, after which general routine business was transacted. Mrs. I. T. Frederick had charge of entertainment committee, Mrs. George A. Kingston, the president, spoke briefly regarding preparations for the Christmas Fair, which will be held in the Kerr block on Dec. 16th.

No More Joy Rides.

The lads who stole the car belonging to Wm. Allen of Stirling, a week ago Saturday, appeared before Magistrate O'Rouke at Belleville and pleaded guilty. The two older boys were sentenced to two (2) years in Kingston penitentiary, a third member of the party will go to the Ontario reformatory for a period of not less than one year and not more than two years less one day, while the other member of the party, who is but 16 years of age, spends what they call an indeterminate sentence at St. John's Industrial School.

Getting the Line-up.

According to latest rumors the Campbellford mayoralty contest may be a three-cornered fight, only three candidates have so far definitely announced their intentions. Nelson Stone for Reeve, Charles Palliser for Deputy-reeve and Richard Cole for Councillor. That there wil be some dark horses in the field when nominations come out at the Music Hall on Dec. 22nd is a foregone conclusion by those who are in the know.

Traffic Signal Broken.

The report on the traffic signal which stood at the corner of George and Bridge streets, was fully gone into by the police commissioners at a recent meeting of the town council and a suggestion made that a more substantial one replace it, as the old one was broken beyond repair. In the meantime drivers are cutting the corner any old way, and a citizen suggests that even a barrel with a red lantern on it would be better than nothing, and possibly avert a collision at this important corner.

Church News.

A special meeting of the church board of the Methodist church was called on Tuesday evening for the purpose of inviting the Rev. Mr. H. B. Kenny to remain a fifth year.

TO SPEND CHRISTMAS IN THE MOTHERLAND

Many Canadians Leave St. John on Board the the Marburn.

ST. JOHN'S N. B., December 6. — Canadian citizens from many parts of the broad dominion sailed on the Canadian Pacific Steamship Marburn en route to the Old Country to spend Christmas with loved ones. It will be a happy reunion for many who left their homes in the British Isles years ago and came to Canada to seek their fortunes. That they have been able to do well in the land of their adoption is evidenced from the fact that they are in a position to make the long journey.

Mothers with tears of happiness in their eyes walked up the gang plank of the steamer on the last lap of their journey while sons and daughters, smiling and joking, wended their way to the dock, all looking forward to the day when they would be back to the scenes of their child hood, and once again sit around the festive board at Yuetide.

As the large liner pulled out from the dock her decks were lined with a happy throng which included men who have prospered on the prairie lands of the west; others who have enjoyed success in the large cities of the east; and a few who are going to England on a business and pleasure trip combined. All expect to return to Canada after the holiday season.

Murdock Denied That Mounted Police Were Used in Strike Trouble.

OTTAWA, Dec. 6. — (Canadian Press.) — Replying to the United Mine Workers, Minister of Labor Murdock denies that the Mounted Police have been used to prevent the miners picketing in the Edmonton coal fields and asks, "by what process of reasoning you can justify on one hand calling a strike under conditions contrary to law and on the other hand appealing to the government for relief from an alleged injustice from what you deem to be too severe an application of another statute." The mine workers claimed that members were arrested for peaceful picketing.

PROPERTY DAMAGE AT ST. SURPLICE IS LARGE.

MONTREAL, Dec. 6.—(Canadian Press.)—Property damage from the fire which destroyed the rest house of gentlemen of St. Sulpice, is estimated at between $80,000 and $100,000. The most important loss, however, is the archieves concerning the early days of New France.

RARE REDSKIN RELICS FOUND,

Ancient Arms, Pottery and Ornaments Unearthed at Kentucky Cave.

LOUISVILLE, Dec. 6.—Indian relics antedating the coming of the white man to America some by hundreds and others by thousands of years, have been unearthed as a result of excavations in the Hines Cave, 10 miles south of Burnsides, Ky., in which a party of scientists from the University of Kentucky have been conducting explorations.

The party has just returned to Lexington with their find, which includes 13 Indian skulls, eight or nine complete skeletons, implements of war, pottery, ornaments and remains of animals and birds. The exploring ground was one of the many historic caves in Wayne County, Kentucky.

All of the skeletons had been buried with the knees doubled up and the head turned to one side, according to the Indian custom. They were all covered with large slabs of stone, probably as a protection from ravaging animals and the fragmentary possessions and bones of animals found near indicated the usual practice of providing the dead with the necessary equipment for a future existence.

Pendant of Bone.

A pendant of bone, beautifully worked, found under a stalagmite and evidently among the oldest of the relics, was one of the most interesting ornaments discovered. Castropods through which holes had been drilled as if for a bracelet, mussel shell and bone ornaments were found with the female skeletons.

Among the implements were stone hoes, flint arrowheads, bone needles, flint skinning knives, stone axes, pestles, bone hooks, drills and gorgettes and articles of unknown use.

Threads and the imprint of a woven bark fibre confirmed the story of natives of skeletons "wrapped in carpet" found in a cave some 30 years ago. Bones of wild animals native to the region, and turtle and fish bones were numerous.

Age of Relics.

Although no attempt has yet been made to estimate the age of these relics the time when they were covered by the rocks must be gauged by thousands rather than hundreds of years, say the scientists of the party. The stalagmite growing upward from the rock floor was formed by calcereous water which percolated through the limestone and dropped through the roof only after heavy rains. No water drips through the cave now, and there are no other large stalagmites or stalactites near the entrance.

During the Civil War saltpeter for making powder was mined extensively in this and adjacent caves.

The relics found will go to the University of Kentucky.

SAY TOWN PLANNING IS A NEW FAD HERE

Lindsay Town Council Follow. Action of Peterboro in This Regard.

LINDSAY, December. — Like Peterborough, the town council here did not take kindly to a communication from the town planning and housing conference relative to the proposed amendment to the Planning and Development Act, which they wished endorsed.

Ald. McLean wanted to know what people in Toronto or any other place knew about running the town of Lindsay.

Mayor O'Reilly characterized the idea as a new fad. It meant appointing a commission for which a town was responsible. It was also a matter of indirect taxation.

Ald. McLean and Broom moved that the communication be filed and that the town register its disapproval of the proposed legislation.—Carried

GET ALL INCREASE IN POPULATION WE NEED.

Without Offering Inducements to Industrial Workers, Says Tom Moore

OTTAWA, December 6 (Canadian Press). — Emigration is the paramount quesion of the European countries, Presiden Tom Moore, of the Dominion Trades and Labour Council said last night. "They are all looking for an outlet for surplus populations and showed anxiety to get the goodwill of Canada in this regard. This country could get almost an unlimited number of good farmers if the conditions were made suitable to receive them. We can get all the increase in population needed without offering any inducement to industrial workers."

He referred to the activities of Holland, Switzerland, Italy, and Poland to aid emigrants.

"I Had Bilious Attacks and Stomach Weakness"

Mrs. Wm. Robinson, Yonker, Sask., writes:
"I suffered from stomach and liver trouble, and used to have bilious attacks so bad that I could do nothing for weeks at a time. My stomach would be so weak that not even a drink of water would stay on it. On my sister's advice, I began to use Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, and must say that they have made me feel like a new woman."

APPOINTMENTS TO O.H.A. EXECUTIVE

J. A. Greer, Jr., London, and J. R. Dier, Owen Sound, Selected By President Fry.

W. A. Fry of Dunnville, president of the O.H.A. executive for the year. The men appointed are J. A. Greer, Jr., of London, who was Monday elected an alderman of that city, and J. R. Deer, bank manager of Owen Sound. This completes the executive committe and it will be noticed that every section of the province has it representative. The committee list of officers is as follows; Past president, A. E. Copeland, Midland; president, W. A. Fry, Dunnville; first vice president, Wm. Eason, Stratford; second vice president, George B. McKay, Kitchener; A.A.U. of C. governor, W. W. Davidson, Toronto; treasurer, Sheriff J. F. Paxton, Whitby; secretary, W. A. Hewitt, Toronto; executive committee, J. Percy Bond, Peterboro; R. Butler, Lindsay; Angus D. Campbell, Cobalt; R. Wylie Wilkinson, Galt; PJ. A. Greer, Jr., London, and J. R. Dier, Owen Sound.

The first meeting of the new executive will be held at the office of the Evening Telegram on Thursday night, December 7, when the teams will be grouped. Clubs are asked to send in suggestions for groupings.

All entries of teams for this season's O.H.A. competitions must be in the hands of Secretary by today. No entries will be received after that date.

The Joke Was A Boomerang

There has been plenty of cross firing between Queen's and Varsity supporters over the gridiron clashes between the Blue and the Tri-Color, but the palm must undoubtedly be awarded to the clash between Ernie Cain and P. Pappas of Kingston, and H. Hungerford of Toronto. A couple of days before Varsity handed Queen's that terrible 23-1 trouncing right down in Kingston, Hungerford, who travels east for the Patterson Candy Co., handed Cain and Pappas a merry "raz" and, when the game was over, sent them down a big mourning card inscribed—

"Sacred to the memory of poor old Queen's."

When Queen's had her revenge and not only defeated Varsity in the Intercollegiate play-off, but took Argos in camp here and won the eastern senior championship, the Cain-Pappas combination started out to hand Hungerford a Roland for his Oliver.

The certainly knocked the gum drop peddler dizzy.

Yesterday the express man landed at Hungerford's home, 1076 College street west, with a box that gurgled, weighed and felt like Christmas cheer from Morryell, but when Hungerford opened it he almost dropped it upon the floor. Inside was a little black coffin with silver mounted trimmings. A plate bore the inscription, "Our darling". The top was decorated with a couple of minature wreaths bearing cards expressing sympathy of Mr. Cain and Mr. Pappas, and inside wree two little kewpie dolls shrouded and ready for burial—one decorated with the Blue and White for Varsity and other with the Double Blue of Argos. The outfit was complete even to the tapes to lower the casket into the grave.

Rumor has it that Mayor Corbett of Kingston, who is in the business, turned out the little coffin.

The only thing the Kingston jokers overlooked was the hole.

The comeback is certainly a knockout!

SCHOONER FOUNDERED.

KINGSTON, Ont., Dec. 6.—(Canadian Press.)—The Katie Eccles, the coal schooner which broke loose last Wednesday from the shelter of Timber Island, where she had been anchored by Capt. Mitchell, has apparently foundered. Wreckage having the words "Katie Eccles" has been washed ashore on the south shore of Wolfe Island.

WILDCATS TOOK ONE FROM THE CALEYS.

The Wildcats turned in another victory last evening when they defeated the Caledonians 11 to 6 in a soft ball game at the Armoury. The Scots showed to good advantage in every inning except the third. In this frame the Wildcats went on a rampage and tore off seven runs before they were stopped. After they got ther seven runs in, the the Callys tightened up and retired the next three men. The Wildcats did not score more than once in any other inning. The Caledonians started well with three runs in the opening frame, but from then on were unable to do any effective work in the way of run getting.

The players were:

Wildcats—Delahay, c.; Ward, p.; Elliott, 3b.; Johnson, 2b.; Cooper, r.f.; Bradley, s.s.; Yelland, l.f.; Sexsmith, s.s.; Feeley, 1b.

Caledonians—McKenzie, 1b.; Ackford, c.; French, s.s.; Burgess, s.s.; Thompson, 3b.; McMillan, p.; Jackson, 2b.; Veitch, l.f.; Anderson, r.f.

Score by innings:

G. Sturgeon, W. H. Taylor, C. B. Westbrook, R. M. Waddell, and W. R. Widdess.

PUBLICITY OFTEN FATAL TO TEAMS.

Too much publicity is often fatal to a team as well as an individual. Many of the high-priced ball players have been hampered by publicity. It seems the germ is just as fatal on the gridiron.

A few weeks prior to the meeting between Nebraska and Syracuse Steve O'Neil, a western coach said Nebraska could beat Princeton on Thursday, Yale on Friday and Harvard on Saturday.

Overnight the Nebraska team became known as a superteam. Then came the game with Syracuse in which Nebraska was beaten. It was quite a jolt for a team that had been so much advertised.

Coach Dawson, the old Prinecton star, was in no way to blame for the publicity idea. He ridiculed the superteam stuff.

"SHAG" SIGNS AGAIN WITH SYRAUCSE

LOUISVILLE, Dec. 6.—While it has not been officially announced it was said that Frank Shaughnessy, football coach of McGill University, Montreal, has been named manager of the Syracuse International League club. Jack Dunn manager of the Baltimore International League champions, was due to arrive yesterday. Three major league clubs were waiting to swoop down on him to talk business over Joe Boley, his star shortstop. Ty Cobb, manager of the Detroit Tigers, said he was ready to make an offer for him and the Chicago White Sox also would like to have him, but the St. Louis Cardinals were said to have the inside of the track.

OTTAWAS HAVE ICE.

OTTAWA, Dec. 6.—With a welcome drop in temperature thus enabling the making of good ice, Ottawa's senior hockey aggregtaion began practise yesterday. Monday the club manageemnt was considering Grimsby as a place in which to prepare for the season opening, but yesterday it was announced that when the weather is cold Ottawa will double up on practises.

The return of Jack Darragh is very welcome among Ottawa supporters. Cosey Dolan, the trainer, who has served the club for many seasons, was also signed up Monday.

PIRATES MADE A RECORD SPLURGE

Every Player in Batting Order Made One or More Hits in Five Consecutive Games.

A most unusual batting performance was accomplished by the Pittsburgh club. Every player in their batting order made one or more hits in five consecutives games, August 5 to 10, inclusive. At Boston, August 5, Pittsburg made 16 hits. Nine players competed and each got one or more hits. At Philadelphia, August 7, the next game for Pittsburgh, there were twelve players in the Pittsburgh batting order and each made one or more hits, with a total of 22. The next day there was a double-header at Philadelphia. In the first game eleven players took part for Pittsburgh. Each player hit safely, the team making 27 hits. In the second game of the double-header there were nine players in the batting order and each player got a hit, the total being 19. On the next day, August 10, there were nine players in the Pittsburg batting order again, and each player made a hit with a total of 16. On August 11, Pittsburgh almost made a similar record. The player who failed to get a hit was Tierney. Each of the other players was successful.

BOWLING

BRINTON 5 PIN LEAGUE.

The Kirman team won two out of three games from the Sarouks last evening in the Brinton Carpet Five Pin League at the Water Street Alleys. Shaughnessey was the high man of the night, with 547.

Following are the scores:

SAROUKS—
Bishop	139	140	106	395
Yarrington f	140	175	149	473
L. Martin	127	134	169	480
Wilson	123	105	144	372
Martin	110	86	134	320
Rose	124	112	129	375
	831	752	831	2415
KIRMAN—
Leether	132	100	146	378
Curtis	149	160	132	441
Fells	182	106	116	404
Thomas	131	133	120	384
Shaughnessy	187	215	145	547
Arrowsmith	170	195	125	490
	951	909	784	2644

The downfall of the Sarouks means nothing to them as they have been in the cellar since the league started and don't expect to get out of it unless some of the players show much better form than they have in the past.

KINGSTON WILL HAVE THREE HOCKEY TEAMS

KINGSTON, Ont., December 6 (Canadian Press). — At a meeting of Queens Athletic Board and the Hockey Club yesterday afternoon, it was decided to enter three teams in inter-collegiate hockey—senior, intermediate, and junior — and two teams in O.H.A. intermediate and junior, which is the same number as was entered last season.

There is nothing in the rumour that the senior rugby players will not play hockey this season, and several of the victorious football squad will be seen on the ice.

Batstone and Jack Soud, rugby sub., who played with Osgoode Hall last winter, will likely catch places on the senior team.

This team, with two or three exceptions, will be the same as last year.

Mundell, who played with R.M.C., will be another acquisition.

BLAME TONSILS FOR SORE ARM.

WASHINGTON, D.C., Dec. 6.—One of the chief reasons for the failure of the Washington team to make a better showing in the American League last season was the failure of Catcher Eddie Gharrity to play his usual brilliant game. An attack of neuritis in the right shoulder caused Gharrity to suffer with a lame arm all summer, which naturally affected his play in other departments aside from mere throwing. Recently he underwent an operation for his tonsils which the doctors claim will eliminate the neuritis and restore the arm to old-time form.

PITCHING CONTROL.

The days of Radbourne, the hurler who would put up a row of bottles, knocking them down one after another just to prove that his arm was fit for action, are recalled in the acquisition of Joe Harris, South Atlantic League pitcher, by the Cincinnati National League Club.

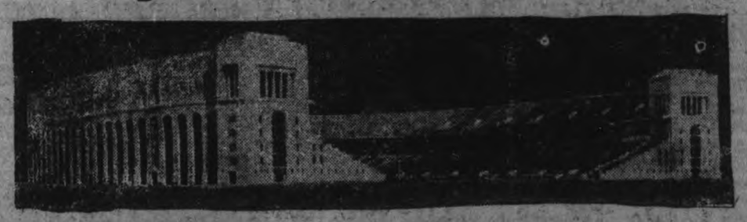
Harris, according to Charley McMillan, the Cincinnati youngster, who played in the same league, uses the same trick and varies it before the game with a speciality of his own.

The trick involves the ruination of a dozen eggs. Harris sets a dozen eggs at regular distances apart—say six inches on a plank—then he hits egg after egg in regular order, seldom misses hitting an egg excepting the one he is aiming at. The catcher can hold his glove at any position and Harris can hit it without the maskman moving an inch.

NOTED SINGER IS STILL IN SERIOUS CONDITION.

NEW YORK, Dec. 6.—(Special)—Schumanacink's condition is still acute.

Huge New Stadium Was a Jinx



The Ohio State Stadium as it appears to-day looking into the open end of the shoe. The dome at the curved end is hidden from view.

COLUMBUS, Dec. 6.—A colossal structure of gray concrete, it stands, quietly awaiting the coming winter sports and another season on the gridiron.

It is the new Ohio State University stadium whose official opening was marked by the defeat of the Buckeyes at the hands of Michigan on Oct. 21, 19 to 0.

That was merely the beginning, for Ohio State lost every conference game of the Big Ten staged within its walls this season. From a title-holder in past seasons, the scarlet and gray eleven has descended to a receiver of sound wallops its first year in this great amphitheater of the middle west.

The size and importance of her stadium has not been diminished by Ohio State's poor record, however. The last concrete has been poured into its towers and the last scaffoldings taken away, leaving a mammoth horseshoe standing in an open field back of campus buildings.

Interesting Statistics.

Here are a few of the statistics compiled on its construction by the E. H. Latham Company of Columbus, the contractors, who were awarded the job for $1,341,000.

To complete it, it took: 4,300 tons of steel, 14,000 tons of cement; 17,000 tons of sand, 33,000 tons of gravel, 1,500,000 feet of lumber, of which 21 miles of oak planking went into the seats alone.

An idea of its size may be gained from the following:

It has a seating capacity of 63,000 people.

Its outside circumference is one-third of a mile.

It spreads over an area of 10 acres.

Its walls are 107 feet high.

Its main entrance is 85 feet high. There are 82 other entrances.

Stadium Empties Quickly.

Fifty-two portals on the lower deck and 29 on the upper deck feed 112 aisles, so that the stadium may be emptied in seven minutes. Its dome is 70 feet in diameter. There are 21,000 seats in the covered portion.

In addition to the varsity football field within the horseshoe there are 100 tennis courts, 23 baseball lots, 11 gridirons, and an indefinite number of cinder tracks with 100-yard straightaways planned for the 92-acre recreation field lying outside the stadium proper.

In case the open ends of the stadium are ever closed by additional seating facilities, it has been estimated that the entire seating capacity could be made to approach 100,000 people.

Death of Cardinal Star Will Weaken Team

In the death of Austin McHenry the St. Louis National League club loses one of the best outfielders in the game.

Only a year ago John McGraw, anxious to secure an outfielder to take the place of George Burns, is reported to have offered $50,000 for McHenry.

McHenry's death was the result of an operation for the removal of a tumor from the brain.

The loss of McHenry recalls the case of Arnold Hauser of the Cardinals. Hauser, at a time when he was regarded as the greatest shortstop in the game was stricken down by illness and was forced to retire from the game.

McHenry, regarded as one of the stars of the National League, suffered a collapse during the middle stages of the 1922 season. At the time of his illness, however, his condition was not regarded as being serious and he was sent to his home at Stout, Ohio, to recuperate.

Resting for three weeks, McHenry apparently regained his health and he rejoined the Cardinals on their second eastern series in July.

Manager Branch Rickey, however, was satisfied that McHenry had not thoroughly recovered. He played him in two games and after delivering a base hit as a pinch hitter in the game of July 31 against Brooklyn, was ordered to return home for the remainder of the season.

HARDING SETS PRECEDENT.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 6.—(Canadian Press:)—President Harding has established a precedent by allowing the first two days of the new session of Congress to pass without presenting his annual address, reporting on the progress of the Union, and outlining the Government's programme for coming legislation.

It is predicted that he will deliver his message during the week.

SERGEANTS PUT IT OVER THE PRIVATES.

The Sergeants defeated the Privates in a soft ball game at the Armoury last evening by a score of 11 to 9. The winners showed their strength in the last few innings, holding the Privates scoreless for the final six frames. In the last three they retired their opponents in order, finishing up the ninth with a snappy double play. The best play of the night came in the fourth session when the Sergeants sent the Privates to the field by pulling one of the best triple plays seen in the league. Both teams staged batting rallies in the third and both scored five runs in this inning.

The players were:

Privates—Hamlin, l.f.; Williams, c.; LeBarr, 1b.; Moore, 2b.; Sommers, r.f.; McBride, s.s.; Armstrong, s.s.; LeBarr, 3b.; Thomas, p.

ALMOST SUMMER ON DECEMBER FIRST

The 1875 Maximum Was 61—First of This Month One Degree Lower—Climate Man Talks.

A weather record without equal for half a century has been established this month, according to figures obtained from A. J. Connor, M.A., climatologist in the meteorological service of Canada. To most people whose memory extends back some distance, the mild days of the present season have appeared in somewhat sharp contrast with the cold, snow-laden times of the early eighties. In fact, popular opinion expresses itself to the effect that the winters of Canada are getting warm. It is interesting to hear what Mr. Connor has to say on these matters.

Warm Winter's Day.

"On December 30, 1875," he remarked this morning, "there was a registration in Toronto of a maximum of 61 degrees. On no December day before then and on none since, so far as our records go, has there been such a high temperature in December until the first day of this month, when the registration was officially recorded at 60.5. It is just possible that the thermometer in 1875 may have read a fraction lower than it would read today because of the place where it hung against an old stone wall, but so far as the figures actually go the point reached this month is slightly above that of forty-seven ago and certainly higher than any date of the same month prior to that of which we have records.

"It is said by some persons who have kept records of their own for many years back that the winters of Canada are growing milder. Is this a fact?" Mr. Connor was asked.

"They may be warmer at short periods," was his reply, "but, taken over long periods, this is not the case. Some time ago Sir Frederic Stupart spent a good deal of time getting data on this matter for a lecture before a public body in Toronto. We even looked up the letters of the Jesuit Fathers to get the earliest possible records, and while there are short periods of climatic variation, a sort of irregular pulsation, you might say, just like the heart may pulsate irregularly, it is not the case that the weather is growing milder except during these fluctuations. There are variations every fifteen, twenty or thirty years, not regularly occurring, but coming and going when the seasons may be colder or warmer for a few years, but the best authorities show that there is remarkable uniformity taken over century with another."

Uniform Climate.

In support of what the climatologist for Canada says it is significant that Prof. Ellsworth Huntington, of Yale, one of the leading scientific authorities on this continent, in his work on "Climatic Changes; Their Nature and Causes" points out the wonderful uniformity of climate throughout all geological time in the sense that the mean temperature of the earth for at least several hundred millions of years has, according to geological evidence, never varied more than 54 degrees Fahrenheit above or below the present level.

While there may be a few years, therefore, in which winter months may seem to be warmer than the memory would attribute to earlier years, when the wheel of time turns around enough the cold comes back again with remarkable faithfulness. Just now Canada happens to be enjoying a mild season, but the vagaries of the weather are such that within twenty-four hours the sunshine and warmth of today may have turned into cold wintry blasts.

Liver Trouble

Pains in Stomach

Most of the misery and ill-health that humanity is burdened with arise from disorders of the liver, stomach or bowels.

If you are feeling out of sorts, have pains in the stomach, especially after eating, sour stomach, bilious spells, sick or bilious headaches, heartburn, water brash, etc., you should take a few doses of Milburn's Laxa-Liver Pills. They will liven up the liver, regulate the bowels, and tone up the stomach.

Mr. T. C. Hallman, Highgate, Ont. writes:—"I have had liver trouble and pains in the stomach for a long time. I started to use your Milburn's Laxa-Liver Pills, and in short time I noticed they were helping me. Now I woul not be without them and cannot recommend them too highly."

Milburn's Laxa-Liver Pills are 25c a vial at all dealers, or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

NO MORE SMOKING IN PUBLIC BUILDINGS

SASKATOON, Sask., Dec. 6.—(Canadian Press.)— No smoking in public buildings is the latest ban to be clamped down in Saskatoon. Eviction from the building is the penalty to which users of the weed will be liable. Action shall only be taken on instigation of the proprietors. Churches are included in a wide list cited by the by-law which took effect yesterday morning. One alderman struck out against this. It was a reflection on the church, he said. The city council overruled his objection and so no smoking in churches. Separate smoking rooms are sugested.

WINER EXAMINER RACE STILL WINNING MEDALS.

Herbert Tranter Makes a Good Run in Flint, Michigan, Race.

In the annual Y.M.C.A. cross-country run, which was held in Saginaw, Michigan, December 3rd, Herbert Tranter, formerly of Peterboro, and now of Flint, won the individual honors by leading the p ck of seven starters to the finish line. His victory gave him a start on the big trophy and a medal.

The course was over exceptionally good ground and the event was the closest and most spirited affair ever staged in Flint.

The five mile run was done by Tranter in 30 minutes, 17 2-5 seconds, which broke George Barr's record of last year which was 33.04 3-5 by nearly 3 minutes.

Last year Herbert Tranter won the Examiner road race.

DUPED GERMANY INTO STAYING MOBILISATION.

Britain Played Smart Trick, Said Count Von Moltke in Memoirs.

BERLIN, Dec. 6. — (Canadian Press.) — Memoirs of Count Von Moltke, just issued by his widow, gives the impression that England deliberately duped Germany into delaying mobilization by tentatively indicating she would observe neutrality in the event of Germany desisting from a naval attack on the north coast of France.

Disturbances in the Western Strike Area.

EDMONTON, Dec. 6.—(Canadian Press.)— Fighting between Provincial Police constables, miners and mine pickets occurred Monday night and early yesterday at several of the mines in the Edmonton district as the result of the pickets endeavoring to force the workers who have not obeyed the strike call, from entering the mines. Two Provincial Policemen were struck during the disturbances and injured by flying missiles, and there were many assaults by fists, sticks and stones, while one manager drew a gun to scare off the crowding strikers.

U.S. POSTAL DEFICIT OVER $60,815,000

Ownership of All Post Office Buildings By U. S. Urged By Postmaster-General.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 6. — The campaign for Government ownership of post office buildings throughout the country was renewed by Postmaster-General Work in his annual report to Congress; made public yesterday.

Not only would a policy of public ownership relieve the Government of much of its present housing congestion, the Postmaster-General said, but it also would make for financial economy since rentals of more than $12,000,000 now being paid over annually without tangible return could be invested instead in property of a permanent value.

Government owned buildings, he pointed out, are free from taxation, while the Government as a lessee must pay enough rent to enable the landlord to meet his tax bills. In the same way he asserted that, whereas the Government could borrow money "on practically a four per cent. basis" to build post offices, when it leases it "pays a rental sufficient to permit the lessor to borrow money at 7 per cent. and in some cases as much as 10 per cent."

During the fiscal year there was an increase of $21,362,266 in postal receipts, but ependitures were only $780,835 in excess of those of last year. Considering losses of postal funds through fires, burglary and other causes, the deficit for the year was $60,815,400.

Mails were carried by air over a distance of 1,727,256 miles, and 48,088,920 letters were delivered by the air mail service without a single fatality or serious accident to fliers. The one death in the entire service was that of a pilot "ferrying" an empty plane between points.

A total of 434 new rural delivery routes were organized, extending delivery to 62,930 families. There are now 44,186 rural routes, supplying more than 29,700,000 individuals, over a length of 1,180,448 miles.

Mail carried postage free under the frankling privileges of the various Government agencies reached a total of 435,000,000 pieces, and the Postmaster-General estimated that had they been paid for at the ordinary rates they would have netted an additional income of $10,807,387.

MAYOR WAS HOST TO CITY COUNCIL

Ald. Hamilton Intimated That He Would Not Be Back Next Year.

Ald. Hamilton's intimation at a luncheon given by Mayor Taylor at the Dominion Cafe on Monday night that he would not be back with the Council next year, was regarded by his colleagues as an affirmation of his intention not to be a candidate for re-election.

He proposed a toast to the Mayor who responded with an expression of thanks to all the members of the Council for their co-operation in the city's work this year. His Worship also acknowledged the courteous treatment and assistance from City Clerk Armstrong and the other officials. The spirit of Auld Lang Syne pervaded the dinner and also the final meeting of the year, some of the outgoing members cleaning up their desks and generally wondering who would be back in January.

INTEREST THE WORLD ROUND

Hall-Mills Murder Case One of Most Baffling Mysteries on Record.

More than 100 reporters and news photographers have been assigned to cover the Hall-Mills murder case in New Brunswick, New Jersey, thirty miles from New York City. These investigators and chroniclers came from cities as far west as Chicago and as far south as Washington, but representatives of New York and Philadelphia publications make up the bulk of the gathering. This murder mystery has awakened interest the world round. At a gathering of social notables a few days ago Chauncey M. Depew, now in his 87th year, declared that he could not recall a murder case throughout his long life that had aroused as much widespread interest. Naturally the public interest is whetted by the series of mysteries unfolded. Perhaps no case has called forth such a page of questions and answers as was published by the New York papers and to which one of the suspects—the widow of the slain minister—volunatrily submitted herself recently. A committee of twenty representing the reporters assigned to the case conducted the inquiry.

The New York Times in commenting on this session said it would take a long search through the records of "celebrated cases" to find anything even remotely resembling the inquiry. "If anything is an established custom, founded on well-recognized and entirely valid reasons, it is that of lawyers in ordering clients accused or suspected of crime not to talk, and especially not to talk to newspaper men. This custom is observed no less when the lawyer believes in the client's innocence than when he has his doubts about it, or even is sure of his guilt. Yet in this instance, obviously with the consent and presumably on the advice of her counsel, Mrs. Hall subjected herself to prolonged questioning in the presence of 20 reporters, on the scope of whose inquiries no restrictions had been placed, and, to make the episode still more remarkable, her lawyer quitted the room before the inquiry began and left her without his control or protection to tell what she chose or what the inquisitors could extort," says the Times.

It speaks well for the men of the press that an attorney would go so far as to risk his client's welfare in the hands of 20 newspaper men seeking sensational copy. The attorney's trust was well borne out, for of the 296 submitted Mrs. Hall answered all but one frankly. The newspaper men have been on the assignment for eight weeks, and it has been due to their indefatigable efforts that a solution of the double tragedy is believed in sight. The costs to the home papers have been heavy but well worth the output. There has been much complaint from "outraged constant readers" over the space given to the murder, but the editorial replies have been to the effect that public interest warranted the full details. And the end is not yet.

Milk Rations.

Drawing the board's attention to the considerate interest in the well-being of the little ones manifested by local Rotarians in furnishing each kindergarten kiddie in King Edward school with half a pint of milk each day, Inspector Mowat suggested suitable acknowledgment from the board

On motion by Messrs. McKone and Denne, the secretary was instructed to forward to the club the board's warmest appreciation of the Rotarians 'care for the health of these children.

New Teachers.

The committee on appointments reported and recommended that Miss Adelaide Batten and Miss Irene E. Madill be appointed to the Public school staff, to succeed Miss Dix and Miss Chapman, who have resigned, the initial salary in each case to be $900.00 and duties to commence 3rd January next.

This recommendation, submitted by Acting Chairman Roland Denne, carried unanimously.

There were present Chairman A. A. Fowler, Mrs. W. R. Morris, Roland Denne, E. B. Fowler, J. M. Greene, J. A. McKone, W. J. Worth, Inspetcor A. Mowat and Principal H. R. H. Kenner of the Collegiate Institute.

GRAND — John Barrymore in Sherlock Holmes, a remarkable Goldwyn picture. Also 3-act Pantages vaudeville.

ROYAL— William Fox presents Tom Mix in "Just Tony," a story of the highest interest-holding order, staged with an unusual scenic background. Also comedies and educational features.

CAPITOL —"To Have and To Hold," Mary Johnston's famous story shown on the screen—a romance of Crown colony days full of thrills.

REGENT— Alice Lake in "The Golden Gift," Charlie Chaplin in "His New Job."

AT THE ROYAL.

It is of more than passing interest to note that one horse of all the horses in the country carries such an unusual individuality that plans are under way to use him as the model in a statuary piece typifying the spirit of the West.

And so it is with "Tony," the prized horse of Tom Mix, the Fox star. The beauty and intelligence of this animal, his loyalty to his master and his willingness to respond to any demand made on him, no matter how perilous, have gone far toward preserving the life of Tom Mix. And because "Tony" is all that the West expects of a horse—and that means everything — it has been planned to erect a statue to the Western horse, using "Tony" as the model. It will be a memorial not only to "Tony," but to the hundreds of thousands of horses that have helped to "make the West."

"Tony" is featured in Mix's picture which will be shown at the Royal for the last time to-night. The story is based on Max Brand's internationally distributed book, "Alcatraz."

The Royal Theatre has been rented for Monday evening Dec. 11th to "Skovgaard" the great Danish violinist and Alice McClung Skovgaard, pianist.

For three years young Skovgaard was a favorite pupil of this eminent master of the Royal High School of Music of Berlin, where he also, during that period, held the position as solo violinist and concert-master of the distinguished Royal High School Orchestra. Since the age of twelve Skovgaard has been concertizing in the Scandinavian countries, Belgium, Germany, Holland and England and he made his first appearance in America in 1903 when he appeared as soloist with the New York Symphony Orchestra under Walter Damrosch. He later made an extended tour through the United States and Canada with this orchestra including a number of appearances in Carnegie Hall, New York; in Boston Symphony Society Hall; in Chicago, Montreal and Toronto, as well as enumerable engagements in other cities throughout this country.

To quote the press: "Mme Skovgaard is an accompanist and solo performer supreme. Her interpretations evidence thes judgment and grasp of an accomplished musician. And, while her playing is full of feminine delicacy strength and character go with it to a surprising degree." Another critic says: "Beauty, grace ease of presence, wonderful technique, full command of each number, ability to bring from the piano every ounce of volume needed to support the soloist, or on the other hand, to play the daintiest passages, with a touch as light as that of fairy fingers, proves Mme. Skovgaard to be mistress of the piano."

MAY McAVOY TRIUMPHS IN EMOTIONAL APPEAL

Thursday, Friday and Saturday at the Capitol Theatre.

Picture lovers are finding a real treat in "Everything For Sale" in which May McAvoy, lately elevated to stardom by Realart Pictures, is being shown.

May McAvoy has won her spurs because of an ability to gain from a role its last modicum of heart interest; because of a face that is marvelously expressive, and a personality which is at all times simple and natural. In fact perhaps the nicest thing ever said about this little miss is that "one does not think of the actress at work—but of a real girl and her trial and tribulations as revealed on the screen."

Miss McAvoy's recent releases have given her parts more or less "type" significance. "Grizel" of "Sentimental Tommy" was a wistful Scotch child; "Jeanne" of "A Private Scandal," a shy French refugee.

To show that the star's range extends far beyond this type of work. Realart is now presenting her in "Everything For Sale" a modern society drama with an underlying motif of appeal to ninety-nine people out of one hundred.

Miss McAvoy appears as Helen Wainwright, a girl fresh from finishing school who is confronted with the age-old problem of marriage for love—or for money.

The heroines reactions to this important question are made especially entertaining by a series of intensely dramatic episodes, including an exciting sequence in which the hero was actually battered into unconsciousness by the buffeting he received against wave-swept rocks.

As an added attraction the Capitol will offer each Thursday, Friday and Saturday, commencing tomorrow, one of the short stories, direct from the original stories by Sir Conan Doyle, packed into their brief length a gratifying amount of drama, thrill and suspense. They keep you guessing right up to the last minute, carrying the same gripping power that made the same stories so widely read.

A THRILLING ROMANCE AND GOOD VAUDEVILLE.

Good Programme at the Grand For the Last Half of This Week—Big Time N.V.E.

The new Goldwyn picture, "Yellow men and Gold," coming to the Grand Theatre for three days, beginning to-morrow, Thursday, is one of Gouverneur Morris' most thrilling romances for the screen. It is fundamentally an adventure story filled with hair-raising episodes and dominated by a beautiful love story.

In the manner of telling the story, Goldwyn Company has shown the artistic restraint necessary for a convincing portrayal of an imaginative tale. Among the incidents is a race at sea between two schooners, each carying a group of treasure seekers. There is a hand to hand struggle when they reach an island in mid-ocean with victory coming at last to the legal possessors of the secretly buried treasure. However a mere recital of incidents cannot convey the rich flavor of adventure that runs through the story.

Pathos and love go hand in hand up to the sacrifice of her life by an adventuress, whose last act is to free the man she loves from the complications that her existence has helped to bring about. Rosemary Theby plays the role of the adventuress with marvellous effectiveness. Never in her career has she acted more sincerely. She wears no gorgeous clothes, she has no moments of elation; yet her art is so genuine that the observer shares her sorrows.

The leading roles have been entrusted to Helene Chadwick and Richard Dix, who have played opposite each other in several Goldwyn productions. Miss Chadwick's part calls for the portrayal of an American girl who has been saved from death as a child by a Chinese sea captain and brought up by him on board his ship. In this part, demanding a suggestion of the fantastic, Miss Chadwick is the delightful ingenue. No one can deny that Richard Dix had every reason to fall in love with her especially after she had saved his life.

Richard Dix as the daring adventurer, who has to fight his way to the lost island and there dig up the hull of a sunken galleon that had been stranded on the shore, plays with all the dash and vigor of an actor given his first big part. As an out of doors man as well as a drawing room lover, Richard Dix is equally at his ease.

Clayton Hamilton, who was formerly a professor of English literature at Columbia University, and is now on the editorial staff of Goldwyn, carefuly edited the finished picture and saw to it that a perfectly balanced photodrama left the Goldwyn studios.

Much credit for the scenic effects goes to Cedric Gibbons, whose design for motion picture sets have attracted the attention of many authorities on decoration and architecture. He invariably catches the spirit of a production and gives it form in the settings he devises.

"Yellow Men and Gold," was directed most vigorously by Irvin Willat. It is the first Goldwyn production he has directed and he carries out closely the ideas of the author, Gouverneur Morris. hough the story was difficult to transfer to the screen the production is one of the most entertaining adventure tales ever produced.

A comedy and News Reel toegther with the best refined Pantages vaudeville, consisting of "Happ Simpson,' comedy acrobat, and Vincent and Davey, lady and gentleman singing and talking duo, will round out another wonderful programe of entertainment at the bargain prices asked.

GOVERNMENT DONATES A PARK VIMY RIDGE.

HAMILTON, Dec. 6.—(Canadian Press.)—Hon. E. C. Mewburn, chairman Canadian Battlefields Memorial Commission, has been notified by Hon. Rudolphe Lemieux, that the French Government has given Canada 25 acres on Vimy Ridge for a park, where the mammoth memorial planned by the Commission will be located.

Fails to Sell Half Dollars at 25 Cents, Loses $200 Wager and is Fined $2 in Court

NEW YORK, Dec. 6.—It cost Jack Cohen, 37 years old, of 58 Manhattan Avenue, just $202 to try to sell fifty-cent pieces to New Yorkers at the bargain price of 25 cents each; $200 was the money he lost by not making a sale inside of fifteen minutes and $2 was a fine imposed by Magistrate Rytenburg in the West Side Court for trying to sell without a license.

Cohen insisted that New Yorkers daily proved the truth of P. T. Barnum's saying. William Wolf, a shoe salesman from St. Louis, where doubters are born faster than suckers, told Cohen he was all wrong about New York. Wolf said it was a tough town to beat. So Cohen entered into an agreement to sell $50 of silver half dollars at a quarter each in fifteen minutes.

He put each half dollar in a small envelope marked "blind bargain" and started to sell at Broadway and Forty-ninth Street, where Cohen insisted there were plenty of easy marks. A few persons picked up the envelopes, felt, smelled and weighed them in their hands, but were not convinced that what was inside was worth twice the price asked.

After a few minutes Patrolman Har came along and told Cohen to move alon. He did so, and when he tried again Harty again moved him on. Little Tim had nothing on Cohen when it came to being moved, and the fifteen minutes went by without his having made a sale. But at the end of fourteen minutes he had a summons to appear in court. Cohen paid his fine with four of the half dollars, after the clerk dropped them on his desk, bit them and otherwise made sure they were legal tender.

TAKES WHITE RAT TO BED IN HOSPITAL AS "COMPANY"

SAN LEANDRO, Calif., Dec. 6.—Nurses attending William Francis, 12 years old, at the county hospital, recieved the shock of their lives while preparing to dress an ugly wound in his foot when a white rat poked forth an inquisitive face and blinked with its red eyes from beneath the covers. Francis was called on to explain.

He and his chum, he said, had been camping in the hills with their pet, the rat. A broken bottle cut the boys foot, resulting in his removal to the hospital.

The rodent was smuggled unde the covers by his companion, Fred Mulgree, "to keep him company," he said. He informed the attendants that the rat's name was Timmy.

OBITUARY

CORNELIUS HAYES.

Cornelius Hayes, aged 68 years, son of the late James Hayes, of Skibbereen, Otonabee township, died this morning in the hospital at Sudbury, where he had lived for many years.

CLARA ALICE HETHERINGTON

The death occurred yesterday afternoon of Clara Alice Hetherington, the seven-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. Hetherington, 33 Jackson Avenue, following a brief illness. Three sisters, namely, Hazel, Helen and Florence, and one brother, Kenneth, all survive.

The funeral will take place tomorrow afternoon to Little Lake Cemetery. Rev. W. E. Morrow will officiate.

IN MEMORIAM.

KENNEDY.—In loving memory of our dear brother, Joseph Gordon Kennedy, who passed away Dec. 6th, 1921.

It is just one year ago to-day
Since God, our darling called away.
Forget him? No, we never will,
Though years may pass, we'll love him still.

Missed at home by loving parents,
By his sisters, fond and true,
By his little baby brother,
And at school by all he knew.

—Inserted by Parents, Brother and Sisters.

Remembrance

A Man doesn't have to starve his Wife to death to be guilty of neglect.

Thoughtlessness about little things—like Flowers—is the kind of neglect that hurts.

Does your Wife know you think of her?

"Say it with Flowers."

OPERATING SURPLUS OF $602,709.03 FOR C.N.R.

Grand Trunk's Surplus Was $885,387.13 in September.

OTTAWA, Dec. 6. — (Canadian Press). — The Canadian National Railways, including the Grand Trunk, had an operating surplus in September of $1,458,096, or more than double what it was in September last year. The Canadian National Railways, apart from the Grand Trunk, had an operating surplus of $602,709.03, in comparison with one of $467,684.72 in September, 1921. The Grand Trunk's operating surplus was $855,387.13 in September, 1922, and $127,897.21 in September, 1921.

September is the month in which new grain begins to move in large quantities to lake carriers and to the sea, and there has been much speculation how recent reductions in freight rates would affect earnings. From statistics made available to-day, it is apparent that the reductions in rates have been more than offset by the increase in freight traffic.

This season's great wheat crop will no doubt have been largely responsible.

PAISLEY FOR EVER CRY FASHION CREATOR.

"Paisley forever!" says the fashionable woman and buys herself negligees, chemises, petticoats and slips of Paisley-patterned fabrics.

Nobody thought it would last — this vogue for far eastern designs. Having proved their beauty through several centuries, however, Indian and Persian patterns can easily withstand the strain of being discovered by modern designs. They even can survive being popular!

The favorite blouse for a three-piece suit is still Paisley-patterned crepe de chine or velvet. So is the favorite afternoon gown. That's ancient history. Bringing the subject down to topics of the day the newest negligees are of Paisley-patterned corduroy. Underwear — slips, chemises and petticoats (where such survive) are being made of Paisley crepe de chine and Paisley glove silk underwear is being sold in the smartest shops.

SPLIT THREATENS THE TWO BASEBALL LEAGUES.

LOUISVILLE, Dec. 6. — (Special.) — A split threatens between the major and minor baseball leagues.

DON'T LISTEN TO TALES, OF THE SPECULATORS.

A Five Per Cent. Investment Is Much Safer Than a Twenty-five Per Cent. One.

NEW YORK,—"If you've a friend and want to keep him—

Never loan him money.

"Never, though repeatedly urged, tell him candidly what you think of his character, his children or his private stock.

"Never take his advice as to your investments."

Thus Miss Eleanor Kerr, financial statistician for a Wall Street municipal bond house.

"I's Very Easy

"If you are a widow,' ' she says, 'with your husband's insurance in a lump sum, or if your great aunt left you a legacy, it's the easiest thing to lend ear to a friend who knows an investment paying up to 22 1-2 per cent.

"But don't listen. Hie you to a dependable bank and consult its financial adviser. What he'll probably suggest will be an investment paying closer to five per cent. But you will not awake some morning to find principal and interest vanished into thin air."

Home-staying women are not alone unwise in their investments; business women are just as indiscreet, Miss Kerr adds.

To the woman who depends on inherited money for support Miss Kerr recommends bonds of the class legal for savings banks.

To the business woman she suggests the safe investment of a certain sum and speculation, if desired with what's left.

"But no matter what the circumstances," she concludes, "a woman will always be safe in consulting her bank before investing."

SHE'S AGAINST MEN

(By H. I. Phillips)

Mrs. S. O. Ess replies to a request for a contribution from Mr. F. O. Bee.

Dear Mr. Bee:

I have your letter requesting me to contribute something to the Fund to Build Larger Writing Rooms for Self-Made Elevator Men and Establish Permanent Fire Lines Around All Girls' Universities. I take my pen in hand to tell you that such a suggestion has ruined my day and started me off on the worse ink spree I have had in months.

I am against men in any form whatever. Particularly am I against self-made men, although a self-made man conscious of his self-making is less objectionable than a self made man who isn't. The trouble with most self-made men is that they think they head the League of Cathedral Builders and Perfect Product Manufacturers.

If I had my way I would burn all self-made business men. Also all their letters. And I would not stop to sift the ashes.

The men of our country do not need more writing rooms. What they need is to stop talking through their toupees, stop smoking their rubbers, give up their self-satisfied manners stop their barbers from powdering their backs or their necks and ears, cease chewing peppermint for their breaths, and stop using wing collars as fenders when eating raspberry pie or soft-boiled eggs.

Of all the fool things in the world I think the idea of self-made men is the worst. When a young man, scorning further schooling, enters an office to learn a business, he has only the satisfaction of knowing that it will be a good trick if he does learn it.

When they graduate (at the end of thirty years) to the position of fifth deputy bookkeeper they know nothing about solid geometry, calculus, logarithms, the Einstein theory of dimensions, Greek and Roman literature, astronomy, or the Book of Etiquette.

They can't even conjugate a Latin verb decently and the chances they will ever grab off a Phi Beta Kappa key are practically null and void. They have their brains twisted by studying Kelly pool, the Babe Ruth baseball articles, Dempsey's reply to Tex Rickard, and the proper proportion of water to mix with alcohol to get synthetic gin—a lot of stuff that could have been concocted (I refer especially to the gin) only in brains of men who write 'How I became a Whiz at the Age of thirty-two" and similar twaddle.

Men used to be highly respected and honored by the women. But that day has passed away, and this is due to the effect bunk is having on young men of to-day than to anything else or vice versa and likewise pro and con and etcetera.

I remember when men were looked up to by women. We even used to think them grand! ! ! But that was before they started writing foolish letters.

Not so many years ago we were polite and considerate toward them and would even listen attentively to their views on politics, world events, and business. To-day we are abrupt and contemptuous in their presence, we laugh in their faces when they talk politics, and when it comes to business we are better men than they are, Gunga Din. Women to-day even serve on juries that vote to hang men!

Men Poof! A couple of poofs! They should be labelled: "For use for laughing purposes only."

Nothing could be better for the self-made men that are now in our allied trades than to yank them out and put them to hard study in a university for at least fifty of sixty years so that there might be put into their heads some little trace of sense.

Hoping your main cables are regularly inspected, I am very truly yours,

MRS. S. O. ESS.

—P.S. —I forgot to say that I do not intend to contribute a dime toward your cause.

HOIST IRISH COLOURS ON VICEREGAL LODGE.

DUBLIN, Dec. 6.—(Special.) — The Irish tri-color was hoisted over the vice-regal lodge here to-day. The Republicans are reported to be planning a coup d'etat under the leadership of Liam Lynch.

There is a marked resemblance between the dwarf chameleon, the little eight-inch long reptile that lives in the Kamerun of Africa, and that giant prehistoric reptile called triceratops, which was twenty feet long and eight feet high.

Prolonged Reading Strains The Eyes

Don't overwork them, as nature will rebel if you do.

FOREIGNERS BUY BERLIN "STREETS"

Prussian Diet Taking Up Question of Limiting Purchases,

"VALUTA" METHOD

BERLIN, Dec. 7.—On October 25 the Prussian Diet dealt with the question as to whether it was possible to prevent foreigners purchasing German houses wholesale. In dealing with the point Herr Hirtsiefler, Minister of Public Welfare, drew attention to the fact that it was not possible to refuse to foreigners residing in Germany the usual international rights. Presumably those members who interpellated the Government were imbued with the idea of quod licet Jovi non licet bovi, or had forgotten that previous to the war matters were the other way round, and it was the German who has taken root everywhere in the world, and turning whole towns and districts into German conclaves. In Germany the foreigner was much about in the same position as the Jew in Aberdeen, he found that the Aberdonians did him, and was obliged to seek other fields of activity.

For some reason or other, whereas practically everything has kept pace with the devaluation of the mark and caused prices to attain to dizzy heights, house property has lagged considerably behind, and high "exchange" foreigners have taken advantage of the exchange and purchased houses wholesale. It is of course easy for them to clear off the mortgages as the sums in marks remain the same as they were before the war—and parenthetically remarked mortgages are in a very bad way.

Thus a house costing, say a quarter of a million marks in 1914, with a mortgage of 100,000 marks, can be purchased for one million to-day, and the 100,000 gold marks mortgage money paid off in 100,000 paper marks, equal to 100 gold marks.

Large French Purchases.

At the present moment whole streets in Berlin have passed into the hands of non-Germans. A foreigner settling down here has difficulties in getting a flat, consequently he buys a house and runs up a new storey. It may be mentioned here that the number of foreigners coming to settle in Germany is still very large, though the authorities try all they can to keep them out. But the fact that you can live in Germany like a fighting-cock for two dollars a day acts as a strong inducement to retired people of limited means to come over here and live on them.

According to statements in the Prussian Diet, 200 houses are sold monthly to foreigners in Berlin, and alone on October 17th 87 passed out of German hands. There are 300 house agents in the metropolis catering for non-German buyers. More than 25 per cent. of all houses in Wiesbaden have been purchased by Frenchmen. The house in which your correspondent lives was bought the other day by a Dutchman as an item in a lot of 28 houses.

If it were not for the rent restriction acts in Germany, the rentals would have gone up four hundred fold, which would mean that 80 per cent. of the population would no longer be able to pay their rent. For this reason the foreigner purchasing houses here may be making good investment for the future, but he will have to bide his time and hang on if he wants to make a really good profit. And, as a matter of fact, the system of buying whole houses with thirty to forty flats is also adopted by well-to-do Germans on the look-out for homes themselves. As the owner of a house has no power to eject a tenant and take his flat, he resorts to putting a new storey on top of the house, and, if necessary, constructing an elevator to take him up to his new floor.

SPEAKING OF STENOGRAPHERS!

Enid Wentworth wins the international love championship in the stenographers' league. There are 30 males on the staff of the London business house where she is employed. In the ten years she has worked there—Enid is 26—she has been engaged to each one of them. Now she is marrying the owner and all her old lovers will be at the church to wish her well. The 30 engagement rings, which she returned, have been inset in a clock which the firm is presenting her as a reminder of her adventures in romance.

CONDOLENCE TO TWO FAMILIES

Council Refers to Death of W. J. Johnston and Mrs. Jos. Metheral.

The following resolutions of condolence were passed by the City Council last night:

Moved by Ald. Turner, seconded by Ald. Jones, that the Council of the City of Peterborough desires to express and record its deep regret on account of the death of ex-Alderman William J. Johnston, who was for several years a member of this Council and also previously a member of the Council of the village of Ashburnham, now a part of this City. The late Mr. Johnston was an active member of the Council and chairman of several important Committees, and gave the community in that capacity zealous and useful service. We are also expressing the sentiment of the community in voicing our regret on account of the death of a highly respected and useful citizen, and we wish to express to Mrs. Johnston and her family our sincerest sympathy.

Moved by Ald. Jones, seconded by Ald. Turner, That this Council express to ex-Alderman Joseph Metheral, a former member of this Council, their deep sympathy with him in the bereavement he has been called upon to suffer in the death of Mrs. Metheral, and also to her son, Mr. A. G. Metheral, plumbing inspector, and the other members of the family. The late Mrs. Metheral was beloved by her friends and highly esteemed by all who knew her, and in tendering sympathy to Mr. Metheral and his family, the Council is expressing the feeling of the community.

MORAL SUASION IS BETTER THAN FORCE

For Promotion of Temperance, Says J.J. Morrison

TORONTO, Dec. 7—"We have ceased to teach temperance and are trying to do it with a club," said J. J. Morrison in addressing the members of St. John's Lodge, I.O.G.T. at Williard Hall.

"I want to tell you it won't work out," he continued. "We have changed our system from moral suasion to force, and force alone is not a success. Some people will say this is heresy, and I will be criticized for my beliefs, but when something is wrong it is up to the old people to point it out and I have been dry for over 61 years."

Mr. Morrison condemned the making of home brew, because young people learned the habit in the home and maintained that we would have to revert to the old order of things.

BACK FROM "GRAVE"— FINDS WIFE RE-WED.

Man Who Posed as Dead Shot By Mate.

DEEISON, O., Dec. 7.—Because her first husband, Edward J. Vorbach, 26 years old, Morgantown, W. Va., whom she believed to have been killed in an automobile accident, appeared at her home in Dennison, last March 13, as if from the grave, Mrs. Virginia R. Vorbach, 22 years old, was obliged to obtain a divorce from Vorbach and to be wed the second time to Edwin Russell Evans, 22 years old. She was married the first time to Evans last December, in the belief that Vorbach was dead.

It became known that Vorbach had a girl write to his wife telling her that he had been killed in an automobile accident. She did not learn her mistake until last March, when Vorbach appeared. He was a guest of his wife, their 6-year-old daughter, Virginia Vorbach, and Evans, for a few days before the three quarreled. Vorbach received a revolver wound in his shoulder. He said his wife fired the shot.

Mrs. Vorbach stated that she acted in defense of their daughter, who, she said, Vorbach had attempted to poison. It later developed that he was innocent of the charge.

Mrs. Vorbach obtained a divorce in Tuscarawas County Common Pleas Court, and the following day she and Evans were remarried.

CHATHAM NEGRO ACTED LIKE A MAD DOG.

Suffering From What Physicians Pronounce a Form of Hydrophobia.

CHATHAM, Ont., Dec. 7.—(Canadian Press.)— Alfred Baynard, a negro, was placed in a padded cell at the county jail last night, suffering from what physicians are inclined to believe to be a form of hydrophobia. Frothing at the mouth and shrieking vile oaths, Baynard, naked, gave a posse of farmers a chase of five miles before he was captured. He was bound with ropes until the arrival of police officers, and brought to the county jail.

AMERICAN SHIPPING STILL ON INCREASE.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 7.—(Canadian Press). — The growth of the United States shipping in foreign trade, the establishment of extensive passenger service in the North Atlantic, and the Pacific to South America are the outstanding achievements claimed by the United States Government Shipping Board in its annual report.

Martial Law Proclaimed Throughout Bulgaria—Another Throne Totters and May Disappear

SOLDIERS TAKE PART

SOFIA, Dec. 7. — (Special). — Many prominent persons are reported to have been assassinated in a serious uprising at Kustendil, as a result of which martial law was declared throughout Bulgaria today.

All restaurants and threatres have been ordered closed. Troops which had been driven from Kustendil by the mutineers re-occupied the city without meeting serious resistance.

The reserve officers participating in the uprising now known to have been led by three plotters known as Alexandrof, Michaelof and Athanassof.

BIG INCREASE CANADA'S DEBT

Jumps $22,848,672 During Last Twelve Months—Heavy Interest Payments.

OTTAWA, Dec 7.—(Canadian Press).— Heavy interest payments on the public debt during the month of November are responsible for an increase in the net debt of Canada, total $21,876,792. On October 31, the debt stood at $2,369,759,026 while on November 30 it totalled $2,391,635,818

During the month of November last year the net debt increased $39,524,243. Comparison of figures of the debt on Noverber 30, of the present year with those of the same date a year ago show an increase of $22,848,672 during twelve months. Total interest payments on the public debt last month were $39,844,621 as compared with $45,935,362 in November 1921.

Total revenues collected during November, show an increase over November 1921 of $4,160,865. Last month revenues from all sources amounted to $33,815,833 as against $29,654,968 a year ago. For the first six months of the fiscal year which ended on November 30, the revenue totalled $270,651,484 or $4,930,173 more than during a similiar period in 1921, when the total was $265,721,311.

PROF. ZAVITZ TALKS ON PLAN FOR NEW PARK

Provincial Forester Explains Problem of Planting Trees on Armour's Hill for Memorial Park

LUNCH AT EMHRESS

Professor E. J. Zavitz, Provincial Forester of the Forestry Department of the Ontario Government, who is in the city to-day to advise and to estimate on the question of planting trees and shrubs on Armour's Hill, which the prospective situation for the Memorial Park, was received and lunched at the Empress Hotel by the Chamber of Commerce.

A large number of representatives from different organizations in the city were present.

The Chamber of Commerce was represented by Secretary Leon Frazer, the Horticultural Society, by Dr. Middleton; the Loan Committee, by Dr. Harvey, Ashburnham Patriotic League, by several ladies; the city by Ald. Stocker, the Board of Education by Mrs. Morris, together with a representative of the G.W.V.A. and several others.

Thomas Tooms, M.P.P., acted as chairman, and introduced the distinguished visitor to the gathering and explained that he had come to the city mainly to see what could be done in regard to planting trees and shrubs in the proposed new park on Armour's Hill. The object of this project, stated the speaker, is to provide something of a permanent character to remind us of our boys' supreme sacrifice overseas, and also of ideals we should aim for in the future.

The many advantages of the proposed park were pointed out and on the strength of the city council favoring the plan, which will be submitted to the people for vote, the representative men present at this luncheon are going ahead with their preparations. It is fully expected that the bylaw for this park project will be carried at the elections.

Directly to the Point.

Professor E. J. Zavitz made a brief speech but directly to the point. He expressed his great appreciation of being invited to Peterborough and of the warm reception given him on his arrival.

Professor Zavitz briefly outlined as he understood the situation, what constituted the city's problem in planting a piece of land with trees and shrubs, which will be dedicated in honor of the soldeir dead.

He concluded his address by stating that the Forestry Department was greatly interested in the creation of similar parks in Ontario, that a supply of small trees and shrubs is on hand, and if seen fit, will be contributed to the city.

The meeting was adjourned for Professor Zavitz to make an inspection of the site, and express his opinion on the whole proposition, this afternoon. He leaves the city on the 3.50 train to-day.

A CARUSO MEMORIAL LAST 18 CENTURIES.

NEW YORK, Dec. 7.—(Canadian Press).—A candle of chemically treated bees' wax, five feet in circumference at the base and 16 feet high, known as the Enrico Caruso Memorial, has just been completed here. The cost was $3,700, given by New York Orphan Asylum, of which Caruso was a generous benefactor. It will be shipped to Pompeii, Italy, for the church Caruso last worshipped in. It will burn 24 hours each All Saints' Day. It is expected it will last 18 centuries.

A CORELESS APPLE IS NOW BEING PRODUCED

Discovery Announced at the Annual Meeting of Fruit Growers in Montreal—Will Revolutionize Apple Growing in Canada—Ready to Pay One Million Dollars for Results.

MONTREAL, December 7 (Canadian Press). — Much enthusiasm was evoked at the annual meeting of the Pomological and Fruit Growing Society of the Province of Quebec at Macdonald College, St. Anne's, by the announcement yesterday of the discovery at Abbotsford of a seedless, coreless variety of the Fameuse apple. Business was suspended for some time while apple growers assembled, examined, and tested the specimens.

Professor F. C. Seers, of Amherst, Mass., Horticultural College, examined the fruit, and pronounced it evidently Fameuse in every essential detail. He, too, agreed that if it could be reproduced, it would prove of great value.

The discoverer said he had made his discovery purely by accident.

The representative of a large fruit distributing firm in Montreal assured the grower of these coreless apples that if the latter would produce the parent apple trees from which they were grown, and prove that it would reproduce trees by grafts, giving similar fruit, he would guarantee a million dollars for it, as it would revolutionise the apple growing industry in Canada.

UPWARD MOVE IN INDUSTRY

Labor Conditions in Peterborough Show Improvement Over Those of Last Year.

Labour conditions in and around Peterborough are improving and are far better than a year ago at this time. Most outside employment activities are stopped for the winter months, such as the construction of highways, constructing and operating of canals, all local navigation and all business connected with the numerous summer resorts. The main sources of outdoor employment these days are lumber camps and farms.

Manufacturers of steel products in the city are only doing approximately sixty per cent. of their average output. The black cloud in this line, however, is fading gradually away and the different industries are picking up to normal conditions once more.

At Labour Bureau.

At the present time there is only about one hundred and fifty men in this district registered at the local labor bureau, seeking employment. This is a comparatively small figure to that reached last winter. New construction work is almost dead as far as this city is concerned. The only employment in the carpentering line obtainable this season is a few repair jobs that have become absolutely necessary.

It is forecasted that the coming of the New Year will doubtless usher in a more prosperous industrial period. The various factories that have been at a standstill, are once more starting their wheels of production revolving, and thus the number of this city's unemployed will be reduced to a minimum it is expected.

An Upward Movement.

OTTAWA, Dec. 7. — (Canadian Press.) — Returns from 6,600 firms spread over Canada showed that on November first they had 6,810 more persons employed than on the first of the month before. The upward movement started last April and has been going upward ever since. This is all the more marked this month as there was a big falling off in construction industries which has been more than offset by increases in other lines. Activity in manufacturing industries as a whole, logging, mining, transportation and trade divisions increased considerably.

SUPERINTENDENT ROGERS IS NOW ON RETIRED LIST.

Has Been Connected with the Criminal Investigation in Ontario for 40 Years.

TORONTO, Dec. 7.—(Canadian Press).—Joseph Rogers, superintendent of Provincial Police Force, has retired on pension after having been associated with investigation of criminal matters in Ontario for nearly 40 years. That phase of the departments work will henceforth be under Deputy Commissioner of Police Alfred Cuddy. Staff Inpector Alfred Paxton will take over enforcement of O.T.A. which has been directed by Cuddy in past.

Because of the prevailing fad for bobbed hair, Leominster, an important centre of the comb and hairpin industry, has been hard hit.

REPORT WAS FAR FROM FAVOURABLE.

Mr. A. E. Dixon wishes to correct a report in last night's Examiner of a meeting of the shareholders, in which he is reparted to have made a favorable report. He made no report about the proposed new company or syndicate, regarding which he has absolutely no information, and his report as to the condition of the affairs of the Birmingham Company, now in liquidation was far from favorable from the standpoint of the shareholders.

TURKS FAVOR BRITISH PLAN AND NOT REDS

Peace Conference Proceeds Harmoniously in Spite of Many Difficult Problems That Crop Up.

TURKS IMPRESSED

LAUSANNE, Dec. 7.—(Canadian Press).—The Turkish delegates to the conference face the difficult problem in formulating plans for the control of the Dardanelles, whether she will throw in her lot with the Allies and the United States or with Russia. If Turkey goes over to the British camp and accepts the Allied plan she fears the irate Russian army on her eastern frontier. If she sides with Russia in demanding the complete control of the waterway, she fears the British Navy in the Straits.

Ismet Pasha and his associates were greatly impressed by the plan presented by Lord Curzon yesterday on behalf of the Entente, which was approved in general by a statement of the position of the United States. The Turks apparently cannot forget that Russia is Turkey's traditional enemy and that Premier Lenine's Government may be not less covetous of Constantinople and the Straits than was Russia in days of Czars.

Turkey has always found protection in numbers. She has played the European countries against each other to her great advantage time and again, and she hesitates to trust her fate to Russia alone, while the rest of Europe, supported by the United States, opposes an effort to turn the Black Sea into a Russian lake.

Summarized, the allied plan as presented by Lord Curzon, provides that in time of peace merchant vessels sahll have "complete freedom of navigation and passage by day and night, under any flag and with any kind of cargo, without any formalities or tax or charge whatsoever." In time of war, Turkey being neutral, she shall have the same right. In time of war, Turkey being neutral, belligerent, neutral vessels and commercial aircrafts shall have freedom under restriction, not carrying men or contrabands for the foes of Turkey, and Turkey shall have the rigth of search.

TRAIN STRIKES TOURING CAR NEAR AUBURN

Mr. and Mrs. George Grant and Daughter, of Auburn, Thrown 20 Feet,

AUTO WRECKED

This morning a touring car owned by George Grant, 1033 Water street was struck by the Lakefield boun G.T.R. train at 8.40 a.m. at t Water Street crossing near Aubu Mr. Grant was driving south Water street, with his wife and girl, Anna, in the back seat. Th ter was on her way to school.

As he approached the railroad crossing Grant's attention was attracted by several little children on the road, and he did not notice the approacr of the train until his wife called to him. The noise of the train was deadened by the snow on the ground. Grant applied the brakes but the car was on the tracks before he could stop. The train struck the rear end of the car, throwing the occupants a distance of approximately twenty feet and smashing both back wheels and the rear of the car wrich was thrown into the ditch beside the road. Mr. Grant was badly cut above the right eye and about the face, his wife was picked up in an unconscious condition being severely bruised about the head, while little Anna escaped with a shaking up. The ambulance was quickly summoned and Mrs. Grant was taken to Nicholls Hospital, where it was reported she would recover.

Mr. Grant is a farmer at Auburn, where he has resided for several years, and made a practice of bringing his little daugther to school in the morning.

The G. T. R. train stopped for about a half an hour, until Mrs. Grant was removed to the hospital.

TO COLLECT CHARGES ON COKE SHIPMENTS.

NEW YORK, Dec. 7—(Canadian Press).)—The Coal and Coke Association announced yesterday arrangements had been completed to accept beginning next week all rail and coke shipments from United States points to Canadian destinations with charges to collect.

This follows the announcement of Canadian railroads that they had withdrawn their requirements that freight charges to the border on coal and coke shipments to Canada must be prepaid. The withdrawal order is effective December 10.

The prepay requirements was put into effect at the time the Canadian rate of exchange was considerably below par.

Simplicity For Daylight

New winter frocks for daytime wear are extremely simple in their lines. Straight chemise dresses are varied with the newer draped dresses, but both are seen many times in the course of a stroll along Fifth Avenue. For evening gowns drapes are practically indispensable.

Poiret twill and tricotine are standard for day wear, of course, but there are many new woollen materials as well. Wool crepe is one of them, that is seen in jacquard patterns as well as plain.

Velvet is the real aristocrat of the season, however, for both day and evening. It is fashionable in a variety of brocade patterns as well as in its native simplicity.

LATEST BLOUSES MATCH THE HATS

The fashion of having a three-piece suit look as nearly like a one-piece costume as possible gives rise to various subterfuges.

The latest is to have your hat match the blouse or the blouse section of your new winter suit. Little round narrow-brimmed soft hats or turbans are often found in this combination, and either Paisley patterned material or badanna handkerchiefs are the popular materials.

Another way of making the blouse an integral part of the suit, instead of a variable accessory, is to have the coat lined with the material from which the blouse is made. Both of these ideas are being featured by well-known New York stores.

STORM WRECKS COMMUNICATIONS.

VANCOUVER, December 7. Canadian Press. — The telegraphic wires were levelled and communications with outside points interrupted for several hours when a severe storm swept over the lower mainland of British Columbia shortly before midnight and continued until early yesterday morning. Snow to the depth of about an inch fell in the coast districts. Forty miles east of Vancouver a gale was reported in the Frazer Valley, resulting in communication being cut off shortly before 11 o'clock last night. The wires to the south were also interrupted but in the morning communication was recovered both east and south.

Vancouver Island and shipping on the gulf also felt the force of the storm but no serious damage had been reported yesterday morning.

COUNCIL WANTS BANK SYSTEM INVESTIGATED

Resolution Passed Declaring That Centralization of Control is Not in the Best Interests of the Country.

ROYAL COMMISSION.

WINNIPEG, Lec. 7.—(Canadian Press)—The appointment of a Royal Commission of three members to enquire generally into the question of the Canadian banking system, in view of the revision of the act which is expected at the next session of Parliament, was recommended yesterday in a resolution passed by the Canadian Council of Agriculture after prolonged discussion.

The resolution declares that centralization of control of Canadian banks is not in the best interests of the country and emphasized the importance of embodying "the greatest possible safeguards" looking to the protection of shareholders and depositors.

WILL NOT ENCOURAGE SKATING ON SUNDAYS

P.A.A.A. Secretary Says Executive Did Not Contemplate Use of Dressing Quarters on the Sabbath .

With the Council's approval of the use of the Lake Street dressing quarters for skaters this winter, the appointment of a caretaker is in the hands of the P.A.A.A. executive. Ald. Gainey said last night that his interest in the matter ended with the Council's expression of sanction, and Mr. C. E. Curtis, secretary of the P.A.A.A., has told the Examiner that according to his information the P.A.A.A. did not intend to have the dressing room open on Sundays. At that rate it would appear that those who make a practice of skating on the Little Lake, will have to bring their foot-warmers along with them.

Members of the P.A.A.A. have been trying to work out a scheme by which skating and hockey facilities may be provided for the public on the lake this winter. It has been suggested that a large area might be kept clean of snow, and probably two smaller sections for the youngsters to play hockey. The expense may not be large, and the accomodation would be greatly appreciated especially by the young folks on Saturday afternoons and during the Christmas holidays.

ANOTHER MYSTERY IN PROCESS DEVELOPMENT

GREENEVILLE, Tenn., Dec. 7.—What may develop into a mystery as great as the Hall-Mills murder case is puzzling police here in the death of Dr. Frank Fox, 26-year-old son of wealthy Dr. C. P. Fox, owner of the Greeneville Hospital and Sanitarium.

Dr. Fox's body was found in an automobile along a roadside near here. A bullet had pierced his heart and a pistol lay beside him. A woman's high-heeled print in the road is the only clew.

Miss Evelyn Kincheloe of Manassas, Va., was to have wed Dr. Fox on Christmas Day. She has come to Greeneville to aid in solving the mystery.

TO CALIFORNIA CANADIAN NATIONAL ROUTE

At this season of the year, many Canadians are planning to visit California. Of course, there are many routes, each with their special scenic interest, but, treating travel as fundamental of education, why not travel one way through Canada. It will give you an opportunity of knowing your own country better, a chance to view the finest mountain scenery in America, and to visit our own all-year-round resorts on the Pacific, Coast, Vancouver and Victoria, where the grass is green and flowers bloom and golf, motoring and all outdoor sports may be indulged in throughout the winter months. Discuss this tour with any agent of the Canadan National Railways, before concluding your plans. "The Continental Limited" which runs daily between Montreal, Toronto and Vancouver is one of the finest all-steel equipment trains in America. For full particulars, apply to the nearest agent of the Canadian National-Grand Trunk Railways.

CELL EXAMINED FOR A POSSIBLE MEANS OF EXIT

Judges Inspect Cell From Which Henri Duval Claimed He Escaped to Commit Murder.

NO ARRESTS.

QUEBEC, December 7. — Canadian Press. — In order that they might see for themselves whether or not it is possible for a prisoner confined in the Quebec Military Prison cells to escape and re-enter his cells, the judges who are presiding at the Royal Comission which is investigating all the circumstances surrounding the murder of Blanche Garneau, who was killed here in 1920, visited the Quebec citadel yesterday afternoon.

In spite of the bitterly cold weather, Judges Robidoux and Archibald (both men of near 80 years of age) drove to Citadel Hill and inspected the military prison and the cells from which Henri Duval alias Casaubon, who made a confession shortly after the murder, claimed that he had escaped the night of the crime.

WAITS FOR VERDICT ON EINSTEIN THEORY.

Two Dozen Photographic Plates Contain the Evidence.

BERKELEY, Cal., — From the photographic darkroom of the Lick Observatory here will come within a few months science's verdict on the Einstein theory.

Two dozen extraordinary photographic plates contain the evidence They are now being carefully studied, measured and compared by a little group of scientists. They were taken by Dr. J. H. Moore for the Crocker American expedition to the antipodes, which was headed by Prof. W. W. Campbell of the Lick Observatory.

The scientific world had known that on Sept. 21 a total solar eclipse would give the first chance to put to test the much disputed Einstein claims. Einstein had foreaold that, on such an occasion, certain stars that group about the sun would seem to be displaced to a certain measure. He had announced the amount to this displacement. Only with the sun blinded in eclipse could proper photographs be made.

"Four powerful Einstein cameras specially designed and constructed for this occasion, were used in getting the photographs," explained Prof. Campbell. "Twelve plates were exposed during the total eclipse to record faint stars around the sun. One plate shows 82 stars.

"Last May and June the same number of plates were exposed with the same instruments from the Island of Tahiti.

"It is in a comparison of these two star groups, one taken with the sun and one taken without the sun, that the proof lies. This should show whether the sun's influence displaced the star images of Sept 21 in the manner and to the extent specified by Einstein.

"Several months must elapse before we can measure and calculate the distances involved."

RADIO BROADCASTING IS STILL EXPANDING.

The possibilities of radio broadcasting, long predicted, are now realized by all who are in any way associated with the engineering side of this new art. All that remains is the application, so that the present generation may enjoy the truly remarkable advantages heretofore retained by the few, but now to be had by the great mass of our population.

All true lovers of music, all those who desire to extend educational opportunities to the many government officials who are interested in helping to enrich the lives of many millions—one and all, I believe, owe it not only to themselves but to humanity in general to see that the best in art, education, literature and music is put at the disposal of all those who make up the major part of our nation.

Irish Free State Becomes A Dominion of the Empire

No Visitors Admitted and Ceremony of Taking of Oath Passes Off Quietly.

Note From Bonar Law.

DUBLIN, Dec. 7.—(Canadian Press).—Inauguration of the Irish Free State as one of the Dominions of the British Empire took place yesterday. The ceremony was simple and unmarred by hostile demonstrations from the Republican minority.

The oath was administered to Timothy Healy as Governor-General by the Lord Chief Justice at Mr. Healy's residence in Chapelizod, on the Liffey, three miles west of Dublin, and afterward the new Governor-General administered the oath to Professor Michael Hayes as Speaker of the Dail.

There were no crowds outside the Parliament House when the Dail met last night. The Ministers and others connected with the Government made their way to the Parliament Chamber by a private entrance from th adjoining Government offices, and no visitors were admitted.

The members assembled punctually at five p.m. William T. Cosgrave, President of the Dail Cabinet, and Kevin O'Higgins, Minister of Home Affairs and nephew of the new Governor-General were among the first arrivals and occupied the same seats as in the old Dail Eireann. At 5.10 o'clock, Speaker Hays announced that he was authorized by the Governor-General to administer the oath to the Deputies.

Mr. Cosgrave was the first one to be sworn and to sign the roll. The form of the oath of allegiance was primarily to the constitution of the Irish Free State and then to King George as the head of the people forming the British Commonwealth.

William Cosgrave, in acknowledging his election as president, received an ovation. He began his address with an expression of regret that twelve months which might have been spent in securing the fruits of Ireland's struggle, had been wasted in what he termed the mad efforts of those who had called upon the people to throw aside these fruits and re-enter battle.

Tribute to the British

Mr. Cosgrave paid warm tribute to the British, who, he said, once the treaty was signed, never had tried to whittle it down one iota, but had stood by the letter and spirit of their bargain with scrupulous and undeviating good faith. He then read the following telegram from Andrew Bonar Law, the British Prime Minister:

"On the inauguration of the Irish Free State I desire, on behalf of my colleagues and myself to convey to you a message of greeting and good-will. You may be assured that we, on our side, will do all that lies in our power to further the common interests that we both have in view—peace and prosperity to Ireland and lasting concord between the two countries."

Mr. Cosgrave, in his address dwelt upon the full powers given Ireland by the treaty and the acknowledgment of ths fact by the British states men. As regarded northeast Ulster, he said the people there were bound by treaty in honor and their northern policy must be continued in accordance with it. He pointed out numerous advantages to Northeast Ulster by coming into the Free State, but said that if Ulster remained out, the treaty clearly provided what was to happen and he would act accoringly not forgetting the solemn pledges to large sections of the six counties which desired to enter the Free State as had been proved by the recent elections in Tyrone and Fermanagh.

JAPAN GOING STRONG

Wealthy organizations and individual financiers in Japan have formed a $100,000,000 radio corporation.) This company will rival the large firms of America, Great Britain and France, it is planned. Its chief concern will be the improvement of communication between Japan and the United States.

Wives Are Working Against Election

PORT ARTHUR, Dec. 7.—(Canadian Press).—Wives are now working against the election of their husbands to city offices. More than one alderman in Fort William admits family pressure against his being a candidate again and one woman is actually canvassing her friends not to vote for her husband. Practically every member of the Fort William City Council has attended 260 committee meetings, besides twenty council meetings in the year. Wives complain they hardly know their homes.

CANADA WON MANY PRIZES AT CHICAGO

Canadians Carried Off Every Big Prize But One in the Hay and Grain Department.

CHICAGO, Dec. 7. —(Canadian Press.)—Canada won many of the few events in which they were entered yesterday at the International Live Stock Exposition but for the most part Dominion entries were not in prominence. First Principal, entered by the Mantioba Department of Agriculture, was picked as the prize stallion, older than four years. Dandruff Claymore, owned by Graham Brothers, of Claremont, Ont., was awarded the ribbon as the best stallion over three years old and under four.

In the swine division two Canadians scored. Joseph Linden, of Deerfield, Ont., won the first two places in the contest for a Lincoln Ram of two years or over on two animals he had entered. Third place in the same contest was taken by H. M. Lee, of Highgate, Ont.

Medalists Best won the championship among fat classes of Galloway steers. He was entered by the University of Alberta.

The grand championship of the corn show was awarded to Peter Lux, of Shelbyville, Ind. This was almost the only large prize which Canada did not take in the hay and grain show.

NO HOPE HELD FOR RISE OF THE MARK

The Great Brotherhood of Sack Holders Seek a Way Out.

By GUS M. OEHM

(United Press Staff Correspondent)

BERLIN, (By mail to United Press).—Americans in the United States are storming their friends and relatives in Germany with requests for information with regard to the disposition of their marks.

The great brotherhood of "sack holders" seek a way out.

Millions of dollars were invested in German marks by Americans at prices which, though at the time of investment comparatively low, have entailed practically total loss to the American speculators. Americans, who bought 80,000 marks, for example at six cents each at a total cost of $4,800, find their marks today worth less than $10.

Americans in Germany are at a loss what to answer their friends at home. Nobody in Germany or anywhere else knows what the mark will do. Every effort seems to have been undertaken to stabilize the mark—so far without avail. The mark dorps by hundreds and thousands to the dollar every day. Germans themselves refuse to keep their marks—they change them into dollars, pounds and into merchandise.

German bankers when asked their opinion regarding the future of the mark, shake their heads and point out what it has been doing for the past year or so, that efforts of committees, commissions, government experts, decrees against speculation, etc., have not even for the moment slackened the downward rush.

And they see no reason why the mark will be stabilized unless something extraordinary is done. They further suggest that should the mark become stable at the present rate, or even at a little better rate, it will have littl value to the speculative Americans. The American got rid of his marks several month ago at a small loss was apparently the winner. The others have, to all intents and purposes, lost their entire investment.

Ten thousand marks bought by an American at $100 a little more than a year ago are worth a little more than a dollar today. If the American specuatlor sells now his loss is practically total; if he holds on, it may be absolute.

The German government is turning out an average of about 40,000,000,000 paper mark a week. There is no additional gold reserve behind this stupendous issue, to make the money valuable.

Unless the unexpected happens, it appears to all observers in Germany that the American who put his dollars in the high priced marks before the disastrous crash is simply "out of luck." The American in Germany has no sugestions to offer.

North on Hudson Bay there are 40,000 square miles of practically unknown territory.

SOLDIER SETTLERS IN BETTER POSITION THAN EVER BEFORE

Payments on Government Loans Are Coming in Well From All Parts of the Dominion.

FEW FAILURES.

OTTAWA, Dec. 7.—(Canadian Press).—That soldier settlers on the land are in a much improved position as compared with a year ago, was the statement yesterday of Major John Barnett, Chairman of the Soldier Settlement Board, commenting on the satisfactory returns from collections thoughout the Dominion.

This favorable position, according to Major Barnett, is due largely to the legislation of last session. Major Barnett said: "The new legislation went into effect in July. Up to the end of July 13 percent. of the settlers to whom loans have been granted failed to make good and quit their farms. Many of them had found that the heavy payments in the earlier years on account of stock and equipment loans were a burden which they could not bear. Parliament, as a result of the Marler enquiry into soldiers' affairs, granted relief by speading the four and six year stock and equipment payments over twenty-five years.

AMERICA'S CHAMPION RUNAWAY STILL ACTIVE

Ran Away to Fight the Indians Fifty-seven Years Ago.

AUBURN, N.Y., Dec. 7.—This is the true story of America's champion boy runaway.

He ran away to the West to fight the Indians 57 years ago. He fought 'em to his heart's content and today at 75 hes' come back home to his sister, Mrs. Mary H. Kilburn, who 13 years ago gave him up for dead.

The fatted calf will be killed at Christmas.

Greer was born in Aurelius, N.Y., in 1848. At 16 he joined the Union Army and fought until he was put out of action by a wound at Gettysburg.

Goes West.

In 1865 the "prodigal son" spirit seized him and he took Horace Greeley's advice to go West. He landed at Leavenworth, Kas., then an outpost of civilization. He began driving an ox team hauling freight to Denver.

When this lost its thrill Greer pushed further west and took up ox teaming between Fort Laramie and Fort Connor, now in Wyoming but then part of the territory of the Dakotas.

Just then the Fenian movement was at its height. Irish patriots in America planned to force Irish freedom by an armed march on Canada from the United States. Greer joined the movement.

Fenians Collapsed.

He came back to New York state to await orders to participate in the "invasion" but the movement collapsed.

So in 1867 Greer returned West and went back to freight hauling. He went to Cheyenne and later to Salt Lake City. Then he pushed on to San Diego, Cal.

Just then Montanna was opening up. Greer went up there. He hauled timber across territory populated by the hostile Sioux Indians. Moving about from place to place, he was in the vicinity of the Custer massacre when it took place.

The other day Greer stepped off a train here.

"I'm ready to settle down now" he said, "except I'd kinda like to see Cuba."

IRISH REBELS CAPTURE BARRACKS AND FORCE

Killed One, Wounded Fifteen and Take Commander Prisoner.

CORK, Dec. 7. — (Canadian Press.)— Two hundred rebels captured the barracks at Ballymakeera, near Macroom, yesterday, killing one man and wounding fifteen. The attack took place at almost the same time that deputies of the new Irish Free State were being sworn in at Dublin. The rebels took ninety prisoners, incluidng Commandant Mooney, after a fight lasting several hours, but released them after taking all their equipment.

British Money is At Highest Point In Several Years

NEW YORK, Dec. 7.—(Canadian Press.)— Sterling exchange established another new high record yesterday, demand bills being quoted at $4.56 1-4, or 1 1-4 cents above Tuesday's top price. Steady improvement in Great Britain's trade balance, which has been accomplished by a balancing of its budget, a reduction in imports and an increase in exports, was the only reason given by local bankers for the further strength of the London rate.

The extreme low record for Sterling exchange was established early in February, 1920, when the Pound was quoted in this market at $3.18.

HENRY THORNTON TO TOUR THE EAST

New President of Canadian National Railways Will Inspect Lines in Quebec and Maritime Provinces.

OTTAWA, December 7.—Canadian Press. — Sir Henry Thornton, President of the Canadain National Railways, acompanied by Vice President Graham Bell and officers of the organization, will make a tour of inspection of the lines in Quebec and the Maritime Provinces, starting from Montreal next Tuesday, Dec. 12. Arrangements have been made for Sir Henry to speak at a luncheon of the Empire Club in Toronto, next Monday. He will leave Toronto immediately after luncheon and will proceed to Belleville where he and Mr. Bell have been invited to attend a dinner given in honor of E. D. Robb, Vice-President, and General Manager of the Grand Trunk. From Belleville he will go to Montreal where the eastern trip opens.

THE KING MAY OPEN IRISH PARLIAMENT

Rumor Based Partly on Rumor Partly on Surmise.

LONDON, Dec. 7. — (Canadian Press.)—The suggestion that King George may go to Dublin to open formally the new Irish Parliament, as advanced by the Liverpool Courier, seems based partly on surmise and partly on private rumors, although the possibility of the King's presence has taken no definite shape, it is safe to say if Ireland intimated such a visit would be welcome, the Sovereign would acquiesce. It is regarded as quite unlikely, however, His Majesty would take the initiative in the matter. According to a Dublin report King George sent a remarkable message to Timothy Healyy, the new Governor-General, to which Healy is said to have replied. These messages, the report said, will probably be first given to the public by the Governor General in an announcement in Parliament.

Dominion Rubbers

protect your health and save your shoes

To protect yourself against colds, grippe, sore throat and pneumonia, caused by wet feet—wear DOMINION Rubbers.

To enjoy the comfort of warm, dry feet in rainy and snowy weather—wear DOMINION RUBBERS.

To prevent accidents on slippery sidewalks—wear DOMINION Rubbers.

To save your shoes on stormy days—wear DOMINION Rubbers.

DOMINION RUBBER SYSTEM

DOMINION Rubbers are soundly economical because they save your health and your shoes, too, and besides, DOMINION Rubbers wear longer.

They are comfortable, too, because you can get the exact size and shape to fit every shoe you wear.

Don't ask for "a pair of rubbers". Say to your shoe man "I want DOMINION Rubbers".

BOARD SHOULD DECIDE.

In refusing to pass a bylaw authorizing a vote of the ratepayers on the questions submitted by the Board of Education in regard to technical education, the City Council is quite justified.

This is a matter that should be decided by the Board of Education.

The members are elected to provide for the city's educational requirements and to administer the affairs of the school system.

They are supposed, therefore, to be in a better position to judge what is needed than the ratepayers on behalf of whom they are acting.

If the people are to be asked to vote upon any bylaw in connection with technical education, it should be upon a concrete proposition, recommended by the board as the best solution of this problem.

The question has been before the School Board for some time and has been the subject of frequent discussion, and a good many ratepayers agree with the City Council that the proposed referendum appears to be a shirking of responsibility on the part of the members of the board.

Passing the buck seems to be a popular pastime with all governing bodies in these days.

POLITICIANS WARNED OFF.

Let it be emphatically understood—now, once and for all—that there is to be no political interference, direct or indirect, in the administration of the Canadian National Railways.

Sir Henry Thornton, newly appointed President of the Government-owned railways, said many fine things in his admirable speech at Montreal, but nothing more important or significant than the sentence quoted.

It was a plain warning to politicians to keep their hands off, and the people of Canada will echo the advice.

If the Canadian railways are to be made a success the administration must have absolute control, unhampered by the scheming of party politicians.

Nothing will hurt the National lines more than interference of this kind, and, incidentally, it may be pointed out that nothing would do the Federal Government more harm than a realization throughout the country of an attempt on the Government's part to play politics with this great national enterprise.

The Canadian people want to see Sir Henry Thornton have a fair chance to make good, for they appreciate the fact that there is no sense in importing a high-priced and experienced head for Canada's railway system if his experience and ability are to be negatived by political interference.

His is a big task and he must be allowed to handle it as he desires.

Except as passengers, politicians of all parties should keep away from the Canadian National Railways.

THE COAL SITUATION.

The first cold blasts of genuine winter weather find the municipal fuel department ill-prepared to deal with an emergency.

There is no reserve of coal, and the only fuel the city has to offer is a quantity of wood.

The Examiner months ago urged that the city's Fuel Committee should endeavour to secure and keep in reserve a certain amount of coal that would be ready in the event of circumstances that prevented sufficient fuel from being available through the usual channels.

Unfortunately, that has not been done, and the coming of winter makes the situation serious.

At present the most generally used sizes of anthracite coal canno the obtained in Peterborough, and the less popular sizes are being rapidly depleted.

Many families, lulled into a false security by the long period of mild weather and able to get along until now without coal, are excitedly hunting for fuel, and if the cold weather continues and the available coal supply in Peterborough is not augmented speedily there will be a critical situation.

A municipal supply of coal would have acted as a safety-valve, and it is unfortunate that there is not a reserve to prevent the cases of distress that are bound to eventuate unless there is a quick improvement in conditions.

THE MOVIES AS AN AID TO TEACHING.

Educational and religious institutions are not making as large a use as they might of the moving pictures. Up to the present time the movies have been taken possession of by the theatrical people, but some day teachers in the public and Sunday schools, lecturers and others, who desire to instruct or spread propaganda, will make use of the movies, says the Oshawa Reformer.

A teacher may talk for hours about the processes of manufacturing or about the mountains of Switzerland, or the lakes of Northern Canada, and obtain but a very indifferent response from her pupils, but let her show a moving picture of the manufacturer's operations or the mountains and lakes, and the children have a clear-cut, indelible impression made upon their minds.

Much the same can be said of Sunday School teachers, while for lecturers and others who desire to convey information the moving picture presents untold possibilities.

In one respect we have been very backward, and that is in carrying movies into the rural parts of the country. Many people complain about the dullness of country life. Here then is a way of overcoming that and at the same time spread propaganda regarding better farming methods. There is no reason why moving pictures should not be used to illustrate how to build silos, how to care for poultry, what crop rotation means, what the better breeds of cattle are, and a score of other matters relating to farm life. In brief we have used the movies almost entirely for our entertainment, too often for the melodramatic. Let us use them for our enlightenment.

THE DRAIN MUST BE STOPPED.

The announcement of the intention of the De Laval Company to enlarge its plant next spring and provide employment for more hands is of more than passing importance.

There is no use in attempting to shut our eyes to the fact that Peterborough has within recent months lost many—far too many—citizens, who have gone elsewhere in search of employment.

It is not long since an empty house was a novelty in this city.

That is not the case today. There are plenty of vacant houses, as a walk in any section of the city will convince the observer. Sometimes there are two or three in one block.

Where are their former occupants?

It is to be feared that they have departed to cities where there are more opportunities for employment.

The United States has claimed some of them, and the others are scattered through industrial centres in this Province.

A drain on Peterborough's population to the extent that has prevailed recently cannot help but be felt, and on that account the intelligence of an addition to one of the city's most substantial industrial plants is very welcome.

These facts should be taken into consideration by the ratepayers when the De Laval bylaw is submitted to them.

It is of essential importance that Peterborough should not only strive for new industries, but assist those which have made good here.

SCIENTIFIC RESEARCH.

The resolution passed by the Engineering Alumni of the University of Toronto, reproduced in our correspondence columns a day or two ago, deserves the earnest attention of the people of this Province. It urged "the raising of an industrial research foundation for $10,000,000, by the people of Ontario, through subscription, assisted by the Dominion Government," for certain specified objects of a scientific but eminently practical nature. It may seem a rather tall order. Yet such a sum can on occasion be easily provided for purposes which are not always so laudable and which sometimes do not give equal promise of a profitable return. The difficulty is to convince the sceptical, of whom, unfortunately, there is such a plentiful supply, that research work of this kind is really worth while, that the money expended on it is wisely invested. In spite of the wonderful achievements which go to the credit of the scientific researchers, there persists a strange reluctance to assist them in their great work of human progress. There is a speculative element about an appeal of this kind, which scares off the timid and the parsimonious. Yet it is as reasonably certain as anything can be that whatever future advance is to be made in the direction of such improved methods as those specified in the Engineering Alumni's resolution will come as a result of the application of skilled brains to the intricate problems involved. To develop those highly specialized intelligences and to encourage them in their research labours requires money; if this money is withheld, progress will necessarily be retarded.

Summing up the various clauses of their resolution, the Engineering Alumni record their ambition to "make Ontario, and, if feasible, this Dominion, as self-contained as possible in the fundamentals of trade and commerce." That is a desire to which every inhabitant of this country will subscribe; but a subscription of a more tangible kind is needed if ever the hope is to be realized. Other countries are possessed of a keener appreciation of the needs than our own appears to be, judging by the action of our governmental bodies in the past, and by comparison with what has been done in the case of the United States and Britain.

Even in Great Britain, however, the question is being asked by some, whether science really pays, wheher man is actually getting happier and bettert for the increasing knowledge which comes to each succeeding generation. The demand is now arising for science to take a stronger hand in the direction of human affairs, so that the new-found power which it constantly creates may not be misapplied. "Science has provided the tools of material progress, but has not directed their use," remarked the London Times in a recent editorial. "The last word as to whether they are to be employed to the advantage or to the detriment of the people rests with administrators, legislators and politicians. So far as we know, there is not a modern country in which the opinion of science is decisive in any matter affecting the welfare of the people. In our country there is an almost steady diminution in its influence. To the new parliament, for example, not a single person, distinguished in scientific research, has been returned by the electors. Even the universities have sent politicians." Until there is closer co-operation between the legislators and the scientists, we cannot expect to do as well as we might.—Hamilton Spectator.

BOILS

Made Him Sick and Miserable

Mr. Richard Zaienzoski, McLern, Sask., writes:—"I had been suffering continuously, with boils, for three years, and during that time I tried many different remedies without any success whatever. In spite of all my efforts I was compelled to go to the hospital. This was in the Fall of the year, and right in the busiest time of the season. Upon my return home it just took about two weeks until my neck and arms were again occupied by the boils which made me feel very sick and miserable.

One day one of my friends advised me to try Burdock Blood Bitters, and after I had used less than two bottles I was very much surprised at the result.

It is now over two years since I got in touch with B.B.B., and I have had no bother with boils since. I will recommend it to all persons suffering from any defect in the blood."

MORE PAPER MARKS.

BERLIN, Dec. 7. — (Canadian Press.)— A trillion paper marks by December 31 is the prospect held out by the German money presses, whose latest six-day race has resulted in an addition to the nation's already swollen paper flood, the sum of 110,300,000,000 marks—this during the last week in November.

These figures are shown by the latest report of the Reichsbank, which gives the total notes in circulation up to the end of November as 754,000,000,000 marks.

VENUS DE MILO NOT STANDARD

Venus is Much Too Fat and Too Short—A New Type Coming.

NEW YORK,—The classic Venus de Milo no longer is the standard of feminine beauty, Not in America anyway.

Venus is much too fat! And too short!

W. T. Benda, famous artists and illustrator —who draws those ravishing magazine cover girls—throws this bombshell.

"The elongated woman is the beauty of to-day in America," says Benda. "Her face and features and figure are long and narrow.

"Venus would not look well in modern clothes strolling down Fifth Avenue. American women do not want to be so plump. The standard of to-day is several inches taller than Venus and slender. Elongated is the word."

Heresy? Not a bit, says Benda. This in spite of the fact that four sculptors, an art critic and an anthropologist recently gave the beauty prize in a New York physical culture show to Miss Dorothy Knapp because they said her measurements —of hip and thigh neck and calf, head to heel—more nearly approximated what was called the "American Venus" than any other entrant.

This beauty award has resulted in $100,000 suit brought by Miss Ann Hyatt, who claims her form more nearly parallels Venus— differing only on one-half inch more around the hips and one inch more around each thigh.

"It is not necessarily what I think," says Benda, cautiously. "It is the popular taste. Art mirrors this taste. Art may precede these changing standards and perhaps help to establish them, but the artist who wishes to be popular must depict womtn as she wishes to be and as her countrymen wish her to be."

MEASUREMENTS OF VENUS

Height	5ft. 4in.
Neck	12 7-8 in.

Venus' classic lines haven't been scrapped everywhere, however.

"Tastes in women differ." Benda smiled. "The Frenchman and the Italian prefer the plumpness of Venus. So, too, the Greek. To Turks and Persians a woman must be quite fat to be beautiful. While the Slav would have a woman plump, he would have her hair light."

The RED HOUSE MYSTERY

by A. A. MILNE

BEGIN HERE TODAY

Who had shot and killed the ne'er-do-well ROBERT ABLETT, within two minutes after his arrival at The Red House, the country estate of his wealthy bachelor brother, MARK ABLETT? Robert's body was on the floor of the locked office, Mark was missing and, in the opinion of Inspector Birch, it was clear that Mark, who had looked forward to Robert's return from Australia with annoyance, had shot him and disappeared.

But there were mysterious circumstances. The shot was fired a few moments before ANTONY GILLINGHAM, gentleman adventurer and friend of BILL BEVERLEY, one of Mark's guests, had entered the hall where he found MATT CAYLEY, Mark's constant companion, pounding on the door and demanding admittance. The two men enter the room through a window and find the body.

Antony and Bill continue investigations and become convinced that Cayley knows something about the crime. They discover a secret passage leading from The Red House to the bowling green and then Antony questions the maid, Elsie, who overheard Mark speaking to Robert in the office.

GO ON WITH THE STORY

"It was you who heard Mr. Mark yesterday, wasn't it?" Antony asked the maid.

"Yes, sir."

"'It's my turn now. You wait,'" murmured Antony to himself.

"Yes, sir. Nasty-like. Meaning to say his chance had come."

"I wonder."

"Well, that's what I heard, sir. Truly."

Antony looked at her thoughtfully and nodded.

"Yes. I wonder. I wonder why."

"Why what, sir?"

"Oh, lots of things, Elsie. . . ."

He had found his pipe and went downstairs again.

Antony was glad to have spoken to her, because he had recognized at once the immense importance of her evidence. To the inspector no doubt it had seemed only of importance in that it had shown Mark to have adopted something of a threatening attitude toward his brother. To Antony it had much more significance. It was the only trustworthy evidence that Mark had been in the office at all that afternoon.

For who saw Mark go into the office? Only Cayley. And if Cayley had been hiding the truth about the keys, why should he not be hiding the truth about Mark's entry into the office? Obviously all Cayley's evidence went for nothing. Some of it no doubt was true; but he was giving it, both truth and falsehood, with a purpose. What the purpose was Antony did not know as yet; to shield Mark, to shield himself, even to betray Mark—it might be any of these.

Elsie's evidence, however, seemed to settle the point. Mark had gone into the office to see his brother; Elsie had heard them both talking; and then Antony and Cayley had found the body of Robert . . . and the inspector was going to drag the pond.

But certainly Elsie's evidence did not prove anything more than the mere presence of Mark in the room. "It's my turn now; you wait." That was not an immediate threat; it was a threat for the future. If Mark had shot his brother immediately afterward it must have been an accident, the result of a struggle, say, provoked by that "nasty-like" tone of voice. Nobody would say "You wait" to a man who was just going to be shot. "You wait" meant "You wait, and see what's going to happen to you later on."

The conversation Elsie had overheard couldn't have meant murder. Anyway not murder of Robert by Mark.

"It's a funny business," thought Antony. "The one obvious solution is so easy and yet so wrong."

He found Bill in the hall and proposed a stroll. Bill was only too ready.

"Where do you want to go?" he asked.

"I don't mind much. Show me the park."

"Right-o."

They walked out together.

"Watson, old man," said Antony, as soon as they were away from the house, "you really mustn't talk so loudly indoors. There was a gentleman outside, just behind you, all the time."

"Oh, I say," said Bill, going pink. "I'm awfully sorry. So that's why you were talking such rot."

"Partly, yes. And partly because I do feel rather bright this morning. We're going to have a busy day."

"Are we really? What are we going to do?"

"They're going to drag the pond—beg its pardon, the lake."

"We're on the way to it now, if you'd like to see it. What are they dragging it for?"

"Mark."

"Oh, rot," said Bill uneasily. He

"HE'S GOT SUCH A FRIGHTFUL LOT, HASN'T HE?"

was silent for a little, and then, eagerly, "I say, when are we going to look for that passage?"

"We can't do very much while Cayley's in the house."

"What about this afternoon, when they're dragging the pond? He's sure to be there."

Antony shook his head.

"There's something I must do this afternoon," he said. "Of course we might have time for both."

"Has Cayley got to be out of the house for the other thing too?"

"Well, I think he ought to be."

"I say, is it anything rather exciting?"

"I don't know. It might be rather interesting. I daresay I could do it at some other time, but I rather fancy it at 3 o'clock, somehow. I've been specially keeping it back for then."

They had come to the pond—Mark's lake—and they walked silently round it. When they had made the circle, Antony sat down on the grass, and refit his pipe. Bill followed his example.

"Well, Mark isn't there," said Antony.

"No," said Bill. "At least, I don't quite see why you know he isn't."

"It isn't 'knowing,' it's 'guessing,'" said Antony rapidly. "It's much easier to shoot yourself than to drown yourself, and if Mark had wanted to shoot himself in the water, with some idea of not letting the body be found, he'd have put big stones in his pockets, and the only big stones are near the water's edge, and they would have left marks, and they haven't, and therefore he didn't, and—oh, bother the pond; that can wait till this afternoon. Bill, where does the secret passage begin?"

"Well, that's what we've got to find out, isn't it?"

"Yes. You see, my idea is this."

He explained his reasons for thinking that the secret of the passage was concerned in some way with the secret of Robert's death, and went on:

"My theory is that Mark discovered the passage about a year ago—the time when he began to get keen on croquet. Well, then, when Miss Norris was going to dress-up, Cayley gave it away. Probably he told her that she could never get down to the bowling-green without being discovered, and then perhaps showed that he knew there was one way in which she could do it, and she wormed the secret out of him somehow."

"But this was two or three days before Robert turned up."

"Exactly. I am not suggesting that there was anything sinister about the passage in the first place. It was just a little private bit of romance and adventure for Mark, three days ago. He didn't even know that Robert was coming. But somehow the passage has been used since, in connection with Robert. Perhaps Mark escaped that way; perhaps he's hiding there now. And if so, then the only person who could give him away was Miss Norris. And she of course would only do it innocently—not knowing that the passage had anything to do with it."

"So it was safer to have her out of the way?"

"Yes."

"But, look here, Tony, why do you want to bother about this end of it? We can always get in at the bowling-green end."

"I know, but if we do that we shall have to do it openly. It will mean breaking open the box, and letting Cayley know that we've done it."

CHAPTER XI

"THERE'S one thing, which we have got to realize at once," said Antony, "and that is that if we don't find it easily, we shan't find it at all."

"You mean that we shan't have time?"

"Neither time nor opportunity. Which is rather a consoling thought to a lazy person like me."

"You can wash out the kitchen and all that part of the house," said Bill, after some thought. "We can't go there."

"No. What we want to consider is which is the most likely place of the few places in which we can look safely. The library for choice."

Bill got up eagerly.

"Come along," he said, "let's try the library. If Cayley comes in, we can always pretend we're choosing a book."

Antony got up slowly, took his arm and walked back to the house with him.

The library was worth going into, passages or no passages. Antony could never resist another person's bookshelves. As soon as he went into the room, he found himself wandering round it to see what books the owner read, or (more likely) did not read, but kept for the air which they lent to the house. Mark had prided himself on his library. It was a mixed collection of books. Old editions, new editions, expensive books, cheap books—a library in which everybody, whatever his taste, could be sure of finding something to suit him.

"And which is your particular fancy, Bill?" said Antony, looking from one shelf to another. "Or are you always playing billiards?"

"I have a look at 'Badminton' sometimes," said Bill. "It's over in that corner there." He waved a hand.

"Over here?" said Antony, going to it.

"Yes." He corrected himself suddenly. "Oh, no, it's not. Mark had a grand re-arrangement of his library about a year ago. It took him more than a week, he told us. He's got such a frightful lot, hasn't he?"

"Now that's very interesting," said Antony, and he sat down and filled his pipe again.

There was indeed a "frightful lot" of books. The four walls of the library were plastered with them from floor to ceiling, save only where the door and the two windows insisted on living their own life, even though an illiterate one. To Bill it seemed the most hopeless room of any in which to look for a secret opening.

A Prominent Physician's Recipe for Bran Bread

ALL physicians will tell you that Bran is invaluable as a daily food for young and old—that it keeps you regular and healthy. They will tell you to use the natural Bran, not treated or cooked Bran. Here is one physician's recipe:—

1½ cups Tillson's Health Bran; 2 cups flour; ½ cup brown sugar; 1 level teaspoon salt; 4 level teaspoons baking powder; 1 cup milk; 1 egg.

Beat egg well; add milk; add dry ingredients and bake in moderate oven one hour. Add 1 cup raisins, chopped dates or walnuts, if desired.

Make Bran Bread often; eat it regularly, but be sure to make it with pure, natural bran, Tillson's, not the cooked or treated Bran. Tillson's is just the bran coat from the cleanest and plumpest of wheat—sterilized; that's all.

Clip out this advertisement. Then have your grocer send you a package of Tillson's Health Bran and make the most delicious and most healthful Bran bread you ever tasted.

Large package 25 cents, at your grocer's.

DAVID COPPERFIELD LIBRARY FOR KIDDIES.

Presented to the Borough of St. Pancras, London, by Children's Movement.

LONDON, Dec. 6 (By Canadian Press)—The David Copperfield Library now belongs to the children of St. Pancras, London, it having been presented to the Borough of St. Pancras by the Children's Library Movement. This new Library for children is in memory of the novelist, Charles Dickens, and is appropriately named after one of the chief works of the English master of fiction. It is located in the house where Charles Dickens lived as a boy, No. 3 Johnson Street, Somers Town, and which Dickens immortalizes in 'David Copperfield' as the residence of Wilkins Micawber, who was always waiting "for something to turn up." This house, with two adjacent buildings, is the gift of Councillor A. Davis, of St. Pancras.

The David Copperfield Library is in the slums of Somers Town. Its windows were bleared, its chimney pots grotesque, and its outer front grubby as a sweep, for it was built 150 years ago; but it has been renovated and made habitable for its new use. Once in a garret of this house a little lad lay at night by a pile of old books reading, the strangest romances. These ragged books were the works of famous writers, yet this boy, unknown at that time, ill-clad and ill-nourished, came to be greater than the authors of the books he was reading; his name was Charles Dickens.

In this house now there are books in every room; crowds and crowds of books all around the walls. About the floors are stools and tables, covered with illustrated books, the latest and best that can be provided. In the evenings when the schools are over for the day, little girls and boys come into the house, wash and each put on blue overalls. Then they wander around the miniature shelves until each has found a suitable book, upon which they sit down and are soon lost from this world of crowded homes and class rooms and streets.

The books are of all sorts, and range from the most elementary picture tales for the babe to a shelf of gloriously-bound French classics, the gift of a munificent Republic. Many of the books have been given by famous living British authors. There are also Dutch books in the library, presented by the Leyden Pilgrim Fathers' Society, and the Burgomaster of Leyden, Holland, was one of the honored guests at the formal opening recently.

WORKING CLASSES MUST TRAVEL FAR

Before They Can Manage the State, Says Sweden's Premier.

STOCKHOLM, December 6. (Associated Press. — "The working classes cannot immediately take over the management of the state," said Sweden's premier, Hjalmar Branting, quoting the words of Karl Marx after the Paris Commune, in a recent address before the association of Swedish Young Social-Democrats in Stockholm.

"We must not forget," continued the premier, "that we have to go forward and upward and that it is a long way to go. The socialist community which we shall develop will not be exactly the one sketched out years ago, but it will conform to our basic ideals. The difficulties on our road have been infinitely greater than we could imagine."

Mr. Branting pointed to examples in Central Europe and Russia to show that the working classes were not yet quite ready to perform the tasks which events had thrown before them. 'During the last ten years," he said, "we have left the stage of being a proletariat without rights, and are now on a higher plane. Thanks to increasing education it is clear that the working class is now overtaking, and in certain cases has outdistanced, the bourgeoisie as regards social and economic knowledge. We shall never allow ourselves to be fettered by private capitalism, and we shall see the fundamental principles of socialism win out. A thorough change will take place but not through the power of decrees and orders. First of all we must shape the human material out of which the new social edifice can be constructed."

IN MILLBROOK AND DISTRICT

Meeting of Young People—A Progressive Euchre Party—Millbrook News of Interest.

MILLBROOK, Dec. 7. — The meeting of the Young People's League on Monday evening was under the auspices of the boys of the Tuxis' Square, Mr. Arnold Raper being in the chair. The Scripture lesson from Luke 2:39-42, "The Boy, Jesus, Lost in the City," was read by Ernest L. Burnham, and Mrs. G. W. Sayles sang an appropriate solo, her daughter, Miss Marjorie, playing her accompaniment. Mr. Elwin Brown, of Port Hope, the business manager of the Bay of Quinte Winter School, was unable to be present as had been anticipated, but sent the slides illustrating the school, and the lecture; Mr. Frank Alcorn quite capably filled Mr. Brown's place in managing the lantern, and Mr. A. Raper explained the views. The Winter School was first held in Cobourg in 1921, and was intended to accomodate many of the young people who through home, or business duties, are unable to take advantage of the Summer School in July ;its success has fully justified its being continued from year to year. The pictures showed a number of the beauty spots of Cobourg both in winter and summer time, also the various classes of students, the staff of lecturers and officers, in class rooms and during the recreation periods, and certainly are a decided inducement to others to attend the school next January when it again opens in Cobourg. Its object is to train leaders in Sunday school, and young peoples' work, and to win volunteers for some definite form of life service either in the home or foreign field. It is expected that the Conference Summer School next year, instead of going to Albert College, Belleville, as usual, may possibly be held in Peterborough.

Progressive Euchre.

The progressive euchre given by "Golden Sheaf" Rebekah Lodge, No. 176 ,on Monday evening, was probably the most successful of such events for which the Rebekahs have yet been the hostesses. Thirty-five card tables were in use, and at least one hundred and sixty members and their friends were guests of the evening ,the cheerful hum of voices and occasional happy laughter testifying to the good time all were enjoying. Supper was served about 11 p.m. and afterwards a number remained for a delightful dance before the gathering finally broke up. Miss Lillian Clarke, and Mr. Wilbert Thorne were the winners of the first prizes, the consolation falling to Mrs. Lloyd Newton, and Mr. R. Beatty.

Will Attend Sale.

Mr. F. W. Fallis of Fallis' Line, left for Cobourg on Tuesday morning to attend the annual sale of pure-bred Holstein cattle which is being held there this week at the King Edward stables. Mr. Fallis took five of his own fine herd to dispose of at the sale.

Miss Emma Hetherington was the guest of friends in Peterborough on Tuesday.

Put on Entertainment.

The executive of the Methodist Sunday school have decided to put on a lantern slide entertainment for the scholars and their friends on Wednesday, December 20th, at 7.45 p.m. "The Night Before Christmas," and Van Dyke's "The Other Wise Man,' 'are the views to be shown—the former more particularly for the children of the Primary Department, and the latter, which are very fine pictures, it is expected, will be appreciated not only by the intermediate pupils, but also by the older members of the school and any others who may care to attend. An offering will be taken up to defray the expenses incurred in renting the slides.

Was Burned Out.

Mr. George Fallis, who had the misfortune to be burned out recently at his home on the Fallis Line, is moving to the village for the winter months, occupying his own house at the west end opposite Byam's uptown store. Mrs. Thirtle and family, who formerly occupied this house, have now taken one on Tupper street belonging to Mrs. Reynlods.

RUSSIA FEELS IT CAN AVAIL RECOGNITION

No Hurry, Says Politicans, But She is Not sitting Idle.

By JOHN GRAUDENZ
(United Press Staff Correspondent)

MOSCOW, (By Mail to United Press).—Russia is prepared to wait years for recognition by the great and small world powers.

"There is no hurry," according to officials.

Russia, however, is not sitting idle on the question of foreign recognition and while the outside world talks much about Russia's militaristic policy, Russia's real policy, it is consistently stated, is pacifistic and chiefly concentrated on getting recognition by as many states as possible, especially from western countries including America.

For this purpose, Russia is willing to make sacrifices, (from the Soviet point of view), as for example returning—with certain restrictions—the enormously rich mining properties to Russo-Asiatic Consolidated, which were confiscated soon after the Soviets came into power.

On the other hand, the Russians say: "We have waited five long years and are able to wait longer. Consequently there is no hurry."

This is especially true of negotiations with China and Japan. While China is most eager to commence negotiations, these are still retarded owing to the difficulties offered by China's foreign minister, chiefly concerning Mongolia.

China insists that Russia withdraw troops from Urga, and Russia demands from China, guarantees regarding the safety of Russia territory against attacks from Manchuria.

Russia insists on the principle of Mongolian autonomy under China's sovereignty and this is the limit to which Russia is willing to go.

Regarding negotiations with Japan Russia is observing much the same attitude, being convinced that negotiations will be resumed with a few weeks.

AIRPLANES WILL FLY OVER CENTRAL AMERICA

Capital Cities of Republics to Be Linked Together by Air Service.

TEGUCIGALPA, Honduras. Dec. 7.—(Associated Press)—The capitol cities of the republics of Central America soon will be linked together by airplane service for passengers and mails, if ambitious plans to this end encouraged by the government of Honduras, are carried out successfully.

An Italian aviator, Luis Stornaioulo, is now here with six Italian and three French planes. Headquarters are at Tegucigalpa, and the first flight are expected the end of December.

The imagination of the Honduranean people has been so much stirred by stories from the outside world of the possibilities of aviation, that they recently bought an airplane by public subscription.

REMEMBERS OLD FRIENDS

ROME, Dec. 7. — (Associated Press)—Mussolini, the new Italian Premier, has given an appointment in his office to Captain Lohengrin Girand who, during the war, commanded a platoon in which Mussolini was a corporal. Both Mussolini and Girand were wounded in action and decorated for valor.

PASTOR ASKED EXTEND TERM CAMPBELLFORD

The Board of Methodist Church Invite Rev. ... B. Kenney to Remain a Fifth Year—Social Activities.

CAMPBELLFORD, December 7.—The regular meeting of the Young Ladies' Mission Circle of St. Andrew's church, was held in the school room on Tuesday evening, Mrs. P. B. Nelson presiding. After the receiving of various reports the election of officers took place, resulting as follows:

President, Miss Lillian Hay.
1st Vice-Pres., Miss Jennie Nancarrow.
2nd Vice-Pres., Miss Bessie Locke
Secretary, Miss Minnie Stephens.
Programme Committee, Misses M. Watson and Olive Hay.
Pianist, Miss Cora Barnum.

The meeing was then closed with prayer by Mrs. P. B. Nelson after which a very pleasant social evening was spent. The proceeds of the entertainment given last Thursday by the Mission Circle, when they presented "Our Aunt from California" amounted to $70.75 which is certainly most gratifying to the young ladies.

I.O.D.E. Bazaar.

The bazaar held on Tuesday afternoon in the public library under the auspices of the Imperial Order of the Daughters of the Empire, was a success. The tables were laden with dainty and useful articles and the candy, home cooking tables and tea tables displayed an abundance of toothsome viands, and were all exceptionally well patronized. The convenors of the different departments were as follows:

Plain sewing Mrs. George Dickson.
Fancy Work, Mrs. Harry Lowrie.
Home Cooking, Mrs. B. I. Gibson and Mrs. C. W. Turner.
Fish Pond, Mrs. A. J. Meyers.
Candy, Mrs. Fred Linton.
Tea room, Miss Mildred Robertson.

The proceeds amounted to over $210 which is surely most gratifying to the Regent, Mrs. J. P. Archer, to the convenors of the various departments and to the members who have worked so faithfully toward making this bazaar an unqualified success.

Mission Circle Met.

The Young Ladies' Mission Circle of the Methodist church, and members of the Women's Missionary Society, met at the home of Miss Hattie Redden last evening for the purpose of sewing for the bazaar to be held on Saturday, December 16 in the Kerr Block. The ladies have already prepared an unusually large amount of fancy and plain articles of all kinds and are anticipating a busy day on December 16.

Radio Concert.

Through the courtesy of Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Collard your correspondent and a party of friends were entertained at their home, Harris St., last evening, by concerts heard through their radio set from Pittsburg, New York, Schnectady, Detroit. The musical numbers consisted of violin, 'cello, vocal and orchestra numbers as well as several addresses—all being heard clearly.

Invited to Remain.

A meeting of the official board of the Methodist church was held on Tuesday evening in the school room of the church when Rev. H. B. Kenny the pastor was tendered a unanimous invitation to remain as their pastor for the fifth year, and was allowed time to consider the proposition.

Personal Notes.

Miss Aggie Anderson of Rylestone is visiting at the home of her sister, Mrs. Andrew Hay.

G. Walker, Canrobert street, returned to town on Tuesday after spending a few days in Toronto.

How King Alfonso Decorates the Girls Who Foxtrot With Him

The Newest Extravaganza of Spain's Jazzing Monarch and His "Royal Order of Girls Who Danced With Me"---Incidentally Why One American Beauty Didn't Join

The Royal Brooch Presented By King Alfonso to Each of His Favored Dancing Partners.

"THE night I danced with the King of Spain at Deauville!"

This is a phrase which society will hear often during the winter from the lips of more than one pretty American girl, at many a "the dansant" and country club, from Maine to California.

And, if she is one of the luckier ones whose dainty trotting greatly pleased His Spanish Majesty, she will have an interesting souvenir to prove it.

She will be able to show admiring rivals and awestricken debutantes who have not yet been abroad, or who have been abroad but are not of the chosen, a gorgeous little jeweled brooch——

—A personal memento from the King.

A brooch surmounted by the royal crown, and beneath it the royal initials A. R., standing for Alfonso Rex.

Furthermore, she will be able to tell her interested friends (and even more proudly, perhaps, in the fullness of time, she may tell her children and grandchildren) how the last of the great, gay Bourbon kings pinned the brooch upon her dress with his own hands.

By that time there may not be any more kings—except in Siam and Abyssinia—and if so it happens the souvenir will be all the more interesting.

More than sixty American girls, some of them members of the Four Hundred, a few of them famous footlight stars, but all alike in extraordinary ability to do the latest dance steps, have been thus "decorated" by the King of Spain.

Alfonso is a descendant of the great Bourbon house that gave France some of its most famous kings, including Louis Fourteenth, "Le Roi Soleil," and his successor, Louis Fifteenth, who said "After me the deluge." From these remote and glittering ancestors he has inherited the Bourbon nose and the queer, long Bourbon chin. He has also inherited from them their love of gaiety and pleasure. The world war, which caused so many crowned heads to topple, never touched Alfonso. He managed to keep Spain strictly neutral and without losing his personal popularity. The whole of Europe is still his playground. He is welcome in Paris, in London, in Berlin or in Budapest.

Miss Mary Millicent Rogers, Heiress to the Standard Oil Rogers Millions, Danced With the King.

Alfonso is handsome, in a way, despite his Bourbon chin—surprisingly like some of the famous Velasquez paintings of his ancestors. He has managed, too, despite high living, to keep a moderately slender figure—and he is passionately fond of dancing.

Not only expert in the tango and other dances of Latin origin, he is also a master of the latest American steps, including the foxtrot and "shimmy." And he is as fond of jazz as any Harvard freshman.

The latter part of the Summer saw King Alfonso at Deauville, gayest of the French seaside resorts, crowded with rich and beautiful women from every corner of the western world.

The King was an ardent patron of the fashionable dancing pavilions and ballrooms. He would enter, unostentatiously, in simple and conventional evening clothes, accompanied perhaps only by a young military aide or a gentleman-in-waiting. For a little while he would watch the dancers. Presently his eye would single out one more graceful or more beautiful than the rest. A few moments later the gentleman-in-waiting would approach her with a profound bow and say,

"His Majesty, the King of Spain, requests the honor of a dance with you, madamoiselle."

The day has long since passed when a royal request is equivalent to a command when addressed to a pretty woman (except in the king's own court), but it is not recorded that any girl, however democratic, has declined the honor.

Soon the king's partiality for American girls began to be apparent. He didn't pick them out because they were Americans. Often he did not know they were Americans. He simply choose the prettiest girl in the room, to his way of thinking—or the girl who seemed the best dancer. And it chanced that in the majority of cases the girl who met both these specifications happened to be an American.

The King seldom danced with the same girl more than once. He was not looking for royal conquests on the dance floor. That, as Kipling said, is another story. He simply liked the dancing. But when he enjoyed a foxtrot particularly well, he sometimes presented to the young lady whose grace had charmed him a little jeweled brooch, as a memento, in which his royal initials were entwined.

He must have had a lot of them made for the special purpose, for he gave away not less than sixty at Deauville, all precisely the same design.

The witz of Europe's gay social world declared that Alfonso had founded a new "order"—the "Order of the Girls Who Have Danced With Me."

Small wonder that there was a stampede of American girls to Biarritz when it was announced later in the season that Alfonso had transferred his royal presence to that brilliant resort among the mountains.

Just how many girls have been "decorated" by the King of Spain, as members of this unique new "order," is not known. Not all the brooches by any means have been given to Americans. French girls, English girls, and one beautiful Argentine, have been included in the royal favor—though the majority of dancing partners who have best pleased His Majesty, it is said, are from the United States.

Mary Millicent Rogers, one of America's most beautiful society girls, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry H. Rogers, and heiress to many of the Rogers millions, is one of the girls who danced this year with the King.

The Former Mrs. Peter Cooper Hewitt, Now the Baroness d'Erlanger.

Another is the beautiful former Mrs. Peter Cooper Hewitt, now the Baroness d'Erlanger, and another is the famous Irene Hammond, New York dancer.

One American girl who danced with the King but who emphatically—most emphatically—was not presented with the royal brooch, was Miss Katherine Dickey of Atlanta, Ga.

This Peachtree bud is an authentic beauty and an exquisite dancer. The thing that led to a slight coldness between her and her royal partner had nothing to do with her good looks or with her ability to do the foxtrot.

If the King ever sends her a present, it will be one of those American books illustrated with drawings under which the caption asks, "What's wrong with this picture?"

What was wrong with the particular picture in which Alfonso-Leon-Ferdinand-Marie -Jacques -Isidore -Pascal -Antoine, King of Spain, Castille, Aragon, Jerusalem, Navarra and the Canary Islands was one central figure, and Miss Katherine Dickey of Atlanta, Georgia, was the other, may be told in five short words:

It happened that while she was in the midst of a foxtrot with King Alfonso, on the dancing floor at Deauville, her dear gray-haired father entered the ballroom.

Miss Dickey, who is a miracle of filial devotion, had not seen her dear father, it seems, for a long, long time—not for almost a whole day—and suddenly seeing her dear father in the doorway she wrenched herself from the royal arms and ran to fling herself into the paternal ones, with a casual "Excuse me, please, I'll be back in a minute," to the astounded monarch.

When Miss Dickey returned to the spot on the dance floor where she had left the King of Spain standing alone, she was quite honestly amazed to discover that he had betaken himself elsewhere—a palpable rudeness which none of the nice young men at the Atlanta Country Club would ever have thought of committing.

"One might expect that a king would have better manners," said Miss Dickey. "Anyway my own father is much nicer than any king."

The callous King of Spain, however, it is reported, has not permitted this episode to influence either his love of dancing or his partiality for American girls as partners. The new Spanish order of "Girls Who Have Danced With Me" will have many new members added to it if Europe's next Summer social season is as brilliant as the one just past.

AN EPOCH IN THE RAILWAY HISTORY OF CANADA

The recent appointment of Sir Henry Thornton as President of the Canadian National Railways, and his coming to Canada to take up the stupendous task of managing the greatest single railway system in the world, marks an epoch in the railway history of Canada.

Canada has adopted the policy of public ownership of thousands of miles of railway, which formerly comprised a number of separate systems, each under its own management, namely: the Canadian Northern, Grand Trunk Pacific and Grand Trunk Railway System, together with the Canadian Government Railways comprising the Intercolonial Railway, Prince Edward Island Railway and the National Transcontinental. On October 10, when the first meeting of the new Board of Directors was held at Toronto, these various systems were amalgamated into the consolidated system of Canadian National Railways, and all placed under one President and one Board of Directors.

In this far-flung system, the people of Canada not only own over 22,000 miles of railway lines, touching every important city and seaport in the Dominion, but also a telegraph and cable service reaching with its associated lines, 75,000 points in Canada, United States and Mexico; a fleet of merchant ships comprising the Canadian Government Merchant Marine, carrying Canadian products over the seven seas; a fleet of modern passenger steamers operating up and down the Pacific Coast; freighters and car-ferries on the Great Lakes; a chain of palatial hotels; the Canadian National Express Company, and other properties throughout the country. All this represents a very large investment from which the new President and Board of Directors believe Canada will eventually derive material benefit.

Sir Henry Thornton, the newly appointed President comes to Canada with an enviable record, having had wide experience and signal success in directing the management and operation of various important railway systems in the United States, England and on the continent. But to make the National Railways a success the co-operation of the people of Canada is necessary, and it is the duty of every true Canadian to assist in making this property the national asset it should be.

Doubtless, at this time it will be of interest to learn something of the early history and upbuilding of the roads now embraced in the Canadian National Railways. It must be remembered that it is less than a hundred years ago since the first stretch of railway in Canada was built.

In 1832, a charter was granted to the company of the Champlain and St. Lawrence Railroad for a portage road 16 miles long from La Prairie on the St. Lawrence to St. Johns on the Richelieu, to facilitate the handling of traffic between Montreal and New York. In 1836, this line was opened for traffic. The rails, unlike the solid steel ones of to-day, were of wood, with strap iron on the upper surface, and the crudely constructed coaches were drawn by horses.

In 1837 the proprietors imported an engine and engineer, the first to be used in Canada, a rakish little engine that rattled along at less than twenty miles an hour.

In 1847 it was decided to build a road from Montreal to Lachine to replace the earlier stage route around the rapids. These pioneer roads, the first connecting Montreal with the outer world, were some twenty years later absorbed by the Grand Trunk System.

In 1852 the rails were extended to St. Lambert opposite Montreal, and southward to Rouse's Point, on Lake Champlain. While this considerably shortened the trip to New York, it was still no easy journey, entailing two changes—first, the trip across the river by ferry to St. Lambert, thence by train to Lake Champlain, and a second change to the boat going southward down Lake Champlain and the Hudson River. In this year the act to incorporate the Grand Trunk of Canada was passed and construction commenced.

By this time the interest in the new method of travel had amounted to a railway mania, and companies sprang up practically over night, applying for charters to build roads here and there, mostly for short distances, in the Maritimes, Quebec and Ontario, for at that time the great north-west was known to the fur-traders alone, and perhaps a few missionaries.

Dozens of charters were granted in the fifties, but the next pioneer road to be completed also drew its traffic largely from Montreal. That was the St. Lawrence and Atlantic, opened in 1853 between Longeuil, opposite Montreal, and Portland, Maine.

In 1854, several projects that had been entered into by the Grand Trunk were amalgamated by Act of Parliament. In this year the line from Quebec to Richmond was opened, linking Montreal with the east as well as the south. In 1855 the line from Montreal to Brockville was opened. By the end of the following year the steel was extended from Brockville to Toronto, and on westward to Sarnia. Building was also going ahead to the eastward, extending as far as Rivière du Loup, making a total of 872 miles under Grand Trunk management in 1860. The total mileage in Canada at this time was 1,880 miles.

Prior to 1847, no railroads had been built in the Maritime Provinces, except a coal tramway in Nova Scotia from the Albion coal mines to tide water. But in 1858, a line from Halifax to Truro was completed and by 1867 extended to Pictou Landing, while in 1860 a route from St. John to Shediac had been established. Surveys had also been made for a line to continue from Truro to connect the Maritimes with the other provinces, but nothing was done until after Confederation in 1867, when the building of this connecting link was made a condition of entrance into the confederation. The Dominion Government undertook the task, and by 1876 the 500 miles between Truro and Rivière du Loup were opened for traffic throughout. The line from Halifax to Truro and several other lines in the Maritimes had been purchased by the federal government, and the entire system was called the Intercolonial Railway. Three years later the federal government purchased a line from Rivière du Loup to Point Lévis from the G.T.R. In 1898, the government purchased the Drummond County Railway, Chaudière to Ste. Rosalie, and made arrangements with the G.T.R. for joint usage of their line from Ste. Rosalie to Montreal.

In the meantime the Grand Trunk Railway, by extension and acquisition had covered the Province of Ontario with a network of lines, and had in 1882 absorbed the Great Western Railway. It had also extended its main line to Chicago, the great traffic centre of the continent.

Foreseeing the development of Western Canada, the management of the Grand Trunk Railway System conceived the idea of constructing a new transcontinental line from coast to coast. It was to extend through the fertile timber lands of northern Quebec and Ontario to Winnipeg, on westward through the great prairie provinces, through Yellowhead Pass and a practically unexplored mountain kingdom of the Canadian Rockies, following along the central valleys of British Columbia to Prince Rupert.

In 1903 the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway and the Dominion Government agreed to co-operate on this transcontinental line and to build it in two grand divisions. The western division to be known as the Grand Trunk Pacific, extending from Winnipeg to Prince Rupert, and comprising a mileage of 1,755 miles, to be built by the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway. The eastern division, comprising 1,804 miles east of Winnipeg, to be built by the Canadian Government under the supervision of the Commissioners of the Transcontinental Railway, and leased to the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway for a period of fifty years. So that, by 1914, the Grand Trunk and the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway together comprised over 7,500 miles of rails; operated boats on the Pacific coast between Seattle, Vancouver, Victoria, Prince Rupert and Alaska ports; huge grain elevators at various important tidewater and lake terminals, and a chain of splendid hotels.

Out in the Province of Manitoba, through a rich but sparsely settled section, in 1896, appeared the rails of a hundred mile stretch of road which was to be the nucleus of the transcontinental line of the Canadian Northern Railway. Its birth took place in an auspicious hour, for news of the wonderful fertility of the vast Canadian west, with its free grants of land, had spread practically around the world, and a great tide of immigration was rolling into the country. From Great Britain, Europe and the United States a constant stream of settlers came; towns sprang up over night, as it were; settlers clamored for railways; the line spread as if by magic, westward to Winnipeg and eastward to Port Arthur at the head of lake navigation, and the lines of the Northern Pacific Railway in Manitoba were acquired, giving connection with the great rail arteries of the Western States, so that in 1901, the Canadian Northern had 975 miles of railr under its control. The steel soon crept up the rich, fertile valley of the North Saskatchewan River to Edmonton. Lines were acquired in the eastern part of Canada and linked together, and by 1905 the total mileage of the system amounted to approximately 2,846 miles. In the next five years the mileage was almost doubled. By 1915 the line had crept westward to Edmonton, pierced the Rockies and proceeded down the Fraser Valley to Vancouver, on the Pacific Coast. At the same time it acquired and extended lines in the east, so that its total mileage in that year amounted to 9,362 miles.

The outbreak of war, and its effects on finance, resulted in a condition which compelled the Government to take over these component parts now forming the Canadian National Railways, but until the present, the Grand Trunk and the Canadian National Railways, while forming a co-ordinated system, has each been under its own board of management. The appointment of Sir Henry Thornton and the new Board of Directors marks the beginning of the complete amalgamation under one President and one Board of Management.

The past two years have seen a substantial reduction in the deficit of the National lines and there is every reason to believe that the coming year will see this deficit further reduced. It is the aim of the new management to make the Canadian National Railways service conform to such a high standard that it will merit the confidence and support of the Canadian people.

SLIM HOPE IS HELD FOR THE SHIP BILL

Issue Is Coming to a Show-Down In the United States Congress.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 7.—Despite all possible administration pressure, all possible trading for support, all pledges of soft berths for "lame ducks," a counting of noses in the United States Senate shows unmistakably a hard row ahead of the president's ship subsidy bill, which Congress was called into special session to enact.

The probabilities of success appear to be unquestionably on the side of the opponents rather than of the supporters of the bill. This for the reason that they have a double chance to defeat its passage. First, by actually voting it down if it develops they can muster enough votes to accomplish that end. Second, by prolonging debate and preventing a vote by March 4, if it appears they might not be able to slaughter it on the roll call.

Here, in a nutshell, is the situation the administration forces are up against.

The 36 Democratic senators will oppose the subsidy bill as a violation of fundamental party policy....

Nine progressive Republicans are so definitely committed against the measure that no possible trade or inducement can swing them to its support. These are Borah, Capper, Ladd, La Follette, Lenroot, Norbeck, Norris, McNary and Brookhart.

That makes a total of 45 votes definitely arrayed against subsidy. Due to the vacancy caused by the resignation of Newberry, it leaves just 50 votes as the greatest possible total for the bill.

In the remaining 50, there are at least seven who may be classed as doubtful. These are Cummins of Iowa, Curtis of Kansas, Ernst of Kentucky, Harreld of Oklahoma, McCumber of North Dakota, Nelson of Minnesota, Sterling of South Dakota.

A vote, if a vote is secured, would turn on a margin of probably not to exceed two or three votes.

The opponents, however, propose that no vote shall be reached. It is only three months till the present Congress dies. The new Congress will be definitely anti-subsidy.

And to even a handful of hostile senators, a three-months filibuster is no discouraging thing. With 45 senators definitely opposing, the chances of the subsidy bill coming to a vote in the Senate appears extremely unlikely.

ILLUSTRATING SPEED RADIO TRANSMISSION

To illustrate the speed of modern communication by radio, David Sarnoff, radio manufacturer of New York, recently sent a blanket question by wireless from the Radio Central station on Long Island to London, Paris, Berlin and Bergen, Norway. The question was, "What is your weather?"

Forty-five seconds later, London's answer came in: "Weather rainy, mild." Immediately after this came the reply from Norway. France was next, and Germany was last, transmitting her reply two minutes and 40 seconds after the question had been sent.

PALESTINIANS ARE AFRAID OF CENSUS

And Most to Them Prefer to Remain Uncounted

JERUSALEM, Dec. 7.—(Associated Press).—Palestinians are temperamentally afraid of the census. In the days of Abdul Hamid and other Ottoman rulers a census was taken only in order to increase taxation or to conscript the men for military service. The pre-war days are still fresh in peoples' minds, and therefore most of them today prefer to remain uncounted. Because of this, and the feeling which has run very strong among the Mohammedan and Christian populations on account of the Balfour declaration, the present government's demand for a census has met with considerable opposition.

The government evidently has been perfectly sincere in its purpose to find out the total population of Palestine with the primary object of determining who is eligible to vote in a forthcoming election for members of the legislative councils of the government. However, every sort of opposition has been encountered, both from the intelligent and the ignorant. The Mohammadan Christian society first sent out a manifesto to its constituency, advising them to do what they could to help the census along, but later the society retracted its manifesto. This resulted in open opposition to the census, especially in Nablus, the ancient Schechen.

The government began by showing a strong hand and imprisoning a dozen notables, but it finally changed its policy, released all who had been arrested, and even consented to the demand to enumerate all absent Syrians, which had been put forward by the society.

When the day of the census arrived all the government schools of the country were closed so that the teachers could be used as enumerators. So strong was the feeling in some quarters, however, that in Jerusalem three Mohammedan and two Christian teachers refused to assist in the work, and were thereupon dismissed from service. This resulted in a strike on the part of all the boys in the school where these teachers held classes.

If You Are Well Bred

You remember it is not good form to use initials, nicknames or surnames or given names alone when signing correspondence.

A married woman should sign herself "Mary Smith," not "Mrs. John Smith." If she wishes to identify herself as the wife of John Smith she may put the name Mrs. John Smith in brackets beneath her own name.

Fashion Hints

Parisian designers say the lack evening frock is not going to have everything its own way this winter as it did last, and colorful gowns and those of tinsel cloth and metal brocades will come to the fore. They predict, too, these gowns will be quite long.

HANDSOME BAG

A handbag of Paisley cashmere is mounted on a heavy Dutch silver frame and attached to a silver bracelet which is worn about the wrist.

STREET FROCK

A distinctive street frock is of velveteen trimmed with a narrow band of moleskin and moire ribbon braid. Wide outstanding cuffs finish the plain, long sleeves.

LEATHER FRINGE

An overblouse of gray crepe de chine achieves something original in the way of decoration by adding a fringe of green suede about the collar, cuffs and hem.

ELABORATE HEADDRESS

The most elaborate headdresses and evening hats are making their appearance. Triple bandeaux of silver ribbon, studded with brilliants je; bandeaux, tulle bows, small flower wreaths, silk fringes, ribbons, beads and feathers, are used.

SLEEVES.

No sleeves at all for evening gowns, long sleeves at other times, continues to tell the tale of the sleeve. Many evening gowns show one shoulder bare and the other covered.

CURTAIN PULLS.

Yarn may be twisted and tied to make gay curtain pulls for the kitchen, nursery or living-room. The yarn may take the form of chic French dolls, birds or pudgy animals.

IF HAIR IS TURNING GRAY, USE SAGE TEA

Here's Grandmother's Recipe to Darken and Beautify Faded Hair.

That beautiful, even shade of dark, glossy hair can only be had by brewing a mixture of Sage Tea and Sulphur. Your hair is your charm. It makes or mars the face. When it fades, turns gray or streaked, just an application or two of Sage and Sulphur enhances its appearance a hundredfold.

Don't bother to prepare the mixture; you can get this famous old recipe improved by the addition of other ingredients at a small cost, all ready for use. It is called Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound. This can always be depended upon to bring back the natural color and lustre of your hair.

Everybody uses "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound" now because it darkens so naturally and evenly that nobody can tell it has been applied. You simply dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through the hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair has disappeared, and after another application it becomes beautifully dark and appears glossy and lustrous.

Two Years in Prison and $10,000 Fine For Bootlegging Mogul of Brooklyn

NEW YORK, Dec. 7.—Antonio Cassese, a wealthy tobacco merchant of Ozone Park, L. I., known as the "King of the Bootleggers," was declared guilty of conspiracy to violate the Volstead act by a jury in the United States District Court in Brooklyn. Judge John C. Knox, who presided at the trial, sentenced Cassese to serve two years in the penitentiary at Atlanta, Ga., and to pay a fine of $10,000. Cassese retained the attitude of calm that has marked him during the trial.

The prisoner's wife, his father and three children were in court. So was Mrs. Edith Stevens Hirsch, who accompanied Cassese on several of his expeditions to the Bahama Islands and who was tried and acquitted on a charge similar to that against Cassese. She attempted to see the prisoner before he was taken to the Raymond Street Jail, but failed.

Cassese was arrested after the seizure of the yacht Edith, which was named after Mrs. Hirsch. He was released on $5,000 bail, and later indicted. Liquor valued at $50,000 was found on the yacht.

A few days after Cassese's disappearance a steam trawler named the Ripple was seized at Erie Basin, with a large quantity of liquor on board. The crew was placed under arrest after the police and the Federal men exchanged shots with men in small boats taking the cargo off the Ripple. The Ripple was declared by the authorities to be the property of Cassese, and he was again indicted. During the trial of Cassese, Sergeant A. P. Broadfield of the State constabulary testified that Cassese offered him a bribe of $5,000 if he would release him. Broadfield testified that he replied, "I would not let you go for $5,000,000."

"Girls' Ankles Made U. S. Famed" Says Lucille Ager, Defying Paris

By MARIAN HALE.

These long, wrappy, impractical skirts—what are we going to do with them?

Girls all over the country, particularly the short ones, who are so smart in short skirts and so lost in long ones, have been asking each other this question.

The only answer seemed to be—accept them and look pleasant.

It remained for Lucille Ager to develop a plan of resistance.

"The fault lies with the actresses," she decided. "They set the styles for the country. Designers have sold them the idea of the long skirt, and they are now engaged in selling it to the public.

"It is all very well for them to trail around in their long skirts—on the stage, but how about the girls who work all day. Must the stenographer give up her trim little short frocks and array heself like a 1922 copy of a Greek goddess while she pounds out her letters?"

She Comes to Rescue.

Now Miss Ager herself is tall and slender. She has often posed for Charles Dana Gibson's statuesque beauties. She can wear the most extreme frock Paris would send over. She is also an actress.

So the sour grape motive could not be said to have actuated her opposition to short skirts, or her placing the blame on members of her own profession. And lacking the personal bias, her attitude was significant enough to carry conviction.

When she wrote notes to her theatrical friends and asked their co-operation in the protection of the interest of short skirts she found many of them willing to help. And in no time she had formed a club whose policy is to stick together and oppose the long skirt regardless of fashion.

Principle Involved.

"You see, there's really a principle involved," she explains. "America ought to be strong enough to make its own styles, and to develop those particularly suited to our mode of living.

"Then, too, American women are famous all over the world for their trim ankles and feet. Our well-shod girls are the first thing the foreigner comments on.

LUCILLE AGER

"We have made ourselves a race of slender ankled women by the short skirt. Women who have been particular about themselves have dieted or exercised until they could present trim ankles.

"To go back to the long skirt might mean that women would go back to indifferent footwear and thick ankles."

Meanwhile, Miss Ager's mail increases daily, and she's thinking that her next move will be to hire a secretary. And if her plans carry, the short-skirted girl will re-appear on Broadway.

SEND GREEN ROCKET FOR FEED WHITEFISH

It Pays to be on Good Terms With the Chippewa Indians.

WALKER, Minn., Dec. 7.—When State Senator Patrick H. McGarry is hungry for whitefish, he goes out to the lawn of his home "Glengarry," and sends up a green rocket.

The next morning, say his friends, he looks out over Leech Lake toward Bear Island, where the Chippewa tribe resides, and sees a flock of canoes coming toward him. They bring whitefish for dinner.

What ever Pat McGarry wants from the Chippewas, he gets. He is Big Chief Schmoc-omi-mom and heir to 15 squaws and their many papooses, willed him by the late Chief Ma-jah-ga-bo of the Bear Island tribe.

And Pat a married man

But that doesn't bother the senator nor his family. His daughter, Edna, now Mrs. H. P. Rich of Seattle, Wash., was well beloved by the Chippewa tribe and she, in turn, was at home with them.

Were Close Friends

This close friendship was the outgrowth of 25 years of good will and confidence gained by McGarry. He was the tribe's protector, when it came to trading deals, and Chief Ma-jah-ga-bo was surety against harm for McGarry and his pale-faces.

This mutual protection grew into such deep affection that, at Chief Ma-jah-ga-bo's death recently, his will made McGarry heir to all his rights and possessions, including his 15 squaws.

Pat hasn't relinquished his strange legacy. He has assumed the honor of ruling the 2000 Chippewa Indians in the three northern Minnesota reservations—although this rule is such only in name. And he has taken on himself the responsibility of caring for his greatly augmented family.

On their part, the 15 squaws are ready to fulfill his wishes. McGarry can't call them by their names, but he knows their faces, for time and again have they brought him gifts from the wilderness.

It is in this way that they show their allegiance to their new chief and squaw man.

Catarrh Of The Stomach Is Dangerous

'Thousands Have It and Don't Know It," Says Physician Frequently Mistaken for Indigestion—How To Recognize and Treat.

"Thousands of people suffer more or less constantly from furred, coated tongue, bad breath, sour burning stomach, frequent vomiting, rumbling in stomach, bitter eructations, gas, wind and stomach acidity, and call it indigestion when in reality their trouble is due to gastric catarrh of the stomach," writes a New York physician.

Catarrh of the stomach is dangerous, because the mucous membrane lining of the stomach is thickened and a coating of phlegm covers the surface so that the digestive fluids cannot mix with the food and digest them. This condition soon breeds deadly disease in the fermented, unassimilated food. The blood is polluted and carries the infection throughout the body. Gastric ulcers are apt to form and frequently an ulcer is the first sign of a deadly cancer.

In catarrh of the stomach a good and safe treatment is to take before meals a teaspoonful of pure Bisurated Magnesia in half a glass of hot water as hot as you can comfortably drink it. The hot water washes the mucous from the stomach walls and draws the blood to the stomach, while the Bisurated Magnesia is an excellent solvent for mucus and increases the efficiency of the hot water treatment. Moreover, the Bisurated Magnesia will serve as a powerful but harmless antacid which will neutralize any excess hydrochloric acid that may be in your stomach, and sweeten its food contents. Easy, natural digestion without distress of any kind should soon follow. Bisurated Magnesia is not a laxative, is harmless, pleasant, and easy to take, and can be obtained from any local druggist. Don't confuse Bisurated Magnesia with other forms of magnesia, milks, citrates, etc., but get it in the pure Bisurated form (powder or tablet), especially prepared for this purpose.

WAVE LENGTH LIMIT NOTHING TO AMATEUR

Results of the Trans-Atlantic Tests—British "Ham" Reports.

HARTFORD, Conn., Dec. 7.—Wave length limitations mean nothing to the American amateur when it comes to transmission of his signals over great distances.

For from the headquarters of the American Radio Relay League here, the national organization of amateur radio operators, comes the word that many of the member "hams" have overcome the handicap of distance with low power and low wave length.

The latest records of amateurs, under these limitations, were made recently during the trans-Atlantic preliminary tests the A. R. R. L. is conducting for final tryout the last two weeks in December. Another record, in time, was made by Hiram Percy Maxim, president of the league.

For the trans-Atlantic tests, those qualifying to enter the finals, when transmission to England on a 200-meter wave length will be attempted, are the amateurs who show they have been received by at least two others at a distance of at least 1200 miles. Last year, for a similar test, only 27 amateurs qualified. This year, the number is 218. And the average distance of transmission during the preliminaries was more than 1400 miles.

British "Ham" Reports

A cable, just received by the A. R. R. L. from a British amateur, reports that in one night during the preliminaries, he heard 23 American amateurs. The list of station calls he copied shows a new record in the spanning of distance with an amateur transmitting set.

For example, the British "ham" reports having heard 6TF, the station owned by E. M. Berg of Ontario, Cal., more than 6,000 miles away. Among other cities he cables he received that night are Augusta, Me., New York City, Savannah, Ga., Washington Court House, O., Detroit, Mich., and Champaign, Ill.

These calls have not yet been confirmed, but officials of the A.R.R.L. believe they are practically correct.

Fast Work

As against this record of distance is one of speed in long distance transmission, made by Hiram Percy Maxim, president of the league. From his station, 1AW, at Hartford, Maxim sent a message to 6ZAC, the station of Clifford Dow at Hawaii, 5,000 miles away, and received an answer in the total elapsed time of 4 minutes and 18 seconds.

The best time made heretofore had been a little over six seconds between Maxim's station and one on the Pacific coast, 3,000 miles off. The new record is all the more remarkable in that it was relayed through station 9AWM, that of L. V. Berkner of Sleepy Eye, Minn.

BELTS

The fur coats for the coming winter feature the belt consisting of a thick cord with fur balls or tassels at the end which hold the fullness in slightly at the waist. The belt sometimes is passed through the inside of the coat so that the back may hang loose while the front is belted.

NEW COLORS

Green is becoming a popular color in millinery. It is particularly liked in the soft shades of moss or almond green. Rust shades are also popular, working into flame color. "Marron Glace," is the name of a new tint between the two.

RMINE

In Deauville they are wearing short ermine coats for morning, as well as the less expensive imitations, as rabbit. Usually they are worn with white or biege skirts.

Automobile Chances

There are many of them for the carefully planning, prospective purchaser who takes advantage of the Want Columns in the Examiner.

What makes appeals to you most—would you like to get some particular style or kind of auto at a special price? Would you like to pick up a second-hand or a re-built car at a sacrifice price?

See what the Wants can do for you in accomplishing any of these automobile desires.

You may keep in close touch with automobile owners who will be interested in a chance to trade or sell their cars if you make the fact known through the Want Columns of The Examiner.

Bank of Montreal 105th Annual Report

Sir Vincent Meredith, President, Reviews Outstanding Developments of Past Year—General Outlook in Canada.

Sir Frederick Williams-Taylor, General Manager, deals with Canada's Economic Position and Progress of Bank.

The annual meeting of the Bank of Montreal was marked by especially interesting announcements by both Sir Vincent Meredith, Bart., the President, and Sir Frederick Williams-Taylor, the General Manager.

Sir Vincent in his address referred particularly to the conditions that prevailed throughout the world. The President also made special reference to the revision of the Bank Act, and to the absorption of the Merchants Bank. Before beginning his annual address, Sir Vincent also took occasion to pay special tribute to the memory of the late R. B. Angus, who had served for over 30 years as a director of the Bank, and who also for some years had acted as General Manager.

Sir Frederick Williams-Taylor, the General Manager, dealt more particularly with the affairs of the bank, but laid special emphasis on the economic position of Canada. Sir Frederick also referred to the exchange problem and reviewed the general features of the annual statement of the Bank.

Features of President's Address

Sir Vincent Meredith, Bart., in his address to shareholders, said in part:

"The banking year just closed as required constant vigilance and I am glad to be in a position to inform you that, while our profits on the basis of capital employed have not been as large as those of the immediately preceeding years, as was to be expected with lessened activity in business generally, coupled with increased taxation, we have been fortunate in escaping serious losses, and the liquid position and great strength of the Bank remain unimpaired.

"Since your last annual meeting, the Merchants Bank has been absorbed by the Bank of Montreal. To the incidents connected with this transaction it is not necessary to refer, nor to the criticism it evoked, further than to say that, in my judgment, the prompt action of your directors, subsequently ratified by you averted a situation that might otherwise have proved serious to the country at large, and secured the shareholders of that institution from losses greater than were suffered.

Bank Act.

Referring to the revision of the Bank Act Sir Vincent said:—

"The Bank Charters expire on July 1st, 1923, and unless the Government deem other proper to extend them for another year, a revision of the Bank Act will occur at the approaching session of Parliament.

"The subject is already engaging attention in the press and elsewhere. Some suggested changes are so radical that alarm might well be caused but for the conviction that caution, the lessons of the past and the sound sense of Parliament will interpose against their acceptance. I have yet to learn of any parliamentary or any other enactment that will wholly provide against the errors or misjudgments of those who conduct affairs in any business.

"The Banking system of Canada is the product of long experience. It has operated to the advantage of the people, despite an occasional failure, from which, however, no country and no plan has been free. I can confidently claim that to venture upon radical changes in the Banking system is to incur grave danger to the stability of trade and to imperil the credit structure of the country and I know of nothing more certain to arrest the development and progress of Canada than rash experiments in the domain of banking and currency."

Farmers' Business.

Dealing with farmers' business, the President made a special reference, saying:—

"Statements have been made in the public press by un-informed people that debtors, especially in the West are being subjected to undue pressure by the Banks, Loan Companies and other traders. So far as this Bank is concerned, every consideration and great latitude have been given to debtors who, through bad harvests or other mischance, have been unable to meet their obligations. This is and at all times has been the policy of this Bank, and never has that policy been more forcibly impressed upon our Managers than during recent critical years.

"Banks are business, not benevolent, institutions. They are expected to pay their shareholders a reasonable return on their investment, which includes the Rest Account—the accumulation of many years—as well as the Capital of the Bank. The rate of dividend is not disproportionate to that investment and certainly has not proved so lavish as to encourage capital to seek the banking field. As a matter of fact the distribution to shareholders in Canadian Banks is substantially less than that made by Banking institutions in Great Britain or the United States."

General Situation.

In conclusion, Sir Vincent summed up the general situation as follows:—

"The crisis of 1920-1 has passed into history. The fact that the depression was world-wide makes it highly improbable that the return to normal will be other than slow. We have experienced a more sudden and acute depression of trade than our generation had ever known, and though conditions, including the agricultural results, are undoubtedly more favorable, prudent business men will not build up an unduly speculative position after the lessons of 1920. The outlook, as I see it, is for reasonable profitable operations in most lines of business though there can be no great trade boom without a further important expansion of foreign commerce and this unfortunately is not yet in sight."

General Manager's Address.

Sir Frederick Williams-Taylor, the General Manager, in his annual address to shareholders said:—

"The one hundred and fifth annual balance sheet of the bank, shows many changes as compared with a year ago. These changes are the result in part of incidental variations in what might be termed our natural position and, in larger measure of the absorption of the Merchants Bank of Canada, which, I am gratified to say, has been effected with scarcely a ripple on the surface of our affairs.

"Speaking in general terms, the increase in our liabilities to our shareholders and depositors is balanced by a corresponding increase in our assets, while our liquid position remains as strong as ever and the status of the Bank is enchanced through the acquisition of many branches, as well as in other ways, from all of which we shall presently derive the benefit in increased earning power.

"It is trite, yet undeniable, to remark that in Canada, as elsewhere trade generally has not been good. Bankers, more distinctly than others perceive the detailed results of this condition, which in large measure is brought home to them in losses and diminished profits. In the case of our own Bank, if losses are moderate as they have been, it must of necessity be the result of prudence in granting credits and of accurate perception of the inexorable working of economic laws, for there is little that can be ascribed to luck in such matters.

Economic Position.

Dealing with the Canadian economic position, Sir Frederick said:—

"Canada's economic position is not satisfactory. How could it be satisfactory, with the whole financial world out of joint? As everyone is aware, our troubles are partly the trouble of this universal condition, partly the result of the war. It is well, however, to bear in mind that our problems are largely of our own creation.

"Readjustment will come in time for this is a country of virility and manifold resources; yet one thing stands out signally, in my opinion, namely, that Canada cannot go ahead again as she should while taxation and the cost of living are higher in this country than they are in the United States of America.

"Canada is one of the best countries to live in, to work in, to play in—in point of stability, security and comfort it is an earthly paradise as compared with Europe—but we must not stand still, and in order to progress the cost of living and taxation must be diminished; otherwise we will fail to attract immigration; and improved conditions are largely dependent upon increased population.

"As to ways and means, they are obvious to all who reflect, and the necessity thereof is now being brought home to the heedless by that pitiless but unerring teacher, necessitiv."

Exchange Situation.

Sir Frederick also dealt with the exchange situation, as deflected by foreign exchange, saying:—

"The past half-year has witnessed many fluctuations in the Foreign Exchanges. The most important for us is the rapid decline in the value of New York funds, which have fallen from the high point of 10 per cent premium, in December, 1920 to a slight discount at this date. The decline would have been greater but for Canada's imports of gold from the United States of America.

"We may congratulate ourselves on this state of affairs; yet we must not lose sight of the fact that it is brought about not so much by the improvement in our trade balance, although that is considerable, but more through the sending of special large sums into Canada and by heavy borrowings in New York on the part of Federal and Provincial Governments, municipalities and industrial corporations, borrowings which have been extraordinary easy, owing to a plethora of funds in the New York market.

"We cannot, therefore, look upon our present position as permanent, and should we prepare for the possible return of the premium on New York funds."

CLEMENCEAU'S GRANDSON TELLS OF THE DANCE

When Delysia the Beautiful Wore a Silk Shawl

"Altogether, Counting Her Black Silk Stockings and Her Two Shoes, Delysia Wore Just Six Pieces of Clothing—a Headdress and—" Musicians are Dumbfounded—Triumph Like the Caesars'—Delysia Weeps in the Trenches—a Foolish Deputy Crosses Swords With the Sharp Tongued "Tiger."

By GEORGES CLEMENCEAU GATINEAU.
Grandson of Georges Clemenceau, Ex-Premier of France.

M. Gatineau, impoverished by unfortunate business ventures and extravagant living, was forced from France by the ire of his famous grandfather, Georges Clemenceau, "the Tiger." Coming to America, he who had spent hundreds of thousands in Paris and Monte Carlo, became a laborer, shoveling coal on a Boston dock. There he was discovered and pressed into the last of writing his memoirs of Parisian gaiety and events in "the Tiger's" life.

I must tell of my first meeting with the beautiful Delysia and the happy hours it led to. In my last article I described the "Affair at the Cafe Pre-Catalan," and how we drenched my adorable Gaby in champagne.

Such celebrations ("celebrating" I know not what unless it were our youth and happy feelings) made up the life of the younger set in Paris in those days. Night after night one would make the rounds of the gay places, following the same programme, perhaps the same route, seeing the same people, but always finding something new to count as adventure.

I had heard much of Alice Delysia. I had seen her from the box of the theatre—had seen and admired her grace and beauty; her vivacity; her joy of living.

All America knows that of her, now. You have seen her, heard her, watched her in the dance. She is charming. Today there is no greater woman on the stage. Before the spell of her beauty, no man can stand unaffected. She rules. She is queen.

She was my friend.

It was the evening of the Drags—the Friday before the Grand Steeplechase of Paris at Auteuil.

With my friends, I had gone to the Alcazar to mingle with the gay throng—the race lovers, the beautiful women, and the great, the wealthy from every part of the globe. Seeking, they were, the inmost citadel in the Capital of the world of pleasure.

When Delysia Entered

In an advantageous corner—selected by one who knew that I must always be where I could see whatever was going on—we sat, my friends and I—entering more and more into the hilarious spirit of the place under the influence of the sparkling wine and the irresistible music.

The more boisterous of the party were chanting impromptu words to the band's melody and beating syncopated time on the tables when—

A sudden hush fell upon the place. The singers stopped, open-mouthed. The "drummers" paused, their glasses held in mid-air.

Delysia has come.

Through the open door she entered, looking neither right nor left, paying the homage we all would like to pay her divine beauty. Fiddlers, sensing that something was transpiring worthy of their attention, utterly stopped or scraped false notes as they saw her. Trumpeters choked mid-measure.

The Queen of the Fairies could have no greater, no more sincere ovation.

Nor could the Queen of the Fairies have deserved it.

As I said, I had seen Delysia on the stage. I had admired from the tantalizing distance of the first tier of boxes her beauty, her wonderful charm.

And now I saw her within a few steps of me. Now had come my opportunity to know her.

Altogether, counting both her shoes—both her black silk stockings—her head-dress (that's five) she wore just six articles of clothing.

From shoulder to ankle she was clothed simply entrancingly, in a single emerald-green silk Spanish shawl.

About her body were hung flaming red roses. Into the fabric of her shawl-gown were sewn bits of Japanese ivory. A black fringe was the final decoration.

What a gown. How it clung to her exquisite form.

You have seen the sleek gleam of the panther's stride? That was Delysia.

No wonder the musicians were astounded. No wonder the merry-makers paused in their hilarity. She stunned one.

Close, close, she passed by our table. I forgot myself—I forgot my guests. Reckless of toppling glasses, I leaned across the table the better to view this miracle.

She lost nothing—nay, rather gained—by closer view. One arm was wholly bare. As she walked, the lissomness of her figure was revealed and, too, was revealed the fact that on the side opposite to that of her bare arm her silk stocking was rolled down so that the knee was uncovered, and flashed through the shawl.

Conscious of the universal admiration but neither abashed or emboldened by it, Alice walked to her table, nodding here and there to acquaintances.

I could not take my eyes from her. Steadily I gazed as she sat and raised a glass to her lips. Soon she became aware of, must have felt, the burning look I sent at her.

She, who had all Europe at her beck and call, knew that she had made another conquest. And I, I who had been for season on season a merry-maker at these places with world famous beauties, knew it too—and was pleased at my captivity.

It was Lili Waltzer, the dancer and hostess at the Alcazar who introduced us. She had intercepted my gaze at Delysia, smiled knowingly as she understood my absorption, asked "M. Gatineau, you would meet the charming Alice?"

What a question.

I could not answer with my lips. I was dumb. But my eyes, my eagerness, must have carried my feverish assent. Mlle. Waltzer sprang from her chair. "Come" she said, and led me, a willing captive, to the table of the gorgeous Alice.

Into the Dance

I stood looking down at the beauty. With a smile she looked up and with a word acknowledged the introduction by a gaze I fancied as rapt as my own. For a minute we looked steadily into each other's eyes. She smiled again, offered her hand. I kissed it.

From that moment, for that evening at least, my eyes were blinded to all women but one—the entrancing figure in the green shawl, the red roses.

Indeed I could hardly lift my eyes. Again she smiled—it was nothing new to her, I know, this single-minded worship. Homage was tribute her beauty exacted from all men!

Perhaps to bring me to myself—I had not spoken beside a few stammered phrases of politeness—she swayed slightly to the music and nodded her head toward the floor of the room.

I tore my gaze from her and dimly saw the kaleidescopic maze of the gaily dressed dancers as they wound and weaved their tortuous ways. In such a mixed assemblage, where every couple set their own style, one might see every variety of dance. Some, from pure good spirits, or from the feel of the wine in their veins, were racing about the floor as though they expected to win prizes equal to that of the Stakes in the grand race of the morrow. Others were shimmying, as the dance is called in America.

Careless, care-free, the Parisienne was doing her best to bring gladness into the hearts of her friends, Frenchmen, English, Americans, who took part in the giddy figures.

Perhaps in America they would not do so. But, at the Alcazar, it was different. Paris, in such matters, is generous!

"You would dance?" I asked.

Delysia nodded.

We swayed together on the floor. The tango. It is the only dance I do well. But never again will I dance as I danced that night. It was Delysia and there is only one Delysia!

The shawl, too, played its part. Flame-like, Delysia.

I, I suppose, was the moth.

The floor cleared for us. At first I did not notice. Then, as we danced, comments drifted to my ears. I heard them vaguely.

"Who are they? Delysia, yes . . . but who is he?"

"Superb, are they not?"

"One dance like that! My fortune for such a dance!"

More and more. Envious words! I tingled with a strange delight.

Flattery? No, not that. Against flattery I think I am proof.

I am not at all a stranger to myself, well aware of my own faults. It was their envy, and, selfish, I glorified in it!

At last the voice of the orchestra died. We moved to our table. Lili was waiting. She laughed at us.

"You heard them?" she said to me. "They wonder they have not seen you at the music halls. Wealth untold is there for you. Together you would be supreme!"

Wealth? What did I care for wealth I had wealth enough, far far more than I needed. I bantered with Lili, but my thoughts were not of her. Always, it was Delysia, and it was not long before we left the Alcazar.

To the Ambassadeurs, then. There, too, a sensation, forks fell as I entered, Delysia upon my arm.

As upon signal, the dancers halted.

Triumph, and such triumph as even Caesar could not know, unless, perchance, there were flame-spotted green shawls in the days of old Rome—and women who could wear them!

Home and to bed at 5:30. A gray morning—bent-shouldered early risers on their way to work at this unearthly hour.

I shivered a trifle.

But the night had been too wonderful, depression could not capture me.

The Tiger's Claws Scratch a Deputy

Sometimes I have felt that I had reason to laugh at my grandfather's frowns. Like myself, he laughed at the world, and I expected his sympathy.

You know that he is given to jesting. One day his witicisms irritated a deputy, who, determined to tell Clemenceau what he thought of him, took my grandfather aside, and said: "Mr. President, you never take anything seriously!"

"Well," my grandfather retorted, "do you expect me to take you seriously?"

I did not I confess, care much what he thought. Yet I did not expect what was to come.

Delysia wanted to see the trenches. So we started off together in a motor car, accompanied by Valentine Tessier and a friend of hers, to tour the front. America, of course, knows Mlle. Tessier well, for she is at home at the French theatre in New York.

We passed through Verdun, and on.

"I want you to see Fleury," I told Delysia. "It is beautiful."

Miles we went and at last I stopped a passerby.

"Where is Fleury?" I asked.

"You have passed it. It is about two miles behind."

Two miles back. Not a sign of human habitation. Not a ruin to be seen. Nothing.

"That stone," said Delysia, pointing. "Wot is that for?"

"Ici," I repeated to them, "fut le village de Fleury." (Here was the village of Fleury.)

I returned to the car. Delysia's eyes glistening were.

"Let us go," I said roughly, and we drove away, but the memory of Fleury has stayed with me till this day, and I do not believe that Delysia and Valentine have forgotten it.

We arrived in Bar-le Duc at 2 in the morning. From hotel to hotel we went. All were filled.

Dismayed and very tired, we drew up before the door of the cheapest of inns. Delysia shuddered as she looked at the place, but there was nothing else to do.

Can you picture her—Alice Delysia, spending the night in an inn which a tramp might disdain?

Delysia, garbed in the neatest of tailleurs, with a fortune in yellow pearls wound about her arm, beneath the sleeve! Why she wore them I do not know.

She is obstinate at times, and despite our warnings she refused to leave her pearls in safety in Paris.

Then to La Croix St. Jean. Here in the trenches I had fought.

"This is where you suffered, Moustique!" Delysisa murmured, looking at me.

She began to weep, silently. Naturally, I took her away from the spot as quickly as possible. But need I say that La Croix St. Jean is a pleasant memory to me now? I am not devoid of sentiment, and it is not srd to have a woman weep for you.

Afterwards, Sampigny, where the graves of the Poincare family had been abominably violated by the German.

Valentine Tessier left us, and Delysia and I went alone to Brussels, where we met Marguerite Deval and Henri Defreyn, famous in Paris and London for the "Merry Widow."

Weeks later I returned to Brussels on business—the cotton business. Delysia did not come. I waited for her. At last I telephoned Paris. She was not at her hotel. I telegraphed. There was no reply. Frantic, I rushed to Paris. At my hotel, the Chatham, there was a message for me.

"My new show is now in preparation. My manager has sent me to the Pyrenees to rest. Alice."

It was the end. I was not to see her again for years. Not until I reached America, many, miles away.

Boston, My New Home

And then, at last, Delysia arrived in Boston, my new home. In Afgar, she was at the Wilbur Theatre. Big[illegible] after her arrival I telephoned [illegible]oraine, where I knew she was. Her maid answered the phone.

"This is Mr. Gatineau," I said.

"Mr. Gatineau! Why—why—just one moment, I'll call m'amselle!"

Then Delysia's own voice.

"Alice?" I asked.

"Yes, Mlle. Delysia!"

"How do you do?"

"Who is this?"

"Gatineau."

Brief silence and then she says:

"I think we have met before, n'estece pas?"

She had not heard the name plainly.

"Many times," I laughed.

"What did you say the name was?"

"Gatineau."

"Ah! Moustique! But it is impossible! And why—I have been here eight days—why have you not come to see me before? It is not nice of you. You must come—immediately—tonight!"

"I am broke, Alice," I said. "I cannot come now. But I shall surely see you before you leave."

I had to wait till Saturday, for my slender pay envelope. Then I hurried to town, to the Wilbur. At the stage door the doorman halted me.

"Hey, what do you want?"

"I want to see Delysia."

"Well, nobody can see Delysia!" I laughed in his face.

"Maybe nobody can see Delysia," I agreed. "But I can. Please tell her that Mr. Gatineau is here."

There was no need, however. Delysia's dressing room was near the door, and she had heard our voices. She came running out and fell into my arms. We embraced—long lost friends.

Supper at the Touraine. It was the first time in my life that I had ever been invited to supper by a woman. Delysia was charming as ever, dressed in a very low-cut pink foulard robe. I had coal in my nails; it is very hard to wash away. And I was ashamed of my hands.

But I was happy. At last I had found a woman who was not ashamed to know me as a poor man! And when I parted from her at the station the next day, Alice Delysia gave me comfort.

"A rich man who'll shovel coal is bound to succeed," she said.

I caught pneumonia and was sent to the Boston City Hospital.

My life was saved through the efforts of Dr Adams, Dr Bergen and Miss Morrison, my nurse. They were very kind to me. Then there was convalescence at the home of my friend, T. B. Quigley. You notice how many friends I am gathering?

It is because I am poor, I think!

SUFFERED SO FROM HEART AND NERVES LIFE WAS A BURDEN

Mrs. A. H. Lee, Beamsville, Ont. writes:—"I am delighted to let you know what I have to say regarding the good Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills did me.

A short time ago I suffered with heart and nerve trouble, and was so bad I could not sleep, only about two hours each night. My heart was so bad I had spells when driving on the road and would faint away, and neighbors would carry me in from my wagon. I also took these spells in the night and during my daily work on the farm. My nerves were so bad I would jump out of bed, and was then compelled to walk the floor before I could settle down again, but after taking a few boxes of FURNITURE — is there anything more substantial, more practical or more enduring? To the minds of many comes the thought of a great expenditure when a Gift of Furniture is mentioned. It's a wrong impression, for the outlay need not exceed $1.19 for a jardiniere stand of oak; on the other hand, if one feels so inclined it may run into several figures for a dining-room suite, bedroom suite, chesterfield, etc.

On our furniture floors are many attractive pieces, that make ideal gifts. Pieces that fill in odd corners and have a useful as well as a decorative value.

A journey through our furniture department will enlighten you on the possibility of Furniture for Gifts.

WARSAW AND THE DISTRICT

Water is Very Scarce For Most Residents in This District—Out Fox Hunting, Ralph Wasson Lost His Way.

NEWS PARAGRAPHS.

WARSAW, Dec. 7.—There is a great cry for water. Some have to draw it even for house use, some few have plenty, while others can water their stock only by letting some drink alternately. Many have to drive cattle quite a distance to drink.

Lost His Way.

Ralph Wasson was out fox hunting one day last week and towards evening he someway missed his bearings. Cephas Payne found him and escorted him to his home completely exhausted at about 11 o'clock, p.m.

Girls' Hockey Team.

Young ladies from Warsaw and surrounding district propose forming a girls' hockey team. They are not fully organized yet, but are beginning their good work by giving a dance in the town hall on Friday evening, in aid of a new rink to replace the one recently burnt. These young ladies are: Misses Elsie Tucker, Alberta Darling, Emma Darling, Emma Batten, Helen Bowen, Elsie MacIlvena, Gwendolyn Simpson and Alice Payne.

In the Churches.

The Presbyterian Sunday School is preparing for its annual New Year's entertainment.

Sunday School was the only service in the Warsaw Methodist Church Sunday. The evening service gave way to the Bethel Anniversary. Bethel Church had capacity congregations both morning and evening. Rev. Hinton of Hastings took both services. He also preached at Zion in the afternoon. When Mr. Hinton inquired how many of those preesnt at the morning service had been present at the Church's dedication, about twenty answered the affirmative by standing up.

Gas From Food Presses on Heart

If food does not digest it turns into poisons which form gas. This often presses on heart and other organs causing a nervous, restless feeling. Simple buckthorn bark, glycerine, etc., as mixed in Alderika, removes foul, decaying food-matter you never thought was in your system which caused gas and pressure on heart. Alderika expels poisons and gas from BOTH uper and lower bowel. EXCELLENT to guard against appendicitis. McDermid & Jury, E. L. Payne, druggist.

GETTING READY FOR POULTRY EXHIBITION

Sixten Silver Cups For Competition This Year—Special Display by Dominion Department.

With sixteen silver cups, some of them new acquisitions offered for the first time, and a record of accomplishment that has been extending each year, the Peterboro Poultry Association is already preparing for its annual exhibition early in January. Applications for prize lists have come from as far as St. Catherines on the west and St. Jerome farms Quebec on the east. One of the features of the coming show will be a complete poultry display by the Dominion Department of Agriculture, illustrating the most approved methods of housing, feeding and generally caring for fowls. The five best laying hens in the Ottawa record of progress will be a special exhibit. Mr. Tom Darrah expects an exhibit of Cornish from the St. Jerome farms, and with the other members of the Association is looking forward to giving the Peterboro exhibition a higher position than ever among Canadian poultrymen.

COUNCIL ENDORSES LOWER SPEED LIMIT

Petition Legislature to Reduce Legal Maximum in Urban Centres.

The reduction of the speed of motor vehicles which Sir Thomas White, Minister of Finance in the Borden cabinet, is so impressively advocating in Toronto, carries the approval of Peterboro's Council. Ald. Gainey's resolution seconded by Ald. Turner, that the limit be fifteen miles an hour in cities, towns and villages was carried unanimously. Ald. Gainey first suggested ten miles and hour as the maximum, but Ald. Jones declared that this would cause congestion of traffic in the larger centres.

After using her coffin as a dining table for nearly 50 years a French octogenarian was recently buried in it.

CLEARED DEBT KEENE CHURCH

Successful Anniversary Services, Fowl Supper and Ten Cent. Tea.

KEENE, December 7. — The eKene Methodlist Church held their forty-seventh anniversary last Sunday and Monday. The services were conducted by Rev. W. R. Archer, B.A., B.D., of Stirling. His subject in the morning was "Christ the corner-stone of the Church, and what this meant to his Disciples." The subject chsen for the evening service was "The Trumph of the Gospel of Christ."

The sermons at both services were very beneficial and greatly appreciated. Rev. Mr. Archer has a forceful and pleasing delivery and delighted capacity audiences at both services.

The choir, under the direction of Rev. Andrew McLauchlin, proved a source of inspiration at both occasions by their ewll-chosen anthems.

Mrs. C. H. Byers, of Clborne, de-

Mrs. C. H. Byers, of Colborne, delighted both congregations with her beautiful solos.

Dainty Supper.

On the Monday evening the ladies served a bountiful fowl supper, including all kinds of dainties. The success of the supper was due largely to the well-organised committee, under the management of Mrs. Harrison, The young ladies of Mrs. Andrew McLauchlin's S.A.B.C. are to be congratulated on the untiring manner in which they waited on the tables. Over 350 people sat down to the well-ordered repast.

Immediately after the supper, a concert was held in the Town Hall, where an excellent programme was presented by local talent, assisted by Mrs. Clark, soloist, of Peterborough, Miss Irene Wright, elocutionist, of Peterborough, and Mrs. C. H. Rogers.

Rev. Dewey Stinson, of Westwood, took the chair, aiding greatly to the success of the event by his humorous remarks during the course of the programme.

Rev. J. Archibald, in a few words, interspersed with humour, brought fraternal greetings from the sister church, and gave the watchword for the coming year: "Speak to the people that they go forward."

A dialogue, "Madam Brooks' Parlour," by several of the young ladies was particularly well received.

The programme was as follows:

"God Save the King."
Piano solo—Rev. A. McLauchlin.
Violin solo—Mr. Alfred Fletcher.
Recitation—Mrs. A. McLauchlin.
Solo—Mrs. C. H. Byers.
Chorus—"Land of Lullaby," The Young Ladies.
Recitation—Miss Irene Wright.
Solo—Mrs. Clarke.
Dialogue—The Young Ladies and Wilfred Fletcher.
Piano duet—Mrs. C. H. Byers and Rev. A. McLauchlin.
Quartette—Male Voices.
Address of greeting—Rev. J. Archibald.
Solo—Mrs. C. H. Byers.
Violin solo—Mr. Alfred Fletcher.
Recitation—Mrs. A. McLauchlin.
Solo—Mrs. Clarke.
Piano duet—Mrs. C. H. Byers and Rev. A. McLauchlin.
"The Maple Leaf For Ever."

Ten-Cent Tea.

On the Tuesday evening following, a ten-cent tea was served from the abundance of provisions remaining from Mondoy. This event brought to a conclusion the most successful anniversary occasion in thirty years, clearing all indebtedness from the church.

The amount asked for was $250.00. The thankoffering on Sunday realised $230.00, and the proceeds from the supper, concert, and tea realised $161.00, making a total of $391.00.

A SENSATION AT GARNEAU INQUIRY

Henry Duvall Swears His Confession Was Not True

QUEBEC, 7.—(Canadian Press). —A sensation was sprung at the opening of to-day's sitting of the Royal Commission, investigating the murder of Blanche Garneau, when Henry Duval, alias Casaubon, the man who made a confession to the effect that he had been present at the murder of Blanche Garneau, while it is claimed he was in a cell in Quebec citadel at the time of crime, appeared as a witness.

Examined by Aime Geoffrion, counsel for the Attorney-General Department, Duval admitted he had said he had witnesseed the murder, but that this statement was untrue.

SOUTH AFRICA MAY GROW MUCH COTTON

This Industry Rapidly Coming to the Notice of the Whole World.

JOHANNESBURG, Dec. 7. — (Associated Press).—The cotton industry in South Africa is rapidly coming to the notice of the world, and already it is supplying a visible percentage of the cotton used in cloth manufactured in England. Experts estimate that there are four million acres of good soil available in the Transvaal, Swaziland and Zululand for cotton growing which could be made to yield a crop worth $15,000,000 annually, and at the same time solve the unemployment problem of the country.

The possibilities of cotton growing are evidenced by the fact that in 1909 the crop totalled 12,000 pounds of lint, while in 1921 it was estimated at 2,000,000 pounds.

Practically all of the crop is being shipped to England, where it finds a ready market because of its fine texture.

SPLIT IN CATHOLIC CHURCH OF FRANCE.

Marriage of Priests Question Responsible for New Church.

PARIS, Dec. 7. — (Canadian Press.) — The Catholic church in France is now faced by a split among the priesthood on the question of marriage of priests. The new National church, to be known as the French Official National Church, is to be formed, and has selected its own bishop in the person of Abbe Maxine Adrot, who four years ago married one of his parishioners. The first chapel edifice is now being prepared. Here married priests who have been prohibited by Rome from celebrating masses will carry on Catholic doctrines on an Apostolic basis, but will no longer recognize the Pope's dictation as final.

CONSTABLE IS DEFENDANT IN DAMAGE ACTION

One of the Two Jury Cases on the County Court Docket—Tax Collector's Suit.

ASKS FOR $500

Seven civic cases, of which two are on the jury list, and one criminal, comprise the docket for the December sittings of the County Court which opens next Tuesday, with Judge Huycke presiding. The jury cases are:

Scott vs. Dickson.

Robert T. Scott, of Asphodel, claims $500 and damages from County Constable William Dickson, also of Ahphodel Township, for assault, trespass and removal and conversion of a piano.

Defendant replies that on November 10, 1921, he went to Scott's in his capacity as constable to prevent the plaintiff from assaulting Mrs. Scott, and that the piano was removed by her.

Peck, Kerr and McElderry for plantiff; Gordon and O'Brien for defendant.

Green vs. Cornell.

In this action Tax Collector W. J. Green asks for $500 damages and costs from W. G. Cornell for injuries suffered in an automobile accident on June 5 last. The plaintiff was struck by Cornell's car at the corner of Simcoe and George Streets.

Defendant denies carelessness, and says Mr. Green failed to exercise reasonable care in crossing the street.

Gordon and O'Brien for plaintiff; Peck, Kerr and McElderry for defendant.

Non-Jury List.

Wilfred Hartshorn claims from D. W. Dumble $259.11 as a balance due for work, labor and materials in wiring a house at the corner of London and Reid Street.

Defendant says the charge is excessive, and that he paid plaintiff $120, believing it a fair and reasonable remuneration.

Sanderson vs. Cadd.

Alleging reckless speeding against Frederick Gadd, of the State of Michigan, H. Sanderson, of Peterborough, brings action for $500 and costs for injuries received in an accident on the Lakefield road on June 5, 1922.

The defendant lays the blame on Sanderson, and asks for $643 to cover the damage to his car, and also costs.

Dolan vs. Huxley.

This is an action involving an agreement of John Huxley to buy a farm in Douro from Wm. Dolan, both of Peterborough. One hundred dollars was paid when the agreement was executed, but defendant has neglected to pay the balance.

Dolan asks for a declaration that Huxley has forfeited all interest, right and title in the property.

Gordon and O'Brien for plaintiff; no appearance or defence by defendant.

Liquid Carbonic Co. vs. Rountree.

Possession of certain machinery and $200 damages with costs is sought by the plaintiff company of Toronto from the Knox Soda Water Works, of which defendant is owner.

J. R. Corkery for plaintiffs; C. R. Widdifield for defendant.

Payne vs. Payne.

Israel Payne, retired farmer, residing in Peterborough, is the plaintiff, and Hester Payne, his daughter-in-law, is the defendant in this action involving the will of plaintiff's wife, who left her property at 174 Aylmer Street to her husband. In 1919 the defendant, Hester Payne, and her infant daughter Gertrude came from Califotnia to reside with plaintiff until April, 1921, when "he being unable longer to live in peace and satisfaction wit\ defendant, left the premises to ...side elsewhere." Defendant, who is more than 80 years old, has continued to live in the house and refuses to give up possession of it. Mr. Payne claims possession of the land, house and furniture.

Defendant replies that plaintiff promised her the use of the house "as long as she should live." She states that she cared for him like a daughter, and spent at least $900 on the maintenance of the property and renovating it. Defendant counter claims for $3,000 and costs.

A. E. Dixon for plaintiff; Gordon and O'Brien for defendant.

LABOR SUPPORTS PLAN OF RELIEF

Considers That Government Should Assume the Assisting of New Ontario.

Immigration and Northern Ontario relief, were twin questions discussed by the Trades Council delegates last night.

It was the unanimous opinion that the provincial government should provide an adequate measure of relief and obtain the funds by a general levy upon all the municipalities. This was considered the most equitable and practical method of dealing with a problem which it was felt this province as a whole should bear.

In regard to immigration it contended that the government should proceed slowly in any broadening out of immigration. Delegates recognized the need of increased population for the expansion of the country and the development of its natupral resources, and agreed that the plan of encouraging experienced agriculturists to come to this country. It was stated that there was enough urban workers without bringing in any more, but any scheme to increase the number of farmers and farm workers would have the approval of the people as a whole.

TALK CONSOLIDATED SCHOOL, BAILIEBORO.

Majority Interested Vote in Favor of Proposition—News Paragraphs.

BAILIEBORO, Dec. 7.—On Tuesday evening a meeting of the ratepayers of school section No. 1 Bailieboro, and surrounding school sections was called in the school house to consult on the project for building a consolidated school in this village.

Mr. John Greer, one of the trustees, acted as chairman, while Mr. Carr of Toronto, was present and explained thoroughly the cost and needs of such a building in this section. All the schools in this district are old and in need of repairs and it is considered that it would be more profitable to build one new consolidated school than to put further expense on the old ones.

The majority of the ratepayers present were strongly in favor of the proposition.

A continuation school was also talked of, but the majority deemed the consolidated building more necessary. It is the general wish of the community that some steps be taken in the near future towards improving the education of the country girls and boys.

Personal Mention.

The regular meeting of the Epworth League was withdrawn on Tuesday evening on account of the disagreeable weather.

Gerald Long, who has for the past two years been residing in the west, returned home on Monday.

Although the season is getting late some o fthe farmers in this district are still ploughing, which is rather an unusual occurrence for the month of December.

Sailor Tells the Story of Loss of the Maplehurst

KINGSTON, Dec. 6. — Harry Murray, oiler on the ill-fated freighter Maplehurst of the Canada Steamship Lines, which was lost on Lake Superior on Dec. 1, carrying 11 men with her, tells a thrilling story of the tragedy. Mr. Murray, who was the last survivor to leave the doomed ship, arrived at his home here yesterday and declares that the dreadful experience through which he passed has forever cured him of his desire to be a sailor. When the disaster overtook the vessel second engineer Sauve and Murray were on duty in the engine room. The first intimation that something was wrong came to Murray when he heard the boat scraping on the bottom, and instantly two or three minor bumps were felt. Following immediately the boat gave a violent jolt and a bell was given to stop the engine but the floor of the alley way of the engine room broke through before the engines were stopped. The lifeboat from the La Portage life guard station lost no time in getting out to the Maplehurst, but the men on the boat could not be taken off the stern of the boat and Mr. Murray and several others had to make their way to the bow, struggling through the icy water on the deck which came up to their waists. The waves, which were roaring fiercely, nearly washed them overboard several times but they managed to remain on the boat and make some headway towards the bow. Murray fought his way to Capt. Menard's cabin, where he saw the captain just raising himself up from the bunk where the force of the last big wave had thrown him. As he was struggling to his feet the captain exclaimed loud enough for all to hear, "God have mercy upon us." Capt. Menard got to his feet and told Murray and the others to go out and see if the lifeboat was out there and to save themselves if possible. He saw the lifeboat as soon as he reached the bow of the Maplehurst and Capt. Tucker in command of the lifeboat hollered for the men to jump Ten jumped, one of whom, First Mate Smith of Brewers Mills, Ont., missed the boat and was drowned. Murray paid a glowing tribute to the work of Capt. Tucker and his men. He said that Capt. Tucker had made ten trips around the boat and had been calling to the men to jump. Had they all jumped, they would have all been saved. Murray said theer was no undue excitement on board the sinking vessel. The men remaining very calm and collected. In fact so calm was Wheelsman John Wood of Hamilton that he rolled a cigarette, lit and remarked that he would see the fellows up street that night. He was drowned. When Murray decided to jump from the Maplehurst he was prepared, he said, to die. He was about half drowned then and was being battered all over the boat by the waves and when he heard Captain Tucker hollered to jump he decided to take one long chance of getting the boat.

IS URGED TO BUILD TWO CAPITAL SHIPS.

LONDON, Dec. 7. — (Canadian Press.)— In the House of Lords yesterday Lord Lee, of Farnham, pressed the government to closely carry out the Washington treaty by immediately building two capital ships. He argued that under treaty the Government is not permitted to postpone the building of ships. Postponement would lead to suspicion, he said.

POSSE STILL HUNTING FOR HAMMER MURDERESS

LOS ANGELES, Dec. 7.—(Canadian Press).—A posse, headed by a sheriff, left last night for Tiajuana, Lower California, in search after Mrs. Clara Phillips, the "hammer murderess," who broke jail on Tuesday. Many rumors that the prisoner was seen in various parts of the West have proven groundless. She is believed to have used an airplane in her escape.

VESSELS CONTINUE TO NAVIGATE THE LAKES.

SAULT STE. MARIE, Dec. 7.—(Canadian Press).—With buoys removed and snow falling fast, shipping moved very carefully during the night, but most of the vessels continued. Captains of boats passing through the locks this morning said there was very little wind during the night, but they had to move very cautiously.

SWEDISH INVENTOR HAS NEW OIL LIGHT

Claims Whiter and Much Cheaper Light Than Electric or Gas.

Edison enabled us to enjoy the benefits of electric light, Count Welsbach's mantle made it possible to have the incandescent gas light, but it remained for a Swedish engineer named Johnson, now living in Chicago, to devise a lamp that would burn ordinary, everyday kerosene oil and produce a light said by the many scientists who have seen it to be whiter than electric. The lamp is as simple to operate as the old style oil lamp, burns without odor, smoke or noise and is proving a sensation where oil light is needed.

Mr. Johnson offers to send a lamp on ten days' free trial and will even give one to the first user in each locality who will help to introduce it. A letter addressd to F. E. Johnson, 246 Craig Street, W., Montreal will bring full particulars about this wonderful new lamp. He has an interesting agency offer, too.

PICTURE OVER WIRE IS THE LATEST MOVE

Another Step in the Transmission Of Pictures in Colors.

OGDEN, Utah, Dec. 7.—Another step in the development of his invention for the transmission of pictures by wireless has taken Le Roy J. Leishman, of this city to the transmission of paintings—colors and all.

Leishman, at 26, is known in this part of the country as a brilliant and successful inventor. At 15 he invented a mathematical device for architectural use. Now he has on his list of inventions a system of photography by wire or wireless which he has already demonstrated successfully.

His latest perfection has been his process of broadcasting pictures in color. He has merely added something to his original picture-transmitting apparatus.

In the transmission of black and white photographs, Leishman has adopted the photo-engraving process of taking an image of the picture through a screen of dots. This dotted picture is then sent by electric impulses over the wires or by wireless to a receiving instrument similar to the transmitter.

Following closely this system, Leishman figured there ought to be a way of sending colors by a similar method. He divided the colors in three primary groups—red, yellow and blue—as is done in color printing. By broadcasting these primary colors separately and then overlapping them wherever it was necessary, he found he could reproduce the original painting.

Leishman has already succeeded in sending color pictures by wireless. In fact, he has gone a step farther in this process by devising a receiving machine that would combine the primarily colors sent separtely so that the original picture will come out at once.

But the invention is not yet finished, says Leishman. He is working over its details with the intention of bringing out a perfect machine which can be depended upon for good results.

For this reason, Leishman is not offering his product for practical use at present.

RADIO APPARATUS ON THE FIRE EQUIPMENT

Several cities throughout the country are planning to include radio apparatus with their fires-fighting equipment.

This is a result of a practical demonstration given some time ago in San Francisco, through the streets by means of radio.

The tests were arranged by Fire Chief Thomas R. Murphy and members of the Pacific Radio Trades Association, for the benefit of the visiting fire chiefs in convention at the time. Several of the visitors were so enthused over the idea that they brought it back for adoption in their own cities.

At the San Francisco demonstration an army truck, equipped with a sending and receiving set, traveled at high speed through the streets, while it kept in constant communication with fire headquarters. It picked up the fire alarm controlled easily from the broadcasting station.

A jellyfish, weighing more than 56 pounds and measuring three feet across, was recently hauled ashore on the beach at Portsmouth, England.

WHY CHILDERS FACED DEFEAT

Was Detetmined to Fight For an Independent Ireland—Chose Death.

LONDON, December 7. — Erskine Childers, British born fighter for Irish independence, went to his death at the hands of Irish Free State executioners breathing defiance and declaring that the Irish people some day would repudiate the Anglo-Irish treaty and form an independent state of the type for which he died.

This is brought out by a last statement from Childers issued in prison.

Childer's last words were:

"I am proud to die for a principle greater than any government or any country. It is true I am English in the strict sense of the word, but I deny that accident of birth can limit the human mind and I have been ready to fight for the liberty of mankind against tyranny wherever found.

"I am condemned to death by men who were ready to condemn tyranny when exercised by the English in Ireland, but who take another view when it is a question of maintaining their own positions, positions won by betraying the cau.. for which so many of their countrymen died.

"One day the people of Ireland will awake to the fact that they have been betrayed, and that it was left to 'this damned Englishman,' as I have been called, to remain true to the principles for which the best and bravest sons of Erin have given their lives gladly.

"Friends of liberty the whole world over will realize that I have not sacrificed my life in vain.

"I face my fate proudly conscious of the great privilege that is mine, of dying for the cause of liberty, a cause more often betrayed than served these days."

Erskine Childers' American wife, an invalid, who directed from her sick bed a fruitless fight to save his life, has issued the following statement:

"He has died as I could have wished and I am prouder of him now in death than ever in life.

"If there is a God in Heaven He will take note of what has been done and in His own time will punish the guilty.

"I have but one thought now and that is that the cause for which he died should be the gainer by his death. To my countrymen and countrywomen in America I would say:

"My husband has been slain for his devotion to liberty as we Americans understand it. Republicanism, as it is known in the American states has been our ideal and we have drawn inspiration from the lives of the great men who built up the glorious republic of the west.

"Those who cherish the memory and the teachings of those great ones will not deem my husband unworthy to rank with them as one of those who have sealed with their lives their devotion to the grea. cause."

SOON CALL IN JUNK DEALERS

Time is Not Far Distant When Receiving Aerials Will Be Scrapped.

Junk dealers have a bright future ahead.

For the time is not far distant, say radio engineers, when all the wire used for aerials and the steel masts which support it will be scrapped. That's when the junk dealers will have their picnic.

This prediction of experts is based on recent developments of radio apparatus, all tending toward the elimination of the transmitting and receiving aerial.

So far as reception goes, this already has been accomplished. Several inventors have come forth with receiving sets from which no antenna is needed. Major General George O. Squier of the U.S. Signal Corps has shown how wireless messages can be received by merely plugging a connecting line into the house-lighting system. Others have gone further, entirely eliminating the receiving antenna.

This, however, has been possible so far with small sets, requiring little power for reception of mesasges at a few hundred miles. But it was not a year ago when this advance step was unknown and when the loop aerial was being spoken and in the successor to the outside antenna Now, even the loop is going and inventors are beginning to direct their attention toward the larger stations.

Millions of miles of heavy copper wire, worth a fortune, are in use over the entire world for radio transmission and reception. Supporting this are thousands of steel and other forms of masts—also a fortune in junk to scrap-iron dealers.

The great French trans-Atlantic station at St. Assize, near Paris, alone uses a total length of 40 miles of wire, weighing about 16 tons, for its aerial. On this side of the ocean, along the Atlantic coast, are several private and naval stations with huge masts and lengthy aerials. At Rocky Point, L.I., the Radio Central of the Radio Corporation of America, 72 miniature Eiffel Towers are supporting 25 miles of wire, over a tract of land measuring nearly 10 square miles.

Brother to this is another station farther down the coast, for the reception of messages from abroad. This, too, has a enormous length of wire and many steel towers—scrap iron for junk dealers.

What the substitute for these aerials will be, engineers are reluctant to surmise. But they point to the success already achieved with the smaller sets as only the beginning in a process of elimination, with the more powerful stations as the ultimate goal.

A PETERBOROUGH GIRL WINS IN COMPETITION

Sara Taylor Awarded First Prize For Letter on Social Hygiene.

Out of 200 entries in "Health Confessions of Business Girls" conducted by the Toronto Globe's Department of Social Hygiene, the judges, Dr. Edna Guest, Miss Mary MacMahan (President Business Woman's Club) and Miss Jessie M. Robson (Welfare Department of the T. Eaton Co.), have awarded the first prize ($15) to Sara Taylor, Business Secretary of the Standard Medical and Surgical Clinic of Peterboro', Ltd., Peterboro'.

The other prizes awarded are: second, ($10) Lillie Taggar, Private Secretary and Bookkeeper, 19 Browning Ave. (Pen-name, "Gashkiton" the Indian for winner.)

Third, ($5) Helena Driscoll, Trenton, Ontario. (Pen-name, "Experienced.")

Standards Used in Judging.

In making their decision the judges aimed at selecting letters containing the most valuable information on how to keep physically well and mentally alert and happy, and such as would be of most use to other girls.

Winning Points in the Prize Letter.

The prize letter was given first place on account of its key-stone points—points on which the whole fabric of a healthy, happy life must be based: One, that congenial employment is essential to health; two, that in leisure time business women should "revel" in recreation. These are obvious points, so obvious and so big that many fail to see them. How many girls realize their supreme importance—to the extent of going to considerable trouble to find work which they enjoy, even, possibly, at a lower salary? Again, how many, who could afford to, realize that money might be well and wisely spent on geeting laundry, sewing, etc., done for them, and thus buying leisure and time for self-culture and self-expression?

Suggestions Towards Health.

Miss Taylor's letter reads as follow

The first essential toward health is congenial employment. Your position must be one where you can put your heart and soul into your work. Be what Nature intended you for, and you will be happy and, incidentally, healthy. One's mental attitude toward one's work determines its effect upon us physically. Find your niche and stick. Remember, a failure in one position may make you a huge success in another. Then do all in your power to make your work count. Do not be afraid of work.

Avoid worry by being careful and by knowing every phase of your work so well that an error is rarely made, and have full confidence in yourself. Be systematic. Keep a stiff upper lip and make a joke about the things that worry you. Remember, the worries of the future may not happen, and our failures of the past are often the means to our greatest success.

Avoid constipation and its kindred ills by eating plenty of fruit, vegetables and nuts. Masticate well. Do not eat when over-fatigued, excited or over-warm. Avoid eating between meals, and too much candy, pastries and meats. Drink plenty of water.

Sleep as much as you can, consistent with your other duties, with lots of fresh air and light, warm clothing.

Dress as well as your means allow, but always in keeping with the occasion, as merely being well-dressed gives you confidence in yourself that influences the attitude you bear to your work. Dress sensibly and seasonably. Keep extra articles at office for emergency.

Cultivate a cheerful, optimistic disposition. Interest yourself in your surroundings. Do not expect too much from life, and then life will have its surprises. Loss of hope is killing. A laugh is as good as medicine. Let cheerfulness abound with industry. Health is partly a question of mind. If you think you are sick, that will help put a nail in your coffin. Get the health habit.

Make most of holidays. Forget your work and revel in doing what you please. Too many business women atetmtp to be their own laundress, milliner, dressmaker, etc., and that is where she falls down, either in health or in making a success of her vocation. That is where a man lords it over a woman, because you rarely see a man do anything much after his work is done except enjoy himself and get ready for new duties. Your time off should give you a complete change of air, food, people, ideas, etc., and make you forget you ever worked. Get all the fresh air you can. A hobby is the best preventive of your carrying your work home. It may be gardening (and nothing is better than getting down to old Mother Earth), music, painting, anything that makes you forget your work. Have as good a time as you can consistent with being in good trim for your work. Swimming, motoring, boating, reading, dancing, all in moderation, are fine, but nothing is better than a morning walk, with your head erect, shoulders back, as if you meant it. Calisthentics bring into play unused muscles.

Consult a specialist occasionally regarding your eyes, teeth, and general condition. Be ambitious, painstaking, throrough and diligent; success will be the result, and give you that feeling of satisfaction that makes for health. Be temperate in all things. Control all your emotions. Keep your mind mentally alert, for nothing is more killing than monotony. Make your word as good as your bond; be punctual.

HAPPY EVENING AT MAY'S SCHOOL HOUSE

Entertaining Programme And Exhibit of Work by School Children.

The regular meeting of the May's School, Home and School Association, was held on the evening of November 23. Following the business session, largely attended by parents and friends, the children gave an exhibit of their work done during the past year. The numerous exhibits by the girls consisted chiefly of sewing, knitting, crochet and fancy work. The boys' exhibits weer mainly wood-work, in the construction of aeroplanes and boats.

A most entertaining programme was also rendered, with J. Barnes occupying the chair, and the vocal numbers, dialogues, drills, recitations, reading and individual solos were thoroughly appreciated. Following this programme, refreshments were served.

Prizes also were awarded the children for their work exhibited as follows:

Winners of firsts—Thelma Blake, Ruth Yardley, Irene Rutherford, Edith Haw, Edith Wallwork, Charlie Allen, Ronald Yeardley, Ernest Detlor, Raymond Kitchen, two first prizes Gwen Thompson, Kathleen Orr, Gladys Langton, Winnie Wallwork, Donald Little, two first prizes Isabell Haylock, Lily Withers, Viola Deline, Jean Eastabrooke, Hilda Haylock and Eunica Barnes.

Winners of seconds — Florence Taylor, Barbara Simmons, Willner Windsor, Edith Haw, Mildred Vaff, Tommy Bufby, Elsie James, Linda Thompson, Nellie Butler, Grace Wagstaff, Dorothy Eastabrooke and Kathleen Orr who won two prizes.

Wearing Wrong Wrap

To-doys incorect fashion shows you an interesting, very stylish wrap, whose charm is quite lost on the type of woman wearing it. She is medium in stature, slightly inclined toward heaviness, and in this garment she gives the impression of a caricature. The coat is much too large in proportion to the skirt, and gives a painfully top-heavy appearance.

How different the same individual looks in the coat of dark brown Tarquina cloth trimmed with rich beaver in which the waistline is not exaggerated the lines are simple and the general effect is that of slimness and trimness.

RIBBON COMES INTO USE IN THE FASHION

Ribbon, for centuries the symbol or honor and achievement, has for the first time been made the fabric of the costume. Fifth Avenue is literally in ribbons, for the ribbon frock is seen in all smart restaurants and theaters.

Designers deny it is a whim.

"You don't call it a whim to wear a coat when it is cold" said one. "Neither is it a whim to wear a dress made of a fabric so becoming and adaptable that it be fashioned to suit any type figure."

Harry Collins designer to Mrs. Warren G. Harding, declared the mode grew out of the nature of ribbon itself.

"A designer constantly studies materials. The idea of using ribbon to make the entire costume is, in my mind, one of the happiest inspirations of recent season."

The home dressmaker can purchase for about ten dollars enough ribbon to make an entire frock. It is more practical, as well as smarter, to use ribbon about four or five inches wide than very narrow or very wide ribbon.

The lines of the seams add grace to the frock, especially when handsewn they aid the softness of the effect.

THE MAN SHOPPER IS LOST AT THIS SEASON.

The man shopper, floundering in the Christmas maze and getting gloomier every minute, may wisely consider rare perfumes in the list of things that please women.

This year, Oriental odours are finding an enthusiastic vogue.

No longer do smart women elect one unvarying perfume as indicative of personality. The dame chic now affects a number of scents, just as she has varied wardrobes to meet every occasion.

The lucky feminine recipient of one of these groups of essences will emit cries of delight.

FOR THE GARDENER.

The woman who gardens will appreciate a gift of a kneeling cushion and kit case. The kneeling cushion has a loop by which it hangs from the arm when not in use. The kit case may contain any number of useful garden implements.

HOME CIRCLE

NOVEMBER

The mellow year is hasting to its close
The little birds have almost sung their last,
Their small notes twitter in the dreary blast—
That shrill-piped harbinger of early snows;
The patient beauty of the scentless rose,
Oft with the morn's hoar crystal quaintly glassed,
Hangs, a pale mourner for the summer past;
And makes a little summer where it grows.
In the chill sunbeam of the faint brief day
The dusky waters shutter as they shine;
The russet leaves obstruct the straggling way
Of oozy brooks which no deep banks define;
And the gaunt woods, in ragged, scant array,
Wrap their old limbs with sombre ivy twine.

—Hartley Coleridge

"It cannot be that earth is man's only abiding place. It cannot be that our life is a bubble cast out by the ocean of eternity to float a moment upon is waves and sink into nothingness. Else why is it the high and glorious aspirations which leap like angels from the temple of our hearts are forever wandering unsatisfied? Why is it that the rainbow and cloud come over us with a beauty that pass off and leave us to muse of their loveliness? Why is it that the stars which hold their festival around the midnight throne are set above the grasp of our limited faculties forever mocking us with unapproachable glory And finally, why is it that the bright forms of human beauty are presented to our view and taking from us, leave the thousand streams of our affections to flow back in an Alpine torrent upon our hearts. We are born for higher destiny than that of earth. There is a realm where the rainbow never fades, where the stars will spread out before us like the islands that slumber on the ocean and where the beautiful beings which pass before us like shadows will stay forever in our presence. In these beautiful thoughts we can all find much to be thankful for, even if a vecant chair is in our home and the dark side of life seems turned toward us. They will place a silver lining back of any cloud. As a matter of fact we all have much to be thankful for.

DEFINITIONS OF HOME

Home—A world of strife shut out and a world of love shut in.

Home—A place where the small are great and the great are small.

Home—The father's kingdom, the mother's world and the childs paradise.

Home—The place where we grumble the most and are treated the best.

Home—The center of our affections around which our heart's best wishes twine.

Home—The place where the stomach gets three meals a day and our hearts a thousand.

Home—The only place on earth where faults and failing of humanity are hidden under the sweet mantle of charity.

'Be slow to act and quick to think,' is a worthy adage, if you understand it. It is just as well however, to be quick about the acting also in cases such as that of an oncoming automobile, and much better to be slower about thinking when some indiscreet bit of news comes your way. No wonder there are so many unredeemed sins in this world when the English language is such a versatile thing.

The reason here are so many sour faces, so many frowning faces so many dull faces, is because men and women consent to be crabid and petulant and stupid. The way to improve your face is to improve your disposition.

No matter how many troubles you have you can always find plenty of others who have more. They are managing to bear the burden, some of them cheerfuly, and so can you The more cheerful you are the lighter will grow the burden.

How much of your success do you owe to your wife? It is only just to own this fact before her day by day. It will make her happy and keep her youthful.

A hovel is often more a home than a palace. If the spirit of congenial friendship links not the hearts of the inmates of a dwelling it is not a home.

SOLILOQUIZING IN TOY LAND

Somebody once said that "every dog will have his day." I would consider that mine had come if, on Christmas morning, I can realize this wish! that my owner will not pluck my button eyes out; that my ears will not be pulled; that my sides will be squeezed so I can speak now and then, and that I will not be thrown haphazard around the floor. Give me a chance and I'll show my puppy love.

Everybody ought to know that a Teddy Bear likes to cuddle. Well, then, you cant' blame me for wishing Santa Claus will stick me snugly in a little stocking that belongs to a tiny baby. For I feel sure that this baby will hold me tight in its arms during the day, and nestle me under the covers at night. And for my part, I'll put my arms as far around the little one as they will reach.

You can't imagine how often I have wondered why I never was given any clothes. Why, really, I am almost ashamed to appear in the store window. Maybe that's why my one and only Christmas wish is that I will be left to a little girl who has deft fingers which will make me pretty whatchamacallems, fancy dresses, Russian boots, shiny silk stockings, and a large moving picture hat.

Most everyone agrees that there is more pleasure in planning on a thing than there is in actually having it. I have had a big share of pleasure in getting ready for my annual Christmas trip but, if on Christmas Day I can look down from Toyland and see the whole wrold smiling and happy, I will consider that the aftermath is better than the before-hand.

All monkey-business aside, I have one very serious wish for Christmas Day. First of all, I want to settle down in a home where there is plenty of music. I simply love to grab hold of the leg of a grapahone or a piano. It's so true to life for me—it would take me back to my organ grinder days. And, last of all, I want to be given to a child who will not yank my tail out.

As they lay me down on the store shelf, my eyes fall closed, and in doll slumberland I dream that two little arms pick me up and cuddle me—that soft dainty fingers run through my hair—that wee little lips kiss my cheeks—that big baby blue eyes look at me lovingly—that at all times I am treated fine. And now, all I want for Christmas is to be taken to a home where my dream will come true.

Ever since my famous fall I have been all broken up over everything. What good on earth is a shattered Humpty Dumpty, I have constantly wondered. And now comes my day! If Christmas morn finds me in a home where I can amuse the little folks, I will feel that their shouts of glee have done what "all the king's horses and all the king's men" failed to do—put me together again.

I heard the man in the toy store say that "laughter makes the world go round." And that looks like a real opening for me—especially if the man is right. I have made the little folks laugh part of the time and part of the little folks laugh all the time. And now, if I can make ALL of them laugh ALL of the time, on Christmas Day, it will be a big success to me.

Astounding Aftermath of "Sir Almeric's Little Flirtation"

"Make England Safe for Men!" Roars All London Since the King's Friend Has Been Disgraced and, as They Insist, "Vamped" and Trapped

(C) Hoppe.
Sir Almeric William FitzRoy, K. C. B., Who was Fined Five Pounds for Disorderly Conduct.

"As soon as it is getting dark,
We ups and nabs 'em in the park,
We nabs 'em in the alley ways
No matter what their speed—
If they be Dukes or rural deans,
They goes to Mr. Mead.
If they gets off, it's pretty rare;
We larns 'em not to take the air."
(Song of the Hyde Park "Bobby.")

A VENERABLE British peer, Knight Companion of the Order of the Bath and member of King George's Privy Council—an old man past seventy, silver-haired, father of a distinguished family, distinguished in years and public honors—

Arrested for flirting in Hyde Park!

Manhandled by the police!

Dragged into a sordid night court!

Subsequently convicted and fined by a testy magistrate!

And all because he passed the time of day with a young woman who smiled at him!

And the result?

The result is that the press, pulpit and public of England are thundering. The British Lion is roaring so loudly that it can be heard on this side of the Atlantic.

The old stock situation of melodrama and sentimental novel has been reversed. The liberty-loving English public is vociferously demanding protection—for men!

The newspapers of London, editorially, are pointing out that no man is safe alone in the street if a word and smile exchanged with a woman—even though the woman smile first—be taken as a signal by the police to leap upon him and drag him to jail like a criminal, irrespective of who and what he is—or she is.

"Yesterday," they say, "it was the aged and honorable clerk of the king's own privy council. Tomorrow it may be the Archbishop of Canterbury—or the King himself! If he should be indiscreet enough to go strolling in Hyde Park!

"Why, if this is permitted to go on without protest, every man in the British Isles will be forced either to lock himself up in his house, go about with an armed guard, or emigrate to Australia. A pretty and mischievous woman sees you strolling on the Mall. She smiles. You take for granted she knows you. You lift your hat. You say three words to her politely. And the bobbies seize you by the coat-collar!"

Something like this is what Sir Almeric says happened to him. One evening he had an appointment to join his wife, Lady FitzRoy at Stanhope Gate. He arrived slightly ahead of time, else the subsequent tragi-comedy would never have occurred.

Sir Almeric, aged and patriarchal gentleman, clad in evening clothes, top-hat and cloak, leaning upon his stick, passed the time by taking a turn along a quiet walk in the park. It happened to be a walk known as "Lovers Lane" because of the couples who go there to flirt and spoon—but Sir Almeric was not aware of this, he says.

Miss Ivonne, Daughter of Sir Almeric and Lady FitzRoy, a Famous Beauty and Head of the Scotch Hospital Work.

(C) Hoppe.

In Police Court the Lonely Beauty, Who Said Her Name was Dorothy Turner, Testified that Sir Almeric "Annoyed Her."

Curtis Bennett, famous British criminal lawyer, who had come to the little courtroom to defend his friend.

A lonely old gentleman, placidly strolling, waiting for his wife. A young woman seated on a park bench. She smiles. The naive old gentleman assumes she knows him. Age smiles back at youth. He engages in a few words of conversation. It is after dark. Three lurking "bobbies" leap from the shadow and arrest him. The amazed old gentleman calls it an outrage, and feebly waves his stick to emphasize his protest.

"Ha!" exclaim the cops, "He resists arrest—and with a weapon! He is wearing a top hat and cloak—and he admits that his name is Sir Almeric FitzRoy. He acts like a villain. He dresses like a villain. He has a name just like a villain in a play. He must be a villain!"

So they dragged him roughly away, taking the young woman along as a witness. That is the picture Sir Almeric draws of what occurred.

When the case was called before "Mr. Mead"—petty magistrates are not called judges in England—the police got the woman who said her name was Mrs. Dorothy Turner, to swear that Sir Almeric "annoyed her."

She was cross-examined by Sir Henry Curtis Bennett, famous British criminal lawyer, who had come to the little courtroom to defend his friend.

"Sensational collapse of crown witness" is the way the London Sunday Express described, in a front page headline, what Sir Henry did to "Mrs. Dorothy Turner."

Sir Henry had inconsiderately dug up the lady's past. He not only riddled her story about Sir Almeric but sought to force from her the admission that her name wasn't Mrs. Dorothy Turner at all—that she had been living in strange hotels, under impervious names, with impervious "husbands"—in fact that she was not a proper or reputable person or witness at all.

Said the Express reporter next day:

"Dorothy Turner broke down utterly under the searching rain of questions put by Sir Henry Curtis Bennett. For a quarter of an hour she fenced and parried, and then suddenly she turned pale and swayed.

"'Get behind her,' cried an usher.

"An attendant quickly rushed to her aid and supported her.

"She recovered from her collapse and faced the music again.

"But before Sir Henry had developed his attack, the magistrate intervened and had her withdrawn as a witness. Everybody expected that Mr. Mead would stop the case at this point, but he allowed it to go on, although the chief witness for the police had been utterly discredited."

The police were then called to the stand, and testified that they had seen Sir Almeric follow and attempt to "pick up" Mrs. Turner, had seen him speak to her, sit down beside her, talk with her. They said she had told them he "annoyed" her. Sir Almeric FitzRoy then entered the witness box and said:

"I had dined at my club in Pall Mall, having arranged to meet Lady FitzRoy at Stanhope Gate at ten o'clock. I left my club and arrived at Hyde Park corner ahead of time.

"I then went into the park. There were people about, but I paid little attention to them, as I had gone there for rest and meditation.

"I went up toward Stanhope Gate and then turned. As I did so I had the impression of the figure of a woman just stepping from the roadway on to the path abreast of the Achilles monument. I did not follow her, made no effort to overtake her, nor did I overtake her. I was never within twenty yards of her.

"I then continued my walk, and as I neared Stanhope Gate, I saw two women seated. I paid no attention at first, but as I was passing them, one of them seemed to recognize me, and I was struck by the idea that she must be some one I knew. As I got nearer I was confirmed in my belief that she must be some one with whom I was acquainted. I, therefore, raised my hat, and then discovering I was mistaken and wishing to repair the mistake by treating her with courtesy, I asked her what they were doing there so late.

"She said they were waiting to meet a friend. She went on to say he might not come—he might think it too cold. I suggested she take a walk to warm herself. She seemed as if she would do so, but then said she would wait for her friend. I then took off my hat and left her.

"I crossed Rotten Row, and seeing I had still some time to wait for my wife, I went toward White Horse Gate.

"I lighted a cigarette and remained there for eight or nine minutes. I got up and went to Hyde Park Corner. After sitting down a few minutes near the Lodge, I passed on toward Stanhope Gate. It was then between a quarter and ten minutes to ten.

"I there saw, sitting alone, as I thought, the lady I had spoken to a quarter of an hour before. I should have passed her, but she gave me a cordial smile, as if she had something to say to me. I stopped, and she said, 'I was sorry to have been so stiff when I last saw you, but there were policemen about.'

"These words were hardly out of her mouth, when two of these men appeared, and, not to put too fine a point upon it, with a use of brutal authority, they told me and this woman to stand up.

"I did so and protested with great vehemence against arbitrary interference with a perfectly harmless conversation. The policemen said I must go to the station. I said this was impossible, as I had other business. They insisted, seized my wrist with violence, and caused me very acute pain. I struggled, naturally, to free myself. I was holding a stick in one hand, and in my efforts to extricate myself, it is very likely my stick touched one of the officers."

Notwithstanding the collapse of Mrs. Turner as a witness, and the statement of Sir Almeric, the magistrate found the aged peer guilty on the uncorroborated evidence of the policemen, and fined him five pounds and costs—"to make an example."

The press and public accepted it as "an example," but not the kind of example the magistrate intended. They denounced it, and are still denouncing it, as an example of outrageous interference with personal liberty—and an example of the fact that no man can safely walk about in England without the risk of being landed in the police station if he responds politely to a woman's smile.

Toronto May Get Major League Franchise--Girls' Hockey Club

DAME RUMOR HAS IT TORONTO MAY GRAB BOSTON FRANCHISE

Syndicate From Queen City Said to Hold an Option on the Red Sox—Many Stumbling Blocks

APPLY NEXT WEEK.

TORONTO, Dec. 7.— When the annual meeting of the American League is held in Chicago next week there will be an application to transfer the franchise of the Boston Red Sox from Boston to Toronto.

This is the biggest thing in baseball that has developed in some years, so far as this city is concerned, but whether it will go through or not is another matter entirely.

The situation is very complicated.

As it stands now a Toronto syndicate has an option on the Boston club and franchise in the American League from the owners.

President Ban Johnson of the American League has given his approval to the transfer of the club from Boston to Toronto but—

This territory is the property of the Toronto ball club and the International League.

That is the big stumbling block.

The American League has power to "draft" this or any other territory according to the laws of baseball and, if the deal goes that far, may exercise their authority.

The members of the Toronto syndicate (who prefer to remain in the background for the present) are planning to play their games on the city side and if their plans go through will erect a commodious baseball stadium in a convenient location.

The Toronto ball club owners professes to know nothing about the matter and say they have not been approached in connection with the affair at all .

That is correct. The new syndicate has been working from the other end and expect that the American League will have the power to take over this territory.

The next move will take place at the American League meeting in Chicago next week.

If the deal goes through the Boston players will come to Toronto with the franchise and this city will figure in big league baseball for the first time in its history.

CHICAGO, Dec. 7.—News of the proposed option of a Toronto syndicate to take over the Boston American League Baseball Club and to transfer the team to that city was received with surprise at the American League offices here. It was said that nothing was known of this proposition. President Johnson, of the League, is in Excelsior Springs, Mo., and it was impossible to confirm the report that he had given his approval of the move.

In baseball circles here it was said that Frank Chance, former manager of the Chicago Nationals, and his friend, Barney Oldfield, the automobile racer, were on their way here from the coast, and may be coming to confer with Mr. Johnson regarding the Boston Club.

LOUISVILLE, Dec. 7.—While it has not been announced officially, it has been accepted here generally that Frank Chance, former leader of the Chicago Cubs, will come back to baseball next year as part owner and manager of the Boston Red Sox. The announcement is to be made next week at the American League meeting.

LINDSAY RINK.

Fans in Lndsay are anxious to see the hockey arena enlarged, but the idea appears to be in the distance. The rink is one of the smallest in the O.H.A. circuit, and has been doing service for many years. When first erected it was one of the largest and best east of Toronto, but times have changed, and today the rink is known as a hat box by many.

THIRTY MINOR LEAGUES PLAY

Over Six Thousand Players in Minors in Canada and United States.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., Dec. 7.—(Canadian Press)— Thirty minor leagues, embracing 206 cities and towns in the United States and Canada, qualified for membership in 1923 in the National Association of Professional Baseball League's, according to the annual report of J. H. Farrell, the Secretary-Treasurer, submitted today at the organization's annual session.

One league, the Western International, comprising four clubs, was compelled to disband during the playing season.

Out of a total of 6,460 players employed by these clubs, 3,220 were reported for outright release; 1,558 others were released by assignment of contracts, 467 were released under optional agreements, options were exercised for 297, and 211 were voluntarily retired, according to Mr. Farrell's report.

Four hundred players were suspended for insubordination, but 203 of these were reinstated within ten days. Ten were declared ineligible, for contract jumping, a marked contrast, the report points out, to a total of 338 barred for this reason in 1920.

Thirty two players were drafted—16 by National League Clubs, five by American League clubs, and 11 by members of the National Association — and $49,709 paid for their services.

Money considerations involved in various player deals during the year amounted to $2,056,246.93, the report shows.

SOFT BALL LEAGUE'S DATES OF PLAY-OFFS.

There are three games on the Soft Ball League's bill for tonight. At 7 o'clock the Rotary clash with the Kiwanis; at 8 o'clock the Gunners meet the Firemen and at 9 o"clock the big game of the evening will take place, when the Raybestos gang cross bats with the Engineer nine to decide the winner for the Industrial section.

Monday evening at 8.30 the Wildcats, winners in the Left Over group will meet the Knights of Columbus in the semi-finals. The winner of this game will meet the victor in the Raybestos-Enginner argument Thursday night at 8.30.

LOCAL GIRLS TO HAVE 2 TEAMS FOR ICE HOCKEY

Club Was Organized Last Evening at Y.W.C.A.—Efficient Coach Secured.

EVA OUTRAM PRES.

A well attended organization meeting for the Ladies' Hockey Club was held last evening at the Y.W C.A. and it was decided to have a least two teams in the city and to get in touch with other teams in the district with a view to organizing a league for the winter. Already sufficient candidates are in view to supply two full teams with players and a good list of reserves and on account of the keen display of interest in the game last season it is felt that more teams can easily be raised if necessary.

Tom Shields, a graduate of O.A.C. who has had a good deal of experience coaching hockey teams at Guelph has been secured as coach and will have the teams on the ice as soon as there is sufficient to skate on.

The following officers were elected: Honourary President, Dr. A. W. McPherson, president of the P.A. A.A.; president, Eva Outram, secretary, Alice Ebbs; treasurer, Ethel Nicol. The club will be run under the P.A.A.A. and has been promised the hearty support and cooperation of the Y.W.C.A.

Another meeting will be held in the near future to which all girls who play or wish to play are invited. A notice of the time of this meeting will be published later.

LANDIS WILL STILL HOLD JOINT MEETING.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., Dec. 7.—(Canadian Press)—There is no possibility of Commissioner Landis reconsidering his plans to hold a joint meeting of the major leagues in New York, December 14, as originally scheduled, regardless of whether there is American League participation in session. The American League club owners are scheduled to hold their annual meeting in Chicago, December 13.

Everywhere the feeling prevailed that a misunderstanding had occurred and that President Johnson probably would rescind his call for a Chicago meeting and gather his forces in New York next week.

After a brief session, the club owners of the American Association adjourned Tuesday without adopting a schedule for the 1923 campaign.

Pitcher James Bagby, a veteran with the Cleveland Americans, was sold to the Pittsburgh Nationals, but the purchase price was not announced. Bagby has been with Cleveland for five years. His best season was 1921 when he won thirty games .

MURPHY IS CHAMP.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Dec. 7.—(Canadian Press.)—Jimmy Murphy, of Los Angeles, is the champion automobiel race driver for 1922. His unofficial total is 3,480 points. Harry Hartz, also of Los Angeles, finished second, 1,502 points behind Murphy. Tommy Milton, champion last year, was third; Frank Elliott was fourth and Bennie Hill was fifth.

Murphy won practically every big race during the year. He was first in the 500-mile race here, led the way at Uniontown, Pa., and again was the leader in the 250-mile grind at Los Angeles last Sunday.

HARD ON THE PROS.

The new rule respecting professional coaches will come hard on a lot of ex-hockey players who are seeking soft jobs for the winter. The most of these coaches pulled down $50 a week, and did very little for their money.

YOUTH TRIUMPHS ON THE LINKS

Left to right: Gene Saraz en, Glenna Collett, Jesse Sweetser.

BY BILLY EVANS.

Youth reigns supreme in golf. When Glenna Collett won the recent women's national chai ionship over the White Sulphur Springs course, her victory rounded out the triumvirate of youthful national golf champions, Gene Sarazen, Jesse Sweetser and Glenna Collett.

Gene Sarazen, who has just turned 21, was the first to break into the spotlight of golfdom. Sarazen, by his remarkable victory at Chicago, over one of the greatest fields ever gathered together in a national tourney, produced the greatest golfing upset of the season.

Sarazen's victory was first regarded in the nature of a fluke. He had a good day and more than his share of golfing luck, said the experts. However it did not take Sarazen long to prove that he was more than a mere flash.

When he won the honors at the professional golfers' tourney, and later followed it up by decisively defeating Walter Hagen in a special match Sarazen proved that he was justly entitled to be ranked the greatest golfer of the year.

Sarazen's victory over Hagen really established him more firmly in golfing circles than his two other great wins. He met Hagen in the world series of golf and after trailing him for 36 holes came from behind to win.

Jesse Sweetser, who won the national amateur honors by defeating the great "Chick" Evans in the finals, scored a victory that was almost as sensational as that of Sarazen when he beat the country's best.

Sweetser was born April 18, 1902, which means that he has yet to cast his first vote. Sweetser is a student in Yale. In 1920 he won the intercollegiate golfing honors.

In many ways even more remarkable than the triumps of Sarazen and Sweetser was that of Glenna Collett in winning the national women's championship.

Only a 19 year old girl, pitted against the game's greatest players, she upset the dope of the critics by playing consistent golf that couldn't be beaten.

The final match certainly had an international flavor, Miss Collett being paired with Mrs. W. A. Gavin, one of Great Britain's leading players who has enjoyed a much wider experience as a golfer.

When asked for her golfing formula so that all women golfers might be enlightened thereby Miss Collett simply said :

"I don't know how to account for my success other than that I love the game. Some people take to golf like a duck to water, they seem to have a natural aptitude for it. Perhaps it is so in my case. That explains part of my success, the major portion of it is due to the efforts of my instructor, Mr. Alex. Smith."

Here and There in Sportdom

Boxing enthusiasts will have their innings next Tuesday night when the P.A.A.A. will put on a smoker at Victoria Hall. There is plenty of material for a big bill of matched bouts and the boxing committee is at work on a programme that should be a huge success.

The Association is sending several boxers to Toronto next week at the request of the Riverside Club who are putting on the city championships.

According to an announcement from the O.B.A.A., that body did not provide medals for the winners of the Midget series. This is the face of a clause in the constitution that medals will be presented to the winners of each series. Can you beat it? The local athletic association is asking the Ontario Association to live up to its constitution.

Hockey activities are booming, and good progress is being made with the preliminary work in connection with the O. H. A. teams. There will be one fine scramble for places on the junior team, the competition being the keenest known for many years. This is a healthy condition of affairs. Those players who do not make the team will be able to land berths in the junior city league ,and make no mistake, this latter organization will attract a lot of attention this winter.

W. A. Hewitt, in The Toronto Star, says:

Amateur athletics are certainly booming along proper lines in Ontario. Last night Oshawa and Ingersoll organized amateur athletic associations under the direction of big, substantial business men and civic authorities, to control all amateur sport in their respective towns. Big men of the communities are at last recognizing the true value of clean sport, and are taking hold and making athletics a valuable attraction to their communities. Up in London, where ice accommodation for hockey fans has long been a problem, the London A.A.A. took hold and arranged to support a ladies' team in the new ladies' hockey league. The London association is starting a starting a campaign for 5,000 members.

Normally, about 60 per cent. of the world' output of gold is produced within the British Empire, principally in South Africa.

WRITERS DISPUTE COBB'S AVERAGE

Scribes Say That Report to the Effect That They Favored Cobb is Untrue.

NEW YORK, Dec. 7.—(Canadian Press.)—The New York Chapter of the Baseball Writers' Association announces that it plans to file formal protest against the American League's action in crediting Ty Cobb with a disputed hit, thus giving the Detroit manager an average of more than .400 for the third time in his career. Formal action, it was said, would be taken by the Association at its annual meeting, scheduled for Thursday of next wtek, here

The writers object to alleged irregular procedure by which a hit was given Cobb in the official averages when the official scorer at the game, played in New York, May 15, recorded the play as an error for Scott, Yankee shortstop, and not as a safe blow for Cobb. They charge that the hit was officially credited without proper investigation and that if any examination into the circumstances was made, neither the official scorer, nor any of the writers who saw the game, were questioned by League authorities.

Reports that eleven out of twelve writers at the game voted to give Cobb a hit, instead of an error to Scott, and also that the official scorer reversed his decision in scoring the play as an error, were denied yesterday by officials of the writers' association.

The dispute arose originally from the fact that Cobb, by some sources, was credited with a hit due to the fact that the official scorer's ruling was not available at the time of the play. The official averages give Cobb a batting average of .401, while without the hit his mark is .399.

GIANTS AT SAN ANTONIO.

NEW YORK, Dec. 7.—(Canadian Press.)—The New York Giants yesterday announced that 1923 training quarters will be located at San Antonio, Texas, where the club trained last spring.

A series of exhibition games will be played by the Giants next spring with the Chicago White Sox, who will train at Seguin, Texas.

Carpentier Denies Statement That Fight Was Frame-up

Shows His Broken Hands to Back His Denial—Siki Advised to Go Back to His Home in Senegal — Investigation is Under Way.

PARIS, Dec. 7.—Georges Carpentier in newspaper interviews yesterday added his protestations to those of Francois Descamps, his manager, to the assertion of Battling Siki that the boxers' recent meeting was to have been framed.

Carpentier's chief argument in his efforts to discredit the statements of the Senegalese is to show his badly damaged knuckles and to exhibit X-ray photographs of his hands, taken after the fight, which show that all the metacarpal bones were broken.

"Does that look like a fake fight?" queried Carpentier. He also asked whether it was likely that he would arrange a frame-up for a bout he was so sure of winning that he actually lost it by over-confidence. The former champion asserted that since his defeat his one ambition has been to meet Siki again and re-establish his reputation.

An interesting scene in this latest sporting drama was enacted in the office of the newspaper L'Auto on Tuesday evening when Siki and his former manager, M. Hellers, meeting by accident, had a heated passage of words over the charges, the truth of which Hellers denies. The argument, which took place in the presence of the astounded newspaper staff, ended where it began.

Siki told L'Auto that he had been received Tuesday afternoon at the Ministry of the Colonies by an official who recommended to him that he return to Senegal. Siki did not say if he intended to follow this advice, confining himself to declaring that he planned to abandon boxing and take up some other occupation.

NEW YORK, Dec. 7.—Georges Carpentier and Battling Siki and their managers, Francois Descamps and M. Hellers, will be barred permanently from boxing in this State if the charges of alleged collusion in their recent bout in Europe are sustained, Chairman Muldoon of the State Athletic Commission declared yesterday. Siki is now under suspension here through an agreement with the French Boxing Federation.

FOUR FIVE PIN RECORDS WENT LAST EVENING

Carlton Team Was Rolling in Tip-Top Form — Shaughnessey and Marsden Set New Marks.

SOME FAST PLAY.

Four records went smash last evening in the five pin league circles when the Carlton and Ardebils teams met in the Brinton Carpet Five Pin League at the Water St. Alleys.

Shaughnessey started the epidemic by rolling a new high single of 264. Marsden was only two points behind him and set a new mark for the boys to shoot at when he rolled 670 in three games. The Carltons as a team accumulated 1142 in a single game, which is a new high mark, and continued the good work by knocking them over to the tune of 3152 for three games. For one team to break four records in one night is also a record so they have five to their credit. They fact that they won all three games is incidental and might have been taken for granted. The scores were:

ARDEBELS—
Curtis	172	125	134	431
Blackburn	146	98	130	374
Cripps	183	170	145	498

Close Race For Honors in Major League Last Season

Official Statistics Show That New York Had Highest Fielding Average in National League, While St. Louis Held Cellar Position — Two Triple Plays Recorded.

NEW YORK, December 7 (Canadian Press). — Probably the closest race in club fielding took place in the National League during the season of 1922, a margin of only 9 percentage points separating the eight rival clubs. This is shown by the official fielding averages of the league, which were announced on Tuesday night.

New York led in fielding with a percentage of .970. Chicago made the most put-outs, 4,183. Philadelphia made the most assists, 2,147. St. Louis committed the most errors, 239. Philadelphia had the most total chances, 6,504. Chicago executed the most double plays, 154.

New York and Boston each executed one triple play, these clubs being the ony ones to do so during the season. Philadelphia had the most runners left on bases, 1,151.

Following are the club averages:

Club.	G.	P.O.	A.	E.	P.C.
New York	156	4,181	2,082	194	.9698
Pittsburgh	155	4,159	1,820	187	.9696
Cincinnati	156	4,152	2,084	205	.9682
Chicago	156	4,183	2,007	204	.9681
Brooklyn	155	4,150	1,933	208	.9670
Philadelphia	154	4,132	2,142	225	.9654
Boston	154	4,038	1,901	215	.9651
St. Louis	154	4,088	1,873	239	.9610

The official individual records show that an unusually close race for fielding honours took place among the first basemen.

Less than two percentage points separated the four leading contenders among the regulars. Jacob Daubert, Cincinnati, led with a percentage of .9936, just a slight fraction ahead of Charles Grimm, Pittsburgh, with George Kelly, New York, and Walter Holke, Boston, close behind.

Samuel Post, as the first baseman for Brooklyn, on 1st May equalled the record set in 1916, by having only one put-out at first base. Both games lasted nine innings.

Of the second basemen, Rogers Hornsby, St. Louis, with a percentage of .967, although in eighth place in the list, made most put-outs, 398. Frank Parkinson, Philadelphia, had the most assists, 56—a new major league record—had the most total chances, 919, and committed the most errors, 34.

Parkinson came within one assist of equalling the major league record of twelve assists in one game by a second baseman, when, in three successive games, played on 4th and 5th September, he made eleven assists in each game.

Heinie Groh, New York, is the leading third baseman, with a percentage of 9.65. Ralph Pinelli, Cincinnati, made the most put-outs, 204, had the most assists, 350, committed the most errors, 32, and had the most total chances, 586.

Charles Hollocher, Chicago, leads the shortstops with a percentage of .965. David Bancroft, New York, made the most put-outs, 405; had the most assists, 579, committed the most errors, 62, and had the most total chances, 1,046. By accepting 984 chances, Bancroft set a new major league record.

Zack Wheat, Brooklyn, leads the outfielders with a percentage of 991. Max Carey, Pittsburgh, made the most put-outs, 449, and had the most total chances, 486, both of these figures establishing new National League records for these attempts.

Walter Henline, Philadelphia, is the leading catcher with a percentage of .983. Robert O'Farrell, Chicago, made the most put-outs, 446, had the most assists, 143, and also the most total chances, 603.

Among the pitchers, fifteen finished the season with perfect fielding records. Grover Alexander, Chicago, leads this group by virtue of accepting the most total chances. Arthur Nehf, New York, and Tony Kaufmann, Chicago, made the most put-outs, 14. Burleigh Grimes, of Brooklyn, had the most assists and the most total chances. Hugh McQuillan, of Boston and New York, committed the most errors, 9.

Following are the averages of the five leading players of each group who played in fifteen or more games:

GIRLS' BASKETBALL.

All teams wishing to enter the Girls' City Basketball League must officially register teams and players not later than Friday, Dec. 8th, with Miss Caroline Littlefield, registrar. All players must be bona fide employees or members of the organization or institution for which they wish to play. A special meeting will be held at the Y.W.C.A. on Friday at 9 p.m. All teams interested in the League should be represented at this meeting.

A Practical Gift

For Dad!

HERE'S a bright idea—give dad one of these long-range Eveready Spotlights that have been so much in demand by campers and hunters this year.

There is nothing that dad will appreciate as much as this powerful Spotlight, with its 300-foot range. Just the thing for lighting up road signs when motoring. Finding the dock, the buoy or boathouse in the dark. Fine around the house, too, lights up the garage or barn doors or the top of the roof when strange noises need investigating or the wind blows and there is doubt about the doors and windows being fastened.

See the Eveready Spotlight—the safest portable light made—at electrical, hardware, sporting goods stores and garages.

"BIG THREE" ARE LEADERS IN EAST

Projected Organization of Eastern Football Conference Again to the Fore

By HENRY L. FARRELL

(United Press Sports Editor)

NEW YORK, Dec. 5.—(United Press)—Proposals for the organization of an eastern football conference are being made again at the close of one of the most successful seasons in the history of the gridiron.

While much of its old prestige has been dimmed by the rise of other smaller institutions to place of prominence in football, the "Big Three" still has enough power and influence to be looked upon as a leader in the east.

Without Yale, Harvard and Princeton, a conference could function in the east, but it could not occupy the place that the Western Conference does in the middle-west.

Bob Fisher, the Harvard coach, speaking unofficially, has expressed a favorable opinion on the conference idea.

Bill Roper, the Princeton football mentor, says it is not necessary.

Yale, without taking an attitude against the conference, says that Yale would be reluctant to join such an organization.

However, at New Haven, it is intimated that the new football agreement entered into by Yale, Harvard and Prinecton may be the foundation of a conference of some kind in the future.

The big difficulty in organizing an eastern conference would be in defining what constituted the eastern section. While there are ten members of the Western Conference, the territory represented is much smaller than the area now generally regarded as the east.

Pennsylvania, geographically, is not exactly east, but it is considered such from a football standpoint. Georgetown is ranked both in eastern and southern circles and West Virginia is even regarded as an eastern team.

Yale, Harvard, Princeton, Cornell, Dartmouth, Pennsylvania, Columbia, Colgate, Penn State, Pittsburgh, Washington and Jefferson, Lafayette, Lehigh, Rutgers, New York University, Syracuse, Army, Navy, Carnegie, Tech, Boston College, Fordham, Holy Cross Brown, Swarthmore, and several other universities would be eligible for membership.

Try to pick ten out of that bunch and you'd have a nice little war on your hand over the one omitted.

There has also been some talk of a football "Landis" for the east, but the coaches in general scoff at the idea as being unnecessary. They point out that football is not a professional sport, that it is not threatened by commercialism and that faculty hands are the best for its administration.

Nothing seems to have been wrong with football this season. As long as there is rivalry between colleges there will be talk that So-and-So is having his expenses paid at Such-and-such and as long as there are old grads there will be some players getting a helping hand, but it not dangerous enough to be a cause for alarm.

Big universities like Harvard, Yale and Princeton, where the proceeds of football foot the bills for all athletics, hardly will encourage the idea of a conference. They are big enough to select their own opponents and they are big enough to demand only good drawing cards.

With a conference idea prevailing, any of the big elevens would have to book two or three games a year with opponents that wouldn't draw

LOVE VS. MONEY IS THE THEME OF McAVOY FILM

A strongly dramatic story, "Everything For Sale' which opened at the Capitol Theatre today, would be an entertaining photoplay under any circumstances. But with May McAvoy as the star the production takes on added interest. For without a doubt this rising young actress leads the field in sympathetic emotional portrayals of real heart interest. She demonstrated this fact in "Sentimental Tommy" and again in "A Private Scandal" Realart's recent successful production.

The part of Helen Wainwright in "Everything For Sale" however, is much different from the shy scotch heroine of "Sentimental Tommy" or the little French "Jeanne" of "A Private Scandal." In this play we have a strictly modern young lady just home from a finishing school; home and face to face with the modern doctrine that "Everything's For Sale"—even love. It is the girl's battle with this idea—and the establishment of a premise that love cannot be sold but must be given aawy, that furnishes ample excuse for an absorbing plot which has not only actual physical thrills but also some very psychological intepretation.

Edward Sutherland and Richard Tucker are excellent as the contrasting type of lovers; one of the wealthy man, confident that money alone talks; the other, an impulsive youth of the true romantic spirit. Kathlyn Williams is, as usual, artistically at home as the worldly aunt who tries to push the girl into a loveless marriage with a rich man. Others in the cast are Edwin Stevens, Dana Todd, Jane Keckley and Betty Schade.
